PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1888: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good.

Dr. J. N. Chaney, a well-known physician, writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 116 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

MARITIME NOTES.

The sloop yachts Clytie, of New York, and Daisy, of Boston, were in the lower harbor on Monday.

The schooner John Lenthall, at Commercial wharf, is having her mainmast spliced, and Mr. Charles Benson is fitting her with partially new rigging.

The schooner E. A. Creed, Raymond master, took a miscellaneous cargo to the Isles of Shoals on Saturday, and arrived in again on Sunday.

The fishermen report the dogfish as having struck in on the coast in immense [illegible]

The steamer Cocheco, with the Dover city government and invited guests aboard, touched at Jones' wharf Monday morning on its way to the Isles of Shoals and the fishing grounds. There were seventy-five persons in the party.

Messrs. Mitchell, Tobey & Co. of Kittery Point on June 25th put the twine on their weir, and on the 1st inst., sold to Mr. J. H. Jameson twelve barrels of small mackerel.

The training ship Portsmouth will come up to the navy yard to-day. Three companies of naval apprentices from her will take part in the parade on the 4th.

Elvin Newton, now fishing at Lunging island, Isles of Shoals, sold last week to Georgesmen for bait about 162 barrels of alewives, at prices averaging $2.50 per barrel.

A stick twenty inches in diameter and forty-two feet long was hauled from Daniel Mason's dock on Friday last to Commercial wharf, where it is being converted into a mainmast for the schooner John Lenthall by Mr. Augustus Stevenson.

On Sunday, the 1st inst., Mr. Joseph H. Jameson bought fares of mackerel from the following-named vessels, all of which belong to Lanesville, Mass: Gypsie Queen, 700; Venus, 1000; Senator Morgan, 800; Island Home, 700; White Swan, 500; I Am Here, 1100. Mr. Jameson also bought from the Shooting Star, of Rockport, 900 mackerel, and from the Lillie Clark, of this port, 300. The price paid was $8 per hundred, by count. All these fish were taken off Cape Porpoise on Saturday evening, at which time the fishermen say the water seemed to be fairly alive with the fish, and they expected to find every mesh of their drag-nets occupied by mackerel next morning; but the heavy thunder storm which came on about nine o'clock, and which was much heavier there than here, seemed to frighten the fish, for they disappeared all at once. Why a mackerel should object to being struck by lightning is not plain; it cannot be half so bad as to be fried in a pan of hot pork fat on a stove with the thermometer at ninety-eight in the shade.

Ten young men of Port Chester, N. Y., went sailing last Saturday evening in a schooner boat. The boat was found in Long Island sound on Sunday bottom up, and it is supposed the men were all drowned.

MATTERS IN YORK.

YORK, ME., July 2d.

The Garrison house opened on June 15th, and now has a few guests. A large number is expected soon. Messrs. Sanborn & Preble, the proprietors, are anticipating an extra profitable season. This house, like wine, improves with age, each year adding to its popularity as a pleasant resort.

The general opinion is that York Harbor and Beach as a summer resort will this season eclipse all former records, and large preparations have been made all along the coast from the Harbor to Union Bluff.

W. L. Mitchell got a blacked eye while shoeing a horse the other day. Al. Thompson, the justly and highly celebrated meat and provision vender, also got a blacked eye while he wasn't shoeing a horse—albeit the horse was at fault, or rather the driver, in driving the horse. Arnica for two.

One of the ex-postmasters and an ex-school teacher truthfully say that the teacher in this district (No. 13) has taught "a common sense" school in the term which closed on Friday last. Miss Gertrude Junkins, above alluded to, is a daughter of C. W. Junkins, Esq., one of the selectmen, and as this was her first attempt at teaching, it was feared by many who had the interest of the school at heart that the committe had made a mistake; but now every one of the doubtful ones feels that it was a happy mistake. She has taught the children things they ought to know—about their own geographical location and surroundings, the population of their own town, (a question which is seldom thought of by teachers,) and many other questions of local interest. What does a ten-year-old child know or care to know, ever, about the boundary of Hodulula or Guinea? Miss Junkins, though of tender years, has made a record that will place her in the list of teachers of whom York may justly be proud.

The wires for the telephone exchange, reaching from Plaisted's store at the Corner via York Village (Walker's store, "Central") and York Harbor to York Beach, Concordville, Union Bluff, Doverville, etc., are nearly all strung. Instruments will be put in forthwith. We are to have full and free communication with your city.

A flag raising, "Harrison & Morton," will take place at the Corner this week. Thousand of dollars (more or less) of fireworks will be used on the occasion; speech-makers not yet announced.

S. H. Williams & Son will also run out a flag at the village bearing the same inscription. J. Howard Junkins, Esq., at the Corner, is the painter.

The building at York Harbor which was last year occupied by Robeck as an ice cream saloon has been opened by W. S. Putnam, Esq., and a handsome sign eleven feet long, painted by Plaisted, bearing the words "Putnam's Express. Jackson & Co's, and Adams' Express Agency," in large, bold letters, has been put out. Putnam has also put in a fine new soda fountain from A. D. Puffer & Sons, which together with a fine line of confectionery, cakes, etc., will be in charge of Howard E. Plaisted, late em-awake, go-ahead, and mind-your-own-business sort of a chap, and, without speaking disparagingly of any of his predecessors as expressmen, he makes one of the very best of men in that business. He is honest, trusty and safe, and is every day winning for himself lasting esteem as a public servant.

Drinking Ice Water.

That cool, refreshing drinks in warm weather are delicious is undeniable. That drinking ice water in copious draughts when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is deniable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhoea or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

New Hampshire Items.

The post-office, several stores and the railroad station at North Conway were burglarized by professionals on the night of June 28th.

Miss Ella Cook of Nashua has accepted the position of teacher of natural science, Latin and mathematics in Quetitska Institute in San Francisco.

Edward Sewall of Tilton hanged himself in Gilmonton, June 25th.

Thomas Stanton of Great Falls came near dying the other day from the effects of drinking a quart of whiskey on a wager. For twenty-four hours his conditions was critical.

Parker E. Tebbetts of Dunbarton recently bit an apple that had been filled with strychnine for the purpose of killing wood chucks. He discovered his mistake before it was too late, and serious consequences were averted.

George Corey, who went to Boston from Franconia about two years ago, to work on the Old Colony railroad was run over and had both legs cut off a few days since.

Rev. I. B. White, formerly pastor of the Congregational church at Newmarket, has accepted a call from the Congregational church in Scotland, (Bridgewater,) Mass.

Ossian Mansfield of Keene hung himself on the night of July 1st. He was fifty years old.

The President's Letter of Acceptance.

President Cleveland, in his speech accepting a renomination for the presidency, said some things that were out of keeping with what he has tried to make the people believe is his own idea of his official position. He said nothing about the issues before the country, made no mention of the tariff in regard to which he was so eager to express himself a few months ago, but he hinted at resistance to encroachments on his prerogative and intimated that under Presidents Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur the office of president had become a perversion of all it ought to be. Quoting the language of the man who spoke in the great crisis of the nation of a government of the people, for the people, and by the people, he had the impertinence to couple with the language a slur upon all the republican administrations that preceded his own. He prated of the moorings being loosened, of abuses and extravagances in the management of public affairs, and of reckless and shameless partisanship, as though the country were on trial, and he about to pronounce sentence. The president is mistaken. He has been on trial, and the people are about to sit on him in judgment.—Dover Republican.

Leading physicians recommend Preston's Elixir.

The supreme court of Massachusetts has refused a new trial to Mrs. Mary Jane Robinson of Somerville, convicted of murdering her sister's husband, Prince Arthur Freeman, in 1885, and she has been sentenced to be hung November 16th. Mrs. Robinson is the woman charged with poisoning the late Oliver P. Sleeper of Rye, as well as about all her own relatives.

The York county prohibitionists held a convention at North Berwick last week, and made the following nominations: For senators, S. J. Locke, Buxton, C. W. Murphy, South Berwick, R. G. Watson, Limington; county commissioners, Da[illegible] judge of probate, J. M. Marshall Buxton; register of probate, Samuel W. Jones, Lebanon; treasurer, Geo. E. Meserve, Hollis. Volney B. Cushing, prohibition candidate for governor, addressed the convention in the evening.

The Sunday Call of Paterson, New Jersey, gives a picture of William H. Walker's carriage repository in that city, and a sketch of his business career. Twenty-two years ago Mr. Walker commenced the business of wagon and carriage building in this city, but three years later removed to Paterson, and started the same business there on Grand street, himself and one assistant occupying the lower story of a building thirty-three by twenty-five feet on the ground, and two stories high. In a short time his custom so increased that he employed more help and took the second floor of the building, and at the time the article was written he was employing twenty-three skilled mechanics, and occupying a building 100 feet by twenty-five on the ground and three stories high, and found that too small for his business, to relieve which he had secured the building on Market street of which the picture was given.

It is reported that a strong stock company is to be formed to sink an artesian well at York Harbor, and construct a reservoior on the top of Capt. Peter Young's hill, to supply the whole of York Harbor with water.

The water system at Union Bluff, York, is now in operation, the pipes having all been laid.

The work of building the union chapel at York Harbor was commenced last week. The report at one time was that no work would be done on it this year, but this determination has evidently been reconsidered. Mr. Edward Young, of York, is the master builder.

On Wednesday, June 27th, Mr. Charles Donnell of York Harbor caught two halibut, one weighing 200 lbs. and the other about fifty. A still larger one was hauled up into sight, but got away.

Dr. Wm. L. Hawkes of York Harbor has recently had an artesian well put down on his premises, and at a depth of fifty feet it struck an abundant flow of good water. The man who put down the well for Dr. Hawkes has commenced a similar job for the Marshall house.

Thaddeus B. Winthrop, aged seventy years, dropped dead at Monmouth, Me., June 29th.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, sores breaking out on them in various places. My little boy, three years old, has been a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. I was advised to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we have all taken it. The result is that all have been cured of the scrofula, my little boy being entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

The Opening of the Campaign.

To open the campaign with any hopes of speedy success, attack the enemy, malaria, before it has a chance to intrench. An obstinate foe, twill prove if you don't go right at it. If you are prudent, too, you will have fortified, upon the first intimation of its presence in your neighborhood. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the medicinal ammunition that you require. Every form of malarial fever yields to this fine preventive and remedy. For constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia, nervousness and kidney troubles it is no less effective. Residents of malarial localities, and persons sojourning in or bound for the great west, should select this medicine as a means of defence against the frequent visitation of miasma. Those in delicate health, the aged and the enfeebled, should in every instance restore to this signal invigorant. Use it for weak nerves.

A bridge is to be built over the Straits of Messina, to connect Sicily with Italy. The place selected for the great undertaking is where the channel is two and a half miles wide, and three hundred and sixty-one feet deep. Two piers will support the viaduct of steel rails at a height of three hundred and twenty-eight feet above the water.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla operates radically upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing and invigorating. As a safe and absolute cure for the various disorders caused by constitutional taint of infection, this remedy has no equal. Take it this month.

Coal is supplied to Salem, Mass., for the public schools, as follows: Seven hundred and ninety-two tons of furnace and egg, and 800 tons of stove and chestnut, at $6.08 per ton; 600 tons of stove and egg, at $5.85 for stove and $5.70 for egg; and about 300 tons of stove for $6.25 per ton.

W. H. Pattee, salesman for Esterbrook & Eaton, Washington St. Boston, writes: "It gives me real pleasure to say that Adamson's Botanic Balsam cured me of a severe cold, to which I have been subject, especially during the winter months, and I have in many instances recommended it to my friends, and they have all been benefitted by its use. I think it has no equal as a cough mixture."

Says the Philadelphia Press: "The Chicago ticket will carry New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana and the other Northern States. That will do, but doubtless some two or three Southern States will insist upon joining the procession."

We take much pleasure in recommending the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer as safe and reliable for estoring gray hair to its natural color.

The Italian Society of Emigration of New York city has issued a circular appealing for aid for Italian emigrants who are constantly arriving there and many of whom are unable to obtain employment. The society state that an effort is being made to keep out the unnaturally heavy tide of emigration, which is the result of trickery. According to the circular, the situation is really a critical one.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered with scrofula; sores broke all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulpher Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. Dale, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Ex-Senator McDonald, of Indiana, democrat, says: "General Harrison is a lawyer of great ability, intergity and personal honor. His public life has been free from stain, and his domestic existence is a model for men. The democrat who attacks General Harrison on personal grounds will commit a grave error."

A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. Geowtjan89

JEWS OF MIXED BLOOD.

Changes of the Original Stock—Tribes of Pseudo Jews.

Since M. Renan, some three or four years ago, expressed his doubts as to the purity of the Jewish race, the hitherto received opinion on that subject has been somewhat shaken. The question, though unscientifically raised, can only be scientifically settled; but we may point out, as a matter of popular interest, that even if the main body of the Hebrew people has preserved an untainted lineage, which is very likely, it has at any rate acquired a considerable fringe of indubitably spurious elements. This fringe is composed partly of pseudo Jews and partly of crypto Jews, the former being mainly descendants of Gentile proselytes openly professing Judaism, and the latter consisting of more or less sophisticated descendants of Jews outwardly conforming to the dominant religions of the countries in which they live, but secretly observing their ancestral faith. These two divisions of what may be termed the borderland between the Jewish and the Gentile worlds have again smaller borderlands or fringes of their own through which they merge into one another.

As throwing light on the spasms of proselytism with which, in opposition to their traditional practice, the Hebrews have occasionally been seized, these pseudo Jews are of considerable interest to the student of religious history. The largest community of them are the Falashas of Abyssinia, numbering, it is said, between 200,000 and a quarter of a million souls. Although they pretend to be descended from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, ethnologists have failed to discover among them any traces of a Hebrew type. That originally they were strangers in the land is, however, shown by their name, which means "immigrants."

Besides the Falashas, there are several tribes in Africa professing Judaism, or claiming descent from Jews, who, in so far as their ethnological type is a matter of doubt, must also be regarded as belonging to the fringe of Jewry. Among the Beni-Mzab, on the frontiers of Algeria and Tunis, are several pseudo Jewish clans, and all over the Sahara the Daggatoun boast of a Hebrew ancestry while professing Mohammedanism. A Moorish Jew, who wrote an account of the latter people, explains their name to mean "Jews who have changed their faith," a doubtful piece of philology which has, however, its historical value.

In Madagascar and on the Loango coast are two further small contingents of pseudo Jews, the "Zafy Ibrahim" or "Progeny of Abraham," and the "Mavamba," or "Judeos." The former do not differ in their physical type from their neighbors, and their Hebrew traditions and observances are, perhaps, only a remote vibration of the Judeo-Arabic influence. The Loango "Judeos" are a superior kind of negroes, alleged to be descended from survivors of the 2,000 Jewish children who, in 1493, were torn from their parents by Don Joao II, of Portugal, and transported to St. Thomas.

Asia is full of varying degrees of the fringe of Jewry, if the traditions of some scores of peoples and tribes are to be trusted. The whole continent has proved a happy hunting ground for the amiable enthusiasts whose game is the Lost Tribes. Of actual pseudo Jews, as we have defined them, there are, however, only a couple of specimens—the black Jews of Cochin and Malabar and the Jews of the interior of China. Both profess fairly orthodox forms of Judaism, and both assert that they are of pure Jewish descent; but the investigations of competent observers have shown the former to be of Hindoo race, while the little we know of the latter seems to indicate that they are Mongols, with a slight admixture of Hebrew blood.

Of the Chinese Jews we have no very precise or reliable accounts. They are said to be of a very strong Mongolian type. On the other hand, the records prove them to have been at least in contact with pure Jews; and it is probable that they are a cross between these Jews and native proselytes. Crosses of this description are usually infertile—a fact that goes far to prove the purity of the main body of the Hebrew race—and the so called Chinese Jews present all the unfruitful characteristics of hybrids. In this respect they resemble the two great bodies of pseudo Jews which are to be found in Europe, the Karaites of South Russia and the Sephardim of England and Holland.

Historically the Karaites are even more interesting than the Falashas. They are a remnant of the Finnish kingdom of the Khozars, which was converted to Judaism in the Eighth century, and which for a time disputed the sovereignty of the east with the emperors of Byzantium.

That the Sephardim of England and Holland are not pure Jews is a statement which may cause some surprise. While, however, the Sephardim of Italy and the east are mostly descendants of the undoubtedly pure Spanish Jews expelled from the peninsula in 1492, the bulk of those in western Europe are the offspring of Marranos, or crypto Jews, who outwardly conformed to Christianity in order to escape the edict of expulsion, and who, to hide their religious identity more effectually, gave up their racial distinctiveness. There is scarcely a Marrano family which cannot be proved to have received some infusion of Gentile blood; and it is a singular fact that in England at least, while the Ashkenazim, or central European Jews, show an exceptional fecundity the Sephardim are gradually dying out.—St. James' Gazette.

Prettiest Sight in Mexico.

The prettiest sight in Mexico is the Paseo de la Reforma, stretching, tree-lined on either side, from the statue of Carlos IV to the castle of Chapultepec, when, of a morning, scores of riders, many of them in picturesque Mexican costume, dot the long roadway, the trappings of the horses flashing in the sunlight and the mettlesome steeds giving animation to the scene. Many rich Mexicans use saddles, costing $500, silver mounted and inlaid beautifully. Hats with gold braid, costing $100 and more, are frequently worn, and the tight fitting black trousers with silver buckles up the outer seams, and the short charro jacket, make up a riding costume unique in beauty and elegance.—Cor. Boston Herald.

Methods of a "Guarantee Company."

"We give our heaviest bonds for administrators of estates. We have given them as high as $700,000. Here, however, we absolutely secure ourselves. The bond covers the money and securities belonging to the estate, and these we lock into a drawer in some safe deposit company's vault. The drawer has three keys, one of which is held by us, one by the administrator, and one by the safe deposit company. If it is necessary to take anything from the drawer, not less than two men—generally three—go from this company with the administrator and his lawyer. The securities are all taken out upon a table, and after the required paper is found they are carefully put back.

"We used to send but one of our men, but an unfortunate incident taught us the value of greater caution. One of our principal officers—I will not say who, because he is sore about it yet—went down to the safe deposit company with the lawyer employed by an administrator. While they were there the lawyer stealthily abstracted a package containing $79,000 and put it under his coat. He is now in Mexico, out of the way, and we have settled the account, which cost us in the aggregate about $100,000. Since then we have taken the greatest possible care. All money deposited in different companies is in the joint name of our president, vice president and treasurer, and their three signatures are necessary to get it out. We consider ourselves absolutely safe now. In cases of bonds over $25,000 we reinsure in other companies here and in England."—New York Mail and Express.

The Charm of Femininity.

The increasing disinclination of our desirable young men to marry worries fond mammas with daughters on their hands, and it is a problem which they have been unable to satisfactorily solve. The most popular reason given is that women are extravagant, costly luxuries, in which the average man hesitates to indulge. In some cases this may be true; but generally speaking this is rank nonsense. The men of the period may think the "horsey" girl jolly fun, but they do not want to marry her. Men of brains like a set to with a woman of opinions, but they do not want that bill of fare for breakfast, dinner and supper. The student knows well enough that algebra and isms are worthless to keep household machinery in good working order.

No! Every one of them will pick out for a wife the clinging, modest, womanly woman, who will be content (or affect to be) to shine by reflected light. No man would willingly go on record as Mrs. So-and-so's husband. Now we may as well admit that young women are willing and anxious to secure husbands, wherefore there's no use in denying that it is worth while for the girls of the time to cultivate that otherwise definitionless charm which is understood by the word femininity.—Detroit Free Press.

Some Names That Mislead.

The tuberose is no rose, but a species of olyanth.

Pompey's pillar had no historical connection with Pompey in any way.

Whalebone is not bone, and is said not to possess a single property of bone.

Turkish baths did not originate in Turkey, and are not baths, only heated chambers.

German silver was not invented in Germany, and does not contain a particle of silver.

Black lead is not lead at all, but a compound of carbon and a small quantity of iron.

Brazilian grass never grew in Brazil, and is not grass; it is nothing but strips of palm leaf.

Burgundy pitch is not pitch, and does not come from Burgundy; the greater part of it is rosin and palm oil.

Sealingwax does not contain a particle of wax, but is composed of Venice turpentine, shellac and cinnabar.

Cuttlebone is not bone, but a kind of chalk once inclosed in the fossil remains of extinct specimens of cuttlefish.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Money Saved by Sanitation.

Medical men have long been familiar with the fact that sanitation has been a saving to the community at large in doctors' bills, in nursing and even in days of labor to the industrial classes. But it has been difficult to put results into figures, so as to impress the public mind. Mr. Brudenell Carter attempted this in his inaugural address to the College of State Medicine. Every case of fever, he calculated, cost the community $10. The reduction in the annual death rate from fever to 484 per million from the 1851–60 rate of 908 per million represented a total saving of $1,500,000, "but of this no one seemed conscious;" while the annual cost of scarlet fever at the present time was $3,000,000 a year. If, therefore, we could trace scarlet fever to a definite cause, as a bovine disease communicable by milk, we could adopt precautions which "would save the country every year somewhere about half as much money as the recent conversion of stocks, besides much misery." Here is new light upon disease. It is increasingly preventable, and as we reduce its virulence and range we save money.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Bahamas' Sponge Exchange.

The greatest sponge exchange on this continent is not an imposing sight to one fresh from Wall street. It is merely a large shed without side walls, and open to the public generally. Along the sides are scattered huge piles of the elastic protoxoans strung together in strands. The building is opened at 9 o'clock in the morning, the members of the exchange being promptly on hand. There are no tickers, no splendor of plug hats, no Babel of shrill voices, no excited groups. The brokers merely deposit bids with the clerk of the exchange, and at noon the highest bidder on any one cargo has the privilege of buying that cargo. Notwithstanding the primitive provincialism of their methods, Nassau brokers are keen business men. They understand "gloves" and "Key Vesters" as well as a Wall street man understands puts and calls, and they often bid within twopence or threepence of one another on cargoes ranging in value from £80 to £125.—Nassau Cor. PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. F. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1888: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good.

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a well-known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 116 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

A Little Improvement.

The secretary of state has called the attention of the British minister resident at Washington to the case of the American ship Bridgewater, unlawfully seized by the customs officials of the Dominion of Canada a year ago, and detained for eighty-one days at Shelburne, Nova Scotia. The owners of the Bridgewater were confident that the Canadian government would make compensation, as the illegality of the seizure and dention were admitted, and the ship unconditionally released by the order of the government of the Dominion, after the rejection by the owners of the Bridgewater of a proposition for a release conditional upon promising immunity for the seizure and detention. The Dominion officials, however, decided not to entertain the claim, on the ground, purely technical, that the owners had no remedy at law against the Dominion officials. The claim was presented to the state department a few weeks ago, and has been promptly presented to the British minister for settlement. To those who, from the action taken by Secretary Bayard in previous cases of outrage against American vessels by petty British officials, expected he would offer an humble apology for the insolent entering of a British port by an American ship in distress, his action in this case is an agreeable surprise.

PERSONAL.

Paymaster H. Trumbull Stancliffe, U. S. N., formerly attached to this navy yard, now on duty as assistant to the paymaster general of the navy at Washington, was in this city on Monday last, on his way to Rangeley lakes, Me., to pass a short leave of absence.

Christopher E. Rymes, Esq., of Somerville, Mass., was in this city on Tuesday, on his way to the Isles of Shoals, Frank Emerson of Farmington is making his annual 4th of July visit to Portsmouth. He came down by private conveyance and describes his journey as very pleasant, the scenery being very delightful at this season.

Why G. F. Morse is a Lucky Man.

Mr. G. F. Morse, of 886 Harrison ave., Boston, Mass., is a lucky man. He held one-tenth of tick. et No. 19,926, which drew the second capital prize of $50,000 in the drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery held on the 10th inst. To a reporter Mr. Morse said: "It is true that I drew $5,000 in the recent drawing of the Louisiana lottery. I held one-tenth of ticket 19,926. This is the second time I have been lucky," continued Mr. Morse. "I also drew $5,000 last December. In that drawing I held one-twentieth of the $100,000 prize, ticket No. 8,180."—Boston (Mass.) Record, April 28th.

obnoxious draughts when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is deniable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhoea or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

A new number of "The Season" is at hand as usual. "The Season" is a first-class ladies' fashion magazine, each number containing about 170 illustrations of the newest Paris fashions and the most elegant designs in fancy work, embroidery, crochet and needle-work; plain sewing and lace work; lace stitch on muslin, cambric and tulle, etc.; Irish point laces, darning on tulle, filagree on linen, etc.; a variety of designs in rug-work, tatting netting, knotting and frame-work, pillow lace; paper, wool and feather flowers; mosaic patterns and fancy work in all its branches; three large colored plates; two historical or national costume pictures; a pattern sheet with about twenty flat paper patterns; a richly illustrated review of novelties; initial letters, monograms and alphabets, etc. The information given is clear, plain, comprehensive and practical. Price, each monthly part, only thirty cents. Of newsdealers.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, ME., July 3d.

Yesterday was so cool one might have thought we were on the edge of autumn instead of summer, but to-day we have real July weather.

The farmers are beginning haying this week. The hay harvest promises fair.

Summer boarders are coming quite fast. Hotel Park Field has about thirty boarders to-day.

Pond lilies and roses are coming into bloom. The Baker pond has a good many lilies in it this summer.

Never before have there been so many pretty gardens in Kittery Point as this year. We are glad to see the increasing interest in flowers, indicating a like advancement in refining influences.

On the new road, Oakland avenue, is a beautiful place in summer. It is the house occupied by Manning Phillips. The house is situated on a little elevation that gradually slopes to the waters of Chauncey's creek. The grassy lawn in front of the house is one mass of white daisies, and out each side of the house and behind it are several varieties of trees. The road is bordered on both sides with hosts of daisies and clover blossoms. The white clover is more beautiful this year than ever.

Two cows were thrown from the end of the railroad bridge at Crockett's Neck crossing, Saturday night, by the in-coming train, and one belonging to James Lewis was instantly killed. The other, owned by Solon Frisbee, was so injured it is doubtful if she lives. The cows got out of the pasture during the afternoon, and were feeding by the crossing when the train came along, and being frightened by the train ran out on the track.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Warmer, fair weather, southerly winds.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

To-day being a legal holiday, we shall issue no Chronicle to-morrow.

Cricket game to-day on the grounds at Frenchman's lane, between the Mystic club of Medford, Mass., and the Portsmouth club; wickets pitched at 11:00 A. M.

Base ball at the Plains at 3:00 P. M., between the Electrics and a nine from the electric light station.

At four o'clock P. M., play will be called on the South street grounds, between the Dovers and the home club. The Portsmouths have been playing a splendid game all the season, and the grounds should be packed this afternoon in recognition of their fine work.

The open air concert on the Parade by the First Regiment band, Tuesday evening, drew a throng of people to the vicinity. The band stand was illuminated by an electric light suspended over it, and about nine o'clock the boys started a bonfire in front of the North church. Crackers, big and little, torpedoes and other instruments of racket, added to the noise if not to the music. The band played till half-past nine, but the nine o'clock bell thinned the crowd out wonderfully.

Bonfires were kindled on Marden's hill, South street, and at Christian Shore, about midnight, and the schoolhouse bell at the Shore was rung according to the boys' regular custom, notwithstanding the careful locking up of the building and the carrying off of the key.

A tin horn may not make so much noise as a bunch of cannon crackers, but it lasts longer, provided the boy's wind holds out.

A somewhat unusual feature of the celebration on the night of the 3d was the presence among the throng on the Parade of fifteen or twenty well dressed and nice appearing young girls, armed with a tin horn apiece, on which they blew as vigorously and continuously as any of the boys, up to midnight. They were evidently out for an evening's innocent lark, and were not in the least molested or annoyed by the male celebrators.

WOLFEBORO' RAILROAD.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wolfeborough railroad was held in this city on Tuesday. Gen. Samuel C. Lawredce, president of the corporation, occupied the chair. The following-named gentlemen were unanimously elected directors: Sam'l C. Lawrence, Medford, Mass.; Walter Hunnewell, Boston; Frank Jones, Portsmouth; John W. Sanborn, Wakefield; Joseph L. Avery, Blake Folsom, Wolfeborough; Amos Paul, South Newmarket.

ACCIDENT.

William Trueman, a young man living on Union street, was quite badly hurt Tuesday evening by the explosion of a cannon cracker in his hand. The hand was damaged considerably, and he received an ugly wound on the chin. He was taken into the police station in a half-conscious state, and City Physician Clark sent for, who said the man was seriously injured. He was taken home about midnight in a wagon, without having fully recovered consciousness, Dr. Clark having been in attendance upon him for three hours or more.

The concert in Music hall by the Hungarian band, Monday evening, was a delightful entertainment, but was attended by only a small audience.

The Rockingham national bank paid a dividend of four per cent on the 2d inst.

Dr. S. F. Ham, dentist, of Hotel Bristol, Boston, and this city, has removed his residence and office from Pleasant street, opposite the Rockingham national bank, to No. 13 Court street, the house recently occupied by Mr. George B. French.

GENERAL ORDER No. 3 — JUNE 29th.

The local organizations will assemble at their several headquarters at the hour designated by commanding officers. Line will be formed at 9.30 o'clock A. M., July 4th, on Congress street, right resting on Pleasant street. The column will march through Market and Deer streets to depots to receive visiting organizations.

ROUTE FROM DEPOT.

Depot to Bridge street, Bridge to Middle, counter-march on Middle at C. H. Mendum's residence, and halt with right resting on Haymarket square. (Ten minutes for rest. Residents on Middle street are requested to kindly furnish water.) March resumed to State street, State to Pleasant, Pleasant to Washington, Washington to State, State to Pleasant, Pleasant to Congress, Congress to Islington and Goodwin Park.

After the exercises at Goodwin Park, the route will be from Goodwin Park to State and Middle to Court street and collation tent in rear of Court house, where the parade will be dismissed. The several organizations are then to be considered in charge of their commanding officers.

GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.

NOTICE TO VETERANS.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 29, 1888.

At a meeting of this Post held on the evening of the 27th instant it was voted to invite all Veterans to join in the procession and be present at the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, on the 4th of July.

M. M. COLLIS, Adjutant.

THE MONUMENT.

At a meeting of Storer Post on the 27th ult., the following resolutions were adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas: In 1886 the Hon. Marcellus Eldredge, then mayor of Portsmouth, made a proposition to this post that if it would raise by subscription or otherwise sufficient money to erect in this city a monument costing not less than two thousand dollars, in memory of the sons of Portsmouth who served in the army and navy of the United States during the war for the preservation of the union, he would present the statue of a "Minute Man" to surmount the same, which proposition was changed in 1887, to wit; that if a monument was erected as above costing not less than five thousand dollars he would present a crowning figure in keeping with the mounment, of heroic size, instead of the minute man. And,

Whereas: This proposition has resulted in the erection of a Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument as provided, and as said monument is to be dedicated and presented to the city of Portsmouth on the 4th of July next, it is therefore

Resolved: That the Hon. Marcellus Eldredge be, and is hereby requested by this Post to provide the statue of Liberty as above promised, and present the same to the city of Portsmouth to be dedicated with the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.

Resolved: That as a Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, feeling deeply grateful to the Hon. Marcellus Eldredge for his munificent gift, and desiring to have a [illegible] continuance of success of the undertaking, we take this opportunity to express our heartfelt thanks to all who have assisted us in procuring this monument which is to perpetuate the memory and history of our dead comrades.

Resolved: That this preamble and resolutions be spread upon our records and a copy be sent to the Hon. Marcellus Eldredge.

A true copy from the Records.
M. M. COLLIS, Adjutant.

CIRCULAR—JULY 4TH.

PORTSMOUTH, June 26th.

For the purpose of protecting from possible injury all citizens and visitors, to enable the Fire Department to respond quickly in case of an alarm, and to facilitate promptness in carrying out the programme, the Chief Marshal makes the following announcement:

The commitee on route have decided to rope off certain streets as follows:

Vicinity of depots during formation of procession;

Vicinity of Goodwin Park during dedicatory services;

From the enclosures thus formed vehicles of all kinds will be excluded during their occupancy by the procession and people. Carriages conveying invited guests, the press, or on errands of public or private necessity, only, may temporarily suspend this rule. Pedestrians can pass the lines at all times, as is the usual custom.

The purpose of the committee being one of public safety, the chief marshal will expect a cheerful compliance on the part of citizens and visitors with the above regulations.

Approved.
GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.
HERBERT A. MARDEN, Chief Engineer Fire Dept.

July 4th. Concert by the Highland band, of Lake Village, on the Parade; time, 7:00 to 9:00 P. M. The concert precedes the exhibition of fireworks from Langdon Park at 9:00 P. M.

Entrances to Marginal road (for pedestrians only) are to be found on Pleasant street, via Edwards: Court street, via Court place; and on Richards avenue.

By order of
ANDREW P. PRESTON, Chief Marshal.
Capt. J. A. SANBORN, Chief of Staff.

Mr. Edward E. Chandler and wife, of Lynn, Mass., went to Boston last Monday forenoon on a shopping tour, and while on Washington street, near Summer, were struck by a runaway team, Mrs. Chandler being instantly killed and her husband severely but not fatally injured. Mrs. Chandler was a native of this city, and was aged forty-eight years. She was married to Mr. Chandler thirty years ago, and four children were born to them, two daughters, aged respectively twenty and twenty-five years, being now living.

The Portsmouth Athletic club on Tuesday had the entire front of their quarters, extending the whole length of Franklin block, handsomely decorated.

The United States sanitarium hospital at Widow's island, Me., was inspected on Saturday, June 30th, by Brigadier Gen. Mills Browne, and accepted. The construction of the hospital has been carried on under the supervision of Passed Asst. Surgeon Arthur C. Heffenger, U. S. N., of this city.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of chronic morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary dealers on those who call for

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Oh, come! [illegible] roads,
Where beasts of burden trudge with loads,
Or wayside herbs are showered with dust,
Or cot and hall show stain and rust,
Where blazing hotness whitey falls
And burns the growth on garden walls—
Come not thus way!

Oh, come! but in sure quiet pass
By rill, by bush, through tangled grass,
Through woodland ways, where naught is heard
But leaves stirred or twittering bird,
Where sunlight sifts, where rain drops drip,
Where honey wets the traveler's lip—
Oh, come that way!

AN INTERESTING MEMORY TEST.

Ascertaining the Receptive Powers of School Children—Test Sentences.

Mr. H. H. Ballard publishes in The Journal of Education the result of a test of the memories and receptive powers of school children. The sentence, "Your redemption from the distress into which you have fallen is in your own hands, and in no wise depends on forms of government or modes of election," was carefully read to one of ten selected pupils, who repeated it exactly as possible to the next scholar, and this one to the third, and so on to the tenth. The tenth pupil wrote down what he received from the ninth. In one case the sentence emerged from this process as "The redemption of your distress is in your own hands;" in another it was: "The invention which has fallen into your hand;" and the sentence had dwindled into this already at the sixth pupil.

In another case the sentence was whispered instead of distinctly read, and the process of calling on the imagination when the senses give no clear impression is illustrated in the result, which was, "The attempts into which we have fallen during the government election are very low." In the Pittsfield, Mass., high school the sentence reduced to, "Redemption is in your own hands, and depends upon no formal government nor love." In the senior class of another high school, in which the average age of the pupils was 18 years, the result was, "Our redemption for our destruction has nothing to do with us." In still another school it was, "Your distress into which you have fallen is by no means the fault of government." A set of 8-year-old pupils reduced it to, "The redemption that lies in your hand is done;" and the first class of the high school in the same town made it, "Your redemption into which you have fallen is your own fault."

In one school the experiment was modified; two pupils from each of five grades were selected, and the sentence clearly read aloud to them all. After a minute's interval each of the ten wrote down what he could of the sentence. The sentences written by one pupil of the highest, one of the middle, and one of lowest grades were these: "Your redemption from the distress into which you have fallen lies in your own hands, and in nowise depends on the government or manner of election." "Your redemption from the distress into which you have fallen is in your own hands, and depends in no wise upon the forms of government or the modes of election." "Your redemption and distress in which you have fallen depends on yourself, and in no wise on the government or its mode of election." Although not one of the ten got it perfectly accurate, yet many were very near it; and they all show how much more the wear and tear on the sentence is in passing through ten mouths than through one. By the other process one accumulates the combined inaccuracies of all, and one pupil with a very poor receptive organ in the middle of the ten prevents the circulation of a good repetition after him. After this the sentence was passed through the ten pupils arranged in order of grade, and issued as, "Your redemption from the distress into which you have fallen depends entirely upon yourself, and by no means upon the forms of government or helps from education."

The sentence here selected is quite a difficult one, but an easier one from Emerson was hardly more successful. The sentence was "All things are double, one against another—tit for tat, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, blood for blood, measure for measure, love for love"—and the result, "All things are good for one another." Although the test, as thus applied, is too complex to allow valid inferences to be drawn from it, it at any rate shows how difficult it is to repeat accurately what has been heard, as well as how little confidence is to be placed in the declarations of persons reporting the very few words of a conversation held weeks or months before; it illustrates, too, in a simple form, the process by which a simple tale becomes an elaborately embellished narrative by passing through several hands; and perhaps it indicates that the powers of careful attention and retention need more systematic training than is devoted to them in the ordinary school work.—Science.

Subterranean Streams of Barbados.

The island is nearly streamless. The only brooklet that I have seen is called Indian river. It originates in a swamp, flows a dignified course of three or four hundred yards in length and ten feet in width, until it reaches the sea just above Fontabelle. No cascades add their beauty of snowy lace foam to white coral cliffs—there is no surface water. This, where a single day's rain fall has been known to measure ten inches, seems curious; but the same porous rock that coral insects built for Barbadians to live upon takes care of that. The water finds its way down 100 feet or more until it reaches resisting material, and then, in darkness and unseen, returns to the sea. There it makes itself known by springs that are occasionally of sufficient size to temper perceptibly the salt water around, and even to become visible through the latter, as they spout up through white sand at the bottom; and bathers in this pleasant mixture can feel what seems to be some living, thing lifting and crawling beneath their feet, a sensation more startling than cheerful, where one is not quite certain what strange manner of creature may turn up at any minute.

These subterranean streams are occasionally found in caves that tireless teeth of wind and wave have gnawed deep into the bowels of the land. In one cavern named "Colet" quite a river has been found, whose exit is unknown, whose source is unguessed—that flows quietly on through a great distance in darkness to the sea.—D. William F. Hutchinson in American Magazine.

Lack of Facial Symmetry.

The two sides of the face are not alike. As a rule, says a German professor, the want of symmetry is confined to the upper part of the face. The left half of the brain overweighs the right half; the nose leans a little to the right or to the left. The region of the right eye is usually slightly higher than that of the left eye, while the left eye is nearer the middle line of the countenance. The right ear is also higher, as a rule, than the left ear.—Chicago Herald.

OH, WHAT A COLD!

THIS is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their Head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.

C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and Croup. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.

"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN MCLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information? ? which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

GO WEST. 18,000,000 acres of the Montana Indian Reservation just opened for settlement near Great Falls, Ft. Benton, Assiniboine and Glasgow, consisting of rich mineral and coal districts, grazing and farm lands of the very highest quality. Rheumatism and [illegible] say they can but—don't. Athlophoros says nothing but—cures. That's the secret of its success. Years of trial have proved it to be a quick, safe, sure cure.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 3, 1887.

In my own family Athlophoros was used as a last resort, the user having suffered from rheumatism for years and having been treated for the disease by different physicians in this State and Massachusetts without even temporary relief. Upon my recommendation scores of people have used this remedy with the same results claimed for it. C. H. WILSON.

Dubuque, Iowa, Jan. 3, 1887.

Athlophoros has completely cured me of nervous headache, and I feel thankful for all the good it has done me.

A Much Needed Book.

A work is soon to be published in London called "A History of Art Sales." The motive of the book is to give in a tabulated form lists of pictures sold, artists, dates, prices, vendors and buyers. The value of this book will be to preserve the history, prices and descent of pictures. But why cannot a similar book be gotten up here at home, where so many important sales have taken place recently and others will be occurring at intervals? According even to foreign authorities who have come hither to examine into the matter, much of the choicest modern work is owned in this country.

Nowhere outside their own country are the modern French masters better represented, and some, like Millet, are even better represented here today than in France. In modern Dutch work, too, this country is quite well off, especially New York, where some of the best examples of Mesdag, Maris, Mauve and others are found. As these are liable to change hands any day a history of their value and experience, together with that of the work of our own leading artists, would be quite in order about this time. —Boston Advertiser.

The Opening of the Campaign.

To open the campaign with any hopes of speedy success, attack the enemy, malaria, before it has a chance to intrench. An obstinate foe, twill prove if you don't go right at it. If you are prudent, too, you will have fortified, upon the first intimation of its presence in your neighborhood. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the medicinal ammunition that you require. Every form of malarial fever yields to this fine preventive and remedy. For constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia, nervousness and kidney troubles it is no less effective. Residents of malarial localities, and persons sojourning in or bound for the great west, should select this medicine as a means of defence against the frequent visitation of miasma. Those in delicate health, the aged and the enfeebled, should in every instance restore to this signal invigorant. Use it for weak nerves.

A large new stone block at Flagstaff, A. T., was burned July 2d. Loss about $100,000. Insurance mostly expired.

No medicine is more conscientiously prepared, more powerful, or more highly concentrated, than Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Its standard of excellence is the result of careful study. This preparation is acknowledged by the medical profession to be the best blood purifier.

Bank burglars worked all night at Hopkinton, R. I., to break open a safe containing nothing of value.

"Dr. F. W. Kinsman: Dear Sir—For fifteen years the students under my care have used Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and have found it second to no other remedy for throat and lung troubles."

Mayor Hewitt said the boys must go outside New York city to explode their firecrackers on the Fourth.

People with thin heads of hair should use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer to make the hair grow out thick, healthy and strong.

Ex-Governor Cheney of New Hampshire was the guest of Gen. Harrison at Indianapolis on the Fourth.

Personal.

A young lady of seventeen summers, highly educated, refined, and of prepossessing appearance, desires to form the acquaintance of some unusually nice young man, whom she would advise, if troubled with dyspepsia, to use that great blood purifier, Sulphur Bitters.

City Marshal Hammond of Newton, Mass., has been removed, and Charles F. Richardson appointed to the office.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS — Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue numerous form, which often bleed and ulcerate, become very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. eteo9

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. eeowjan89

THE HEAD STEWARD'S FIGURES.

What It Takes to Satisfy the Appetites of Ocean Steamship Passengers.

"There came in over that gangplank last year," said the steward of one of the popular big transatlantic steamships the other day, "4,656 sheep, 2,474 oxen, 1,800 lambs, 4,280 ducks, 2,200 turkeys, 2,000 geese and a good many hundred calves, quail, chicken and grouse."

"What did you do with them—throw them overboard?"

"Ate 'em," was the reply. "My language is a little figurative perhaps, but come and look at my books and be convinced. I tell you people who 'go down to the sea in ships,' or those of them at least who travel by the big transatlantic liners, accept with complacency and as a matter of course the refinements, conveniences and luxuries found on board from day to day, and fail to grasp, in most cases, the extent of the advance which has been made in the last twenty-five years in catering to their wants, as well as overlook the intricate machinery which is required to be constantly and quietly in motion for the maintenance of order and regularity. They have little idea of the vastness and variety of the stores necessary for the ship herself and her crew, and also of that more varied and quite as astonishingly big supply of fish, flesh, fowl, vegetables, fruit and liquor, now considered indispensable for the crowd of passengers the good ship carries, whose insatiable sea appetites are at once the tourists' joy and the steward's despair.

"That sad procession of slaughtered animals I pictured to you, did not really come aboard in the flesh—that is to say—I mean—alive, nor all at once, but we consumed here over 2,000,000 pounds of meat in the last twelve months, which represents, as you will see by looking at these columns, the number of carcasses I mentioned. Meat is the chief item, of course, but man does not live by meat alone, and last year our passengers ate a ton of mustard, three-quarters of a ton of pepper, 7,814 bottles of pickles, about 500 tons of flour, about 900 tons of potatoes, more than 50,000 loaves of bread and twenty tons of biscuits.

"These are the necessaries of life, now for the luxuries—they make a pretty good showing, too. Look here: 5,000 jars jams of all kinds, a dozen tons of marmalade—the bitter taste of marmalade is never so well appreciated as on recovery from seasickness—twenty tons raisins, currants, figs, dates, etc.; thousands of crates of grapes, peaches, apples, oranges, bananas and other fresh fruits. That's a pretty good list of solids, isn't it? Everybody eats, of course, while everybody doesn't drink or smoke, yet the drinkers keep up their end of the balance sheet fairly well. See this:

"In one year they drank 15,000 quarts of champagne, the same of claret and other light wines, 175,000 bottles mineral waters, 35,000 bottles of spirits, and the thumping total of half a million bottles of ale, beer and porter. While all this is going down, 75,000 cigars and 50,000 cigarettes are going up, besides what the gentlemen bring with them. We also consume about 75,000 pounds of chewing tobacco, of which the crew and the steerage use the greater part. Then here is 21,000 pounds tea, and 75,000 pounds coffee, with no end of condensed milk and almost 300,000 pounds of sugar to sweeten it. Fresh fish in shoals, sardines in banks, and more than three-quarters of a million of eggs, cooked in every conceivable style, round the list out in a satisfactory manner and give you some idea of the duties and responsibilities of the head steward of a ship like this."—New York Tribune.

Wretched English in Newspapers.

"Such wretched English as we get in our newspapers!" exclaimed a certain Chicago clergyman not long since. "There is no polish in the work. It is clumsily done. Words are badly chosen, shades of meaning are lost in bungling composition, and sometimes there are grammatical errors. I don't see why our newspapers cannot be better written." One night last week this clergyman happened to be in a newspaper office. Near where he stood talking with one of the editors of the papers was a reporter writing. On the desk in front of him lay his watch open. With one hand the young man was moving a pencil at an amazing speed, and with the other was manipulating a cigarette with that skill and ease which only come of long experience.

The clergyman's curiosity was roused. "Why the watch?" he inquired. "Oh," replied the editor, "the young man has just come in from his assignments. He has been busy all afternoon and early in the evening gathering information concerning a matter of considerable public interest. He has been doing some lively hustling, and is probably tired. He is also hungry, but his superior has told him that he is to have his copy finished at a certain hour. In two hours he must write a column and a half. That is why he has his watch out. He is timing himself. If he finds he is falling behind he will work all the harder to catch up. That is the way newspapers are made. Would you like to write your sermons in that fashion, and then have somebody go over your work at his leisure and criticise your style and your choice of words?"—Chicago Tribune.

Dwelling Houses in Japan.

Japanese houses are toys in size and toys in construction, resting on corner posts set on large rocks, that they may give and sway with earthquakes, and held in place and made stable by the heavy roofs of mud and tiles. The only way of stemming a fire is to tear down the houses in advance of the flames, and it is done as easily as a child knocks over a house of blocks or cards. A rope is fastened to one of the upright corner posts, the crowd gives one pull, and there is a crash and a cloud of dust as the shell of mud and tiles falls upon the ruins of the flimsy dwelling. A thatched roof or a shingle roof drops quite as easily. The ordinary house or shop in the town seldom exceeds twelve feet in frontage, and if there is a second story it is quite as much in miniature and the roof not more than fifteen feet from the ground. It sounds frightful to hear of 500 or 1,000 houses being burned in a night, but with these lilliputian dwellings and their microscopic landscape gardens back of them, the area need not be more than that of two or four small city blocks.—Yokohama Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Dogs Trained for Smuggling.

On the Belgian frontier smuggling with the aid of trained dogs is said to be a flourishing business. Cigars, jewelry and laces constitute the trade. The animals receive a special training for their profession. The practice consists in traveling from one place in Belgium to another in France and vice versa, avoiding the high roads and the revenue men. The latter they are taught by bitter experience to avoid, for the smugglers who train them keep a good supply of uniforms of revenue officers on hand. These uniforms are donned by confederates whom the dogs have never seen, and these fellows beat and stone the dogs unmercifully. The result is that the dogs run whenever they see a genuine officer. When the dog is started off on his journey with his load the smuggler sets out for the same place, but he takes the direct route, or travels boldly by rail, caring, of course, nothing for any inspection of his baggage.

There was a famous dog of this kind in Maubeuge. He made the fortune of his master by carrying laces across the French frontier. His natural color was white, but he wore all sorts of disguises. Sometimes he was black, sometimes brown and sometimes he was a mighty thick, shaggy fellow. He was called Cute (Malin), and he was well worthy of the name. A price was put upon his head, and all sorts of traps and ambuscades were prepared for him. It is said that once he crossed the frontier disguised as an innocent sheep dog, travelling with a flock of sheep. His death was quite tragic. Cute died in harness like a hero. He was chased by the revenue officers and repeatedly fired upon. In swimming across the Escaut he was mortally wounded; but he managed to reach the shore, where he died. Laces valued at 75,000 francs were found in his reversible overcoat.—Home Journal.

The Old Fashioned Hired Man.

This is the day when the "hired man" who is engaged to work on a farm for the season reports for duty, provided, of course, that there is somewhere a farm on which such a relic of a bygone age as the hired man is to be found this year. What an institution he used to be in the days when we were young! A thoroughbred Yankee; not a drop of imported blood in his veins; strong and lithe, and active and tireless—intelligent, fairly well educated, skilled in his business, and as a rule industrious beyond the belief of this ten hour generation. From the time he drove his axe into the woodpile in the door yard on the 1st of April until the close of the season, after harvesting, he expected to work, and he did work, not from sun to sun, but from dawn to darkness, and then did the milking and fed the pigs afterward. His day was fourteen, fifteen, even sixteen hours long, and it never occurred to him that it should be shorter.

He was no specialist. He could do anything. He was smart with a scythe, handy with a hoe, cute with a cradle, and experienced with an ax. He knew how much grain and grass seed were required to the acre, when grass was fit to cut, and when it was hayed enough to "go in," and he did not need to be told when to drop turnip seed in the corn field or how to put corn in the shock. He could build wall, make cider, shingle the barn, make a hayrack or doctor a sick hog. It was safe to leave him to work alone. And he got for his services $10, 12, possibly $15 a month for eight months, and saved three-fourths of it. Then, when he had worked eight or ten seasons and accumulated a few hundred dollars, he probably married the "hired girl," who had been at work for a dollar a week and saved half of that, bought a farm, got out of debt little by little, educated his children and sent them to the city to preach or practice law, or work in the store or shop, while he stayed on the old homestead.—Manchester Mirror.

The Citizens of Berlin.

The surface life of Berlin is not spectacularly impressive, as it is in Paris and London. The citizens are, with the exception of the officers, the worst dressed men in Europe. They are aptly described by the word slouchy. The neckties are dim and chosen with execrable taste, and the clothes are baggy, ill fitting and dingy. This is the more remarkable because the officers of the German army are the leading dandies of the civilized world, and the crack tailors of London and Paris are nearly all Germans. In his native city the German wears big and rough boots, and garments noticeable for their clumsiness. He lounges about theatres, music halls and cafes, with his hands in his pockets and his head hanging forward, content to drink beer and talk—and it is when he talks that the charm begins. It is astonishing to a traveler who has grown accustomed to the solemn, stupid and conventional talk of the English or the constant and unrelieved suggestiveness of the French to hear a party of Berlin men in a discussion. They are the best talkers in the exhibit of absolute and varied knowledge in the world.—Blakely Hall's Berlin Letter.

Depressing Personal Atmosphere.

In some households the wind is always "in the east," and no one quite knows the reason. The causes, patiently traced, usually center in some one member. He may not have what is usually meant by "a bad temper," and may go on, day after day, giving others little cause for active complaint against him. And yet his personal atmosphere is so depressing that the constitutionally sober are made melancholy by his presence, and the light hearted find themselves deep in the blues. "I don't see why everybody complains of my manner," once said a most estimable gentleman; "I'm sure I don't easily loose my temper, and I never say disagreeable things." "Ah, but you always look as if you were thinking them, and that's worse," answered a candid friend. Repressed criticism is, indeed, sometimes harder to bear than a frankly uttered complaint.—Exchange.

The Illinois board of health has sent notices to all the railroad companies centering in Chicago directing them to at once put their stations and grounds in good sanitary condition. This is done in connection with the efforts being made by the board to prevent the appearance of cholera and other epidemic diseases in Illinois this year.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Paine's Celery Compound

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, those wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 20th, 1886: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the recommendation of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good.

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a well-known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 116 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, s the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Rats Leaving a Sinking Ship.

Mr. Whitney now says that he does not care to remain in the Cabinet after the 4th of March. Mr. Whitney's political mind changes almost as frequently as do the styles in Mrs. Whitney's hats, which the young secretary selects with so much regard for becoming fashions in the bazaars of Fifth avenue. Possibly Mr. Whitney has discovered that a wealthy father-in-law is not the only qualification requisite to make a competent cabinet officer. The son-in-law of the Standard Oil Co. apparently started on his Washington career with the notion that a secretary of the navy had only to give good dinners and frequent parties, that he never need trouble himself as to the details of his office, that the sea dogs around the department would allow no other bark than their own to sail in the placid waters of the naval fund. Thus Mr. Whitney divided his time between skipping to New York to solicit new styles of head gear for his pretty and opulent wife, while the gear of the navy, if ever overhauled, was handled by naval officers who ran the department over which the New York politician nominally presided. If Mr. Whitney had ever exerted his whole mind toward the administration of the navy department he would have fallen far short of the requirements of the office. He is a clever fellow when estimated as a New York political lawyer. As a cabinet officer he is a failure, because he has entirely neglected to give attention to the duties of his office. Important subjects have remained unnoticed for weeks, because of the secretary's disinclination to undertake a serious and important duty. Mr. Frank Jones, as secretary of the navy, could accomplish more in one week than could Mr. Whitney, with his indolent disregard for the requirements of his office, in a year. As to all the functions of hospitality, Mr. Whitney may be a success; but as a practical administrative cabinet minister he is a decided failure. His remodelling the bureau business, which has been the laughing stock of everyone, whether naval officer or civilian, is now acknowledged to be a cumbersome, impracticable plan. The system which worked in time of war was subject to be improved upon. The department on the first of July went back to it, and the great waste in the change from it and the greater chance for fraud and peculation will be glossed over in some future report, which will ignore the facts in the case as heartily as Mr. Whitney has disregarded many of his official duties. In brief, Mr. Whitney is a non-success. The only bright thing he seems to have accomplished is his foresight in construing the news from Oregon as a notice to quit, served upon the present administration. As Mr. Whitney, with his wife's extreme variety of officially selected hats, has a most extensive wardrobe, he deems it expedient to begin to pack his trunks now.

Why He is Scared.

"The states which are regarded as certain for the republicans will give their ticket 182 electoral votes." This is the starting point which Congressman Vance, democratic member from the first Connecticut district, takes in figuring out the probable result. He says: "There is no use in our claiming any of these votes. They are always republican, and more apt to be so know than at any other time, on account of the tariff issue. Accepting this as a starting point, then, it is only necessary for the republicans to secure nineteen more votes in order to carry the election. Fifteen of these they expect to get in Indiana, and six from Connecticut, and that carries the day. Now the question to my mind is, 'Can this be prevented?' As to Indiana, I only know what is told me by Indiana democrats. They do not even pretend to say that they have any surety of a successful issue in that state, but on the contrary are very much alarmed about the outcome. This being the case, it becomes absolutely necessary for us to carry Connecticut. It will make no difference what kind of a majority New York gives Cleveland. It will make no difference how New Jersey will go. Without we carry Connecticut, Harrison will be elected. Now I have just returned from my state, and am very much worried over the outlook. The people are for protection before they are for anything else, and I hear a good many democrats talking in a doubtful way about supporting the ticket on account of the Mills bill. The cry of free trade has frightened them, and among their number are some very intelligent men, men you would suppose would not talk unless they knew what they were talking about."

Eben Gray, a painter fifty years old, was instantly killed in Dover on the 3d inst. by falling from a tree which he was trimming.

The Chicago Mail remarks: "England, America's greatest commercial rival, rejoices in the Cleveland ticket and platform, and coolly advises this country to re-elect him on a free-trade issue. It is barely possible that England is not wholly disinterested."

Drinking Ice Water.

That cool, refreshing drinks in warm weather are delicious is undeniable. That drinking ice water in copious draughts when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is deniable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhœa or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

A man giving his name as J. B. Aldrich was arrested in Chicago on the 1st inst., charged with bigamy. He has been living there with a woman who is said to be his twenty-third wife. The police have been looking for him for a year. His name is said to be J. Aldrich Brown. He is charged with having wives in New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Bangor, Montreal, St. Louis and Louisville.

Upstairs and Down

From Garret to Cellar, in the Laundry, Kitchen, Butler's Pantry, and Bath Room—JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE has its place. There's nothing too coarse—nothing too fine for it.

With the aid of PEARLINE a delicate woman can clean house and wash clothes. It virtually takes the place of hard work, and is perfectly harmless; in fact, your things last longer, because you do not have to rub them to pieces to get them clean. PEARLINE is for sale everywhere, but beware of the numerous imitations which are peddled from door to door—they are dangerous.

SOUTH BAY DUCK SHOOTING.

Day in a "Battery," of a Gun in the Suspicious Birds.

There is a fascination to many sportsmen in shooting ducks from a South bay battery, though a more cramped and uncomfortable position cannot be found than that required by the gunner. The battery consists of a box about eighteen inches deep and long enough to admit the outstretched body of a man. A rubber coat is the substitute for a mattress and a sandbag serves for the pillow. From the box extends on each side a flat, ratlike screen composed of wood and and brown canvas, which serves to float the box and break the force of the waves as they dash up against it. By means of weights the box is sunk in the water and iron decoy ducks hold it in place. A hundred decoys are scattered about the box in a natural manner. The gunner then lies down flat in the box, with his shells on one side and his gun on the other. With a parting instruction to be sure and keep the head well down the battery man sails away, leaving the gunner alone on the sea.

To the man first trying the sport the situation is a peculiar one, and the sensation the same. All alone, surrounded by the little flock of decoys, and the waves pounding up with a swash against the guards to the box, he feels somewhat insecure. As he lies flat in the box his body and head are below the level of the water. Sometimes, if the wind is blowing pretty strong, a wave will break over into the box, tickling his face with briny drops and sending cold streams of liquid down his back. If he is a sportsman he will only laugh at this and take a pull at his whisky flask to prevent catching cold. Sometimes the waves run so high that the gunner is compelled to bail out his box or it will become a fish pond in the sea. The sun beating down on his face will redden it in about ten minutes. Meanwhile the sail boat is tacking across the bay to stir up the ducks. A bunch of them is aroused, and as the birds go skimming along the water they spy the decoys, and, thinking they are a flock of brethren peacefully feeding, shape their course toward them. As they sail up to the decoys they soon perceive they are deceived and wheel away. Just as they come about is a good time to fire, and if the gunner is expert while they are getting away he has time to slip in another shell and fill the back of the rear duck with cold lead. If any of the ducks fall the gunner stands up in the battery, which is a signal for the sailboat men to come up and gather in the fowls that have been shot.

Then the gunner stretches himself out again and waits for another flock. If the ducks are thick and not in a suspicious mood he will not have to remain so long before another set will be along and more blazing away is in order. Some favorable morning there is a constant booming of guns on the bay, and big boatloads of ducks are brought in. It is not uncommon in the autumn for one man to shoot fifty to eighty ducks from a battery. The next day he may not get five.

In the season about five batteries a day start out from Patchogue. The skipper always has a man to help him sail his catboat, and it is a race to secure the best ground. Often in making the best run across the bay the "cap'n" only gets in first to find the ground already seized by the ambitious huntsman who has gone out the night before, slept in the catboat and at sunrise is ready in his battery. The early morning is the best time, as at dawn the ducks begin to feed and are out in great numbers. Every sailboat man is a "cap'n" and must scrupulously be addressed as such. His assistant is the mate. There is no crew. The South bay boatmen are honest, good hearted men, always ready to get as much as they can out of the sportsmen, but working hard to drum up the game for him. He will charge $10 a day for the use of the battery, and will throw in the meals. In the cabin of the catboat the mate cooks ham and eggs, steak, potatoes and coffee, and serves it hot. If the sportsman likes oysters, he will throw over his rake and bring up half a bushel to open on the spot. If one is not having much success with the ducks it is a good plan to allow the "cap'n" to lie in the battery for a time, for he is invariably a crack shot and will fill up the quota needed in short order.

Brant and broadbills are the most abundant of the family in the Great South bay in spring. The broadbills are a plump duck, with short bills. They are swift flyers, and it is like shooting at a bumble bee to draw on one as he comes by. In the fall black ducks and redheads come in the bay. Shell ducks are also plentiful. Shell ducks and coots are good shooting, but not worth eating. The broadbills are great divers, and often, when wounded, will lead the skippers a long chase. On diving they are pretty sure to come up to the windward, and a good distance off. Often the ducks come in the bay in great quantities, and set up in the water like big rows of tenpins. When started they rise with the noise of a whirlwind in the forest. The boobies are a small species of duck that sometimes come in the bay. They get their name from their aptness at losing their heads. A shot into a flock of boobies will sometimes so disconcert them that they will fly around in a circle and allow the gunner to take his time in shooting them down. They are great chatterers, and keep the bay noisy with their cries.—New York Times.

"Cycles" for Army Use.

The recent experiments in employment of "cycles" of various sorts for army use in the spring military exercises in England seem to demonstrate the futility of expecting that class of machinery to be of much practical value for this service. The ascents of long hills had to be made by the cyclist volunteers slowly and with toil on foot, because the machines could not be ridden; a carriage to be ridden and worked by four men, and to carry a Maxim gun, broke down utterly; the "Centipede," or flying sapper, a machine on eight wheels, carrying intrenching tools, engineering appliances and men, broke in two and had to be abandoned, and there were numerous minor accidents in only two days' trials. So long as the operations of war cannot be confined to nice, smooth asphalted floors, and conducted daintily, these machines are not likely to be worth much among possible military appliances.—New York Sun.

How Florida Was Built.

Among the agencies which have helped to build up the peninsula of Florida, according to Mr. A. H. Curtiss, are certain trees, like the mangrove and cypress, which grow on land more or less under water. Like the coral builders, they have worked slowly, but in thousands of centuries the change wrought would be great. It is altogether probable that the thousands of tree covered "islands" in the Everglades and Big Cypress were once mangrove thickets, and that the present mangrove islands will in time be added to the mainland.—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Southerly winds, warmer, local rains, followed by fair weather.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

The dedication exercises of the Soldiers' and Soldiers' Monument on the 4th were carried out as nearly as possibly in accordance with the previously published programme, though the procession did not move until noon, owing to the late arrival of trains, and there were one or two annoying circumstances occured, but nothing to mar the general success. In addition to the expected organizations three companies of naval apprentices from the training ship Portsmouth appeared in the procession. The number of people in the city was very great, the visitors being estimated all the way from 10,000 to 25,000. There was no firing of crackers or guns on the line of the procession, and but little drunkenness was observable during the day. The police prevented the "fakers" of different kinds from getting a foothold anywhere, and no thefts have been reported. The illuminated boat procession on the south pond did not start until a much later hour than intended, the brisk breeze which made it so comfortable "on the dump" and kept the mosquitoes away, making it difficult to light the lanterns, or keep them going after they were lighted; but the boats made a very pretty display when they did move. The fireworks were fine, the Grand Army badge being especially pleasing. There were no accidents of serious moment during the day.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club went to Dover on the morning of the 4th, and were defeated by the Dover club, ten to five. The following is the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Portsmouth	1	0	0	1	0	0	0	3	0	—5

In the afternoon the Dovers came to Portsmouth, and played a game on the South street grounds before about 2000 persons, which resulted as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Manchester	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—1

Earned runs, Portsmouth 4. Two base hits, Canavan, Laighton. Bose on balls, Rudderham. Stolen bases, Portsmouth 8, Dover 6. Base on errors, Laighton, Madigan, Mullen. Struck out, McCaffrey (3), Rudderham, Kittredge, Mullen, McCarthy, Ryan. Umpire, Mahoney. Time of game, two hours.

AN EXCELLENT REPORT.

The Times did a most creditable piece of journalistic work in its issue of the 5th inst., in its report of the dedication of the monument. It is an eight page number, and on the 1st page presents excellent pictures of the monument, of Mrs. Heman Eldredge, Hon. Marcellus Eldredge and Mr. H. Fisher Eldredge. The number also contains the list of subscribers to the monument fund, of the general committee and the sub-committees; the organization of the procession, its route, and the exercises at the park in full, including Hon. Chas. Levi Woodbury's address; a description of the fireworks,—in short, a full and complete report of the whole affair from its inception to its end. It is a big piece of reportorial work, ably carried out.

PERSONAL.

The family of Mr. John Salter of Brooklyn, N. Y., are visiting the Misses Shores on Richards avenue.

Miss Carrie Treadwell will leave this city about the middle of this month to pass the rest of the summer in Littleton, this state.

Miss Edith Wendell, the eminent soprano, arrived home on Tuesday, the 2d inst., from Brooklyn, N. Y., to pass the summer.

Mr. Andrew J. Locke and wife, of Chelsea, Mass., passed the 4th in this city as guests of Mr. John H. Shillaber and wife, returning home on the 5th.

Miss Maud Guild, of Boston, daughter of Pay Inspector Charles F. Guild, is visiting the family of Capt. Robert F. Bradford, U. S. N., commandant of the navy yard.

MARITIME NOTES.

All the vessels along the wharves were gay with bunting on the 4th, except the British barkentine Chinampas, with railroad ties from a port in the provinces, lying at the Eastern railroad wharf. The brickers at Portsmouth bridge had their ensigns and burgees flying.

The schooners Yankee Blade, Coombs, and Frank Pendleton, Hatch, from Port, Johnson with coal to E. F. Sise & Co., arrived at this port on the 5th.

The brick schooners Satellite, Hattie Lewis and G. W. Raitt, and sloop Somerset, arrived at this port on the 3d inst. from Boston, and laid by over the 4th.

The schooner Ella Frances, of this port, Quinn master, from Camden for Boston with a load of lumber, and the Gold Hunter, Eaton, from Wells for Boston, were in the lower harbor on the 3d.

The brick schooners Triton, Estella, D. K. Ham and J. Chester Wood sailed from this port for Boston on the 5th.

The ship Granite State, of this port, Ross master, arrived at Anjier, Java, July 3d, eighty-two days from New York.

The U. S. S. Enterprise was on the 5th inst., reported from Christiania, Sweden, as having gone ashore at Drobak on the 4th, and being still hard aground. Assistance had been sent her.

The ten young men of Port Chester, N. Y., believed to have been drowned, were all saved, having been rescued after their boat capsized.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

The undersigned gratefully acknowledges the receipt of one hundred dollars from Wm. H. Hackett, the same being a legacy from the estate of Mrs. Olive Pickering Hackett for "the Home for Indigent Women."

CHAS. E. MYERS, Treas.

The trustees of the Cottage Hospital acknowledge the receipt of one hundred dollars, paid by William H. Hackett from a legacy for that sum bequeathed by late Alice Pickering Hackett, widow of Wm. H. Y. Hackett, "to be used for the purposes and uses for which that well intended charity was established."

The post-office letter-box at the corner of Middle and Austin streets was blown to pieces by a cannon cracker about two o'clock in the morning on the 4th, and the contents mutilated and scorched. City Marshal Rowe, being notified of the affair, went up and took charge of the mail matter, and on his way back to the police station, in passing through Warren street discovered a fire just starting under a barn on the northerly side of the street, between Fleet and Church streets. The fire, which was probably kindled by a carlessly-thrown cracker, was extinguished by the marshal; had it had five minutes more of a start, the fire department's services would have been required. The indiscreet youths who blew the letter box to pieces will not find it so much of a joke should Uncle Sam get hold of them.

The following named members of the Beverly, Mass., fire department, were in town on the Fourth, as guests of Kearsarge Engine Co. No. 3, and took part with them in the parade, and were entertained at the Rockingham house; Capt. J. Pyne, F. A. Morgan' W. A. Fouland, M. H. Whittenhagen, T. Burke, and W. Friend.

A meeting is called for Monday evening, July 9th, at the Baptist chapel on State street, to take action on the questions of inviting the Young Men's Christian Association board to hold its annual convention in this city in November. The evangelical churches are requested to each send the pastor and three delegates to that meeting. State Secretary Folger of Concord has recently passed a day here, and reports much interest generally in favor of the coming convention. Arrangements, if the invitation is extended, will be in Mr. Folger's hands, and he promises that the best speakers and workers obtainable in or out of New England shall be present. The only expense to our people will be the entertainment of the delegates and providing a place for the meeting.

Miller & Freeman's circus, which exhibited in this city on Thursday evening, had one merit, namely, the performance was not long, as it commenced at a quarter past eight, and ended ten minutes before nine.

The man who would have ascended in a balloon had he been here, broke his arm in Boston, and in consequence did not go up. One man who bought a ticket intending to attend the last half of the show, got to the tent just in time to meet the crowd coming out.

The display of the names of the democratic presidential nominees as a part of the 4th of July decorations of a Pleasant street bar-room is a most significant pointer for the third party annex to the administration.—Penny Post.

The game of cricket on the grounds of the Portsmouth club at Frenchman's lane, July 4th, between the second eleven of the Mystic club of Medford, Mass., and the Portsmouth club, was won by the visitors, who made a score of sixty in one inning, to forty-six for the home club in two innings.

A young man named Walling, living on Washington street, fell from the fence at the base ball grounds, on the afternoon of the 4th. He has but one arm, and broke his collar bone on the crippled side.

The contract for supplying coal to the county farm at Brentwood, and the buildings owned by the county at Exeter and Portsmouth, has been awarded to J. Albert Walker.

Mr. Thomas P. Jones had one wrist badly injured on the 4th while bottling tonic at the establishment of C. E. Boynton, by the bursting of a bottle. Dr. Sherburne attended him.

Manchester Union of July 5th: "The members of the press of this city, who visited Portsmouth yesterday, were made the recipients of the kindest attention from the members of the profession in the City by the Sea. There were present Messrs. Glidden of the Boston Herald, Pecker of the Journal, and members of the Press and the Union of this city. Just before taking the train for home the visiting newspaper men were treated to a sumptuous banquet at the Rockingham, the gathering including, besides active members, retired journalists. The gentlemen of Portsmouth could not have catered to the wants of their brother workers more satisfactorily then they did yesterday."

The Flying Yankee train on the evening of the 4th struck and fatally injured an unknown man in the freight yard at Salem, Mass.

An unknown man fell between the engine and baggage car of the Rockport train at Salem, Mass., on the forenoon of the 4th, and was cut to pieces. He was a well dressed man about thirty years old, apparently a French Canadian.

The train from this city for Manchester on the evening of the 4th, consisted of fourteen cars drawn by two engines. Every car was packed, aisles and all, and even the platforms and steps had numerous occupants.

Judge George W. Smith, who has been reckoned the ablest democratic organizer in Herkimer county, New York, and spoke for Seymour in '68, for Greeley '72 for Tilden in '76, for Hancock in '80 and for Cleveland in '84, declares himself unalterably opposed to Cleveland, and announces that he will support Harrison and Morton.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief once that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary dealers on those who call for

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous cents of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing qualities, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

OH, WHAT A COLD!

This is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their Head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.

C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and Croup. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.

"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN MCLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

SAGINAW SALT MANUFACTURE.

Making a Salt Well—A "Salt Block"—The Various Processes.

In making a salt well it is necessary to keep out the surface water. To obtain this result a five or six inch hole is made down to solid rock, on which a "shoulder" is made, upon which rests the iron tubing or "casting." Below that the hole is narrowed to two or three inches, and carries that size down to brine or salt. Where rock salt is the material at bottom, fresh water is forced down from the surface. It dissolves the salt, loads itself with all it can take up, about 24 per cent., and by the same downward pressure of surface water flows into the "cisterns" through an inside pipe, as clear as distilled water. A good well will yield from 400 to 600 barrels of brine per day. But constant pumping will clog up the pores of the salt rock, produce constipation of the well, so to speak, and the yield fails to such an extent that it becomes necessary to remove the pump and administer a cathartic in the form of a nitro-glycerine torpedo.

The water as it comes to the surface empties into huge cisterns built on trestles high enough to admit of draining them into the "settlers" inside of the "salt block." The brine is clear as pumped, but as the air acts upon it the iron it contains in solution takes on a rust color. To get rid of this the brine is "limed" in the cisterns. A wash of lime is stirred into it, which precipates the iron, and in a week the water stands perfectly and permanently clear. Then it is drawn into other large cisterns in the block that are called settlers. These are fitted with four-inch galvanized iron pipes, through which a current of steam flows, heating the water to 175 degs. Fahrenheit. This heating does two things. It throws down the gypsum which exists in the brine as a sulphide, and it evaporates the water, 75 per cent. of which must be thrown off in vapor before crystallization takes place. But the reader will understand me better if I first show him a salt block.

One having a capacity of 225 barrels per day may be described as follows: The "block" is 208 feet by 90, 40 feet high under the center, which includes the ventilator running the entire length of the grainers, and 16 feet high in the posts. It contains two "settlers," each 140 feet long, 9 feet wide and 4 feet deep. As the cisterns outside are high enough to drain into the settlers, so the latter are high enough to drain into the "grainers," of which there are four, each 150 feet long, 10 feet wide and 18 inches deep. Through these also run galvanized 4 inch steam pipes. To heat settlers and grainers there are 3,744 feet of such pipe, and other pipes connected with the works make a total of 9,000 feet. The grainers stand about 6 or 8 feet from the ground, and over their center runs a platform upon which the salt as "lifted" is left to drain before being dumped into the "bins," of which there are about twenty. Connected with the bins are the "packing rooms," and adjoining the block is the "shed," 230x150 feet, with a capacity of 25,000 barrels of salt.

Now let us go into the block again. The settlers are full. It is, say 8 o'clock a. m. The block is so full of steam that you will have to strain your vision to see the floor on which you walk and guard against misteps. The grainers are nearly empty of brine, but their bottoms are covered with the salt that has been quietly falling there for twenty-four hours under a heat of 185 degs. Along each side of a grainer the gang of eight men is strung out each with his "stent." These men are naked to the waist, over the lower limbs are drawn old woolen drawers, red being a fancy color, and on the feet old shoes or boots with the legs cut away. Each man has a hoe and a shovel. With the one he pulls the salt from the center to the side of the grainer and with the other he "lifts" it upon the aforesaid platform. On every man perspiration stands in great beads or trickles down his skin in tiny streams. No need of Turkish baths for these fellows! They are as clean, solid and hardy as well trained athletes.

The salt lifted, the grainers are refilled with brine from the settlers, its temperature raised to 185 degrees, and in a short time you will see a film forming over the surface of the saturated brine. That is salt. Watch it a few moments and you will see this film break into pieces and take a "header" down below. So the process goes on for twenty-four hours, when the lifting operation is repeated, and so from day to day through the season. By 11 o'clock the men have wheeled the salt to bins and there settles over the graining room a silence as profound as that which must have brooded over the abyss of nothingness ere it was said there should be light. Yet in that silence goes on unceasingly from hour to hour a mystery as wonderful, as beautiful, as divine, as is seen in the evolution or dissipation of a world. The heat unfolds the wings, as it were, of the molecules of water and they rise through the air, but the sodium is too heavy, too earthy, and cannot soar. Having got the mitten, as it were, it turns to the atoms of chlorine hanging round. They embrace and materialize in tiny crystal cubes.—Charles Ellis in Chicago Herald.

How People Become Known.

"Yes, we keep the name of every prominent family living within a radius of 100 miles of Pittsburg, and when we issue circulars, advertisements, etc., we refer to our list and direct them accordingly. We send circulars to people who never dealt with us, and they are surprised and flattered by the evident attention paid them, not knowing it is a system with us. They wonder how we get their full names. This is accomplished by referring to a blue book, which is issued yearly for the general information of merchants and others. Of course our list is not so extensive as other houses, but our customers are among the ton of society. Some firms will go so far as to send articles of jewelry, precious stones, etc., to people for examination, but they first make inquiry from a bank or other reliable source as to the social standing and reliability of the person to whom the articles are sent. I never heard of but one instance of loss sustained.—Pittsburg Press.

Prince Bismarck maintains that the acquirement of languages does not imply talent. He thinks the ear rather than the mind is cultivated by a linguist.

Child Labor in Germany.

The German laws are as near the ideal as any. Children under 12 cannot be employed in factories; those under 14 must not labor beyond six hours a day; those between 14 and 16 may be held to labor ten hours, and no more. They must be allowed all Sundays and all holidays, and regularly one hour at noon, and half an hour in the forenoon and half an hour in the afternoon as resting times. This law is guarded by provisions so rigid that an American employer would denounce them as burdensome. Too much cannot be done to prevent the feeding of child life into our machines.—Globe-Democrat.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor are to be sparkled in every grimace of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

George E. Gibson, who shot himself in Boston when his wedding was due, has died from the effects of the wound.

J. H. Jackson, of Croton, N. Y., writes that Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry cured his wife of lung difficulty, with spitting of blood, after she had been under physician's care for more than a year and used many remedies without avail.

A young society woman of Saratoga, N. Y., has been adjudged guilty of sending obscene matter through the mail.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

Capt. Howes of the American bark Freeman was sentenced at Boston to three years' imprisonment for shooting a Japanese sailor.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the the most distressing, nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cures of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

The senate has confirmed the nomination of James G. Jenkins to be United States judge for the eastern district of Wisconsin.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

Rubber manufactures have given up all hope of success in their attempt to form a trust.

No injurious effects can follow the use of Ayer's Ague Cure. It contains an unfailing antidote and specific for miasmatic poisons, together with remedial agents which purify and re-invigorate the system.

Somerville, Mass., carpenters are striking for the recognition of the nine-hour working day.

It will pay to buy Beach's World Soap, it is a pure, solid soap, and will not wash away with a few times using.

Impurities of the blood often cause great annoyance at this season; Hood's sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and cures all such affections.

Do Not Think for a Moment

That catarrh will in time wear out. The theory is false. Men try to believe it because it would be pleasant if true, but it is not, as all know. Do not let an acute attack of cold in the head remain unsubdued. It is liable to develop into catarrh. You can rid yourself of the cold and avoid all chance of catarrh by using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. If already afflicted rid yourself of this troublesome disease speedily by the same means. FAILURE OF CROPS is an unknown experience in Central and Northern Dakota and Minnesota. Maps and full particulars regarding lands, prices, etc., sent free. Address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on a small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass Agt., St. Paul, Minn. ?

GO WEST. 18,000,000 acres of the Montana Indian Reservation just opened for settlement near Great Falls, Ft. Benton, Assiniboine and Glasgow, consisting of rich mineral and coal districts, grazing and farm lands of the very highest quality. The opportunities for making money here are greater than any where else in the United States. This is the time to go and secure your location. For rates, Maps, or other information, Address, C. H. honestly admit that they can't cure Rheumatism and Neuralgia. Others say they can but—don't. Athlophoros says nothing but—cures. That's the secret of its success. Years of trial have proved it to be a quick, safe, sure cure.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 3, 1887.

In my own family Athlophoros was used as a last resort, the user having suffered from rheumatism for years and having been treated for the disease by different physicians in this State and Massachusetts without even temporary relief. Upon my recommendation scores of people have used this remedy with the same results claimed for it. C. H. WILSON.

Maj. Andre's Fatal Pass.

A relic of the revolution has lately been found in Washington. It is the original document given to pass Maj. Andre through the American lines when Benedict Arnold had resolved to betray West Point into the hands of the British. The pass is signed by Arnold as major general, and is countersigned by Gen. Gage. The possessor is a direct descendant of Paulding, one of the scouts who arrested Andre when he attempted to pass the picket under the name of Anderson.—Chicago Herald.

He Had to Say Something.

"There," said Mrs. Ableyer, after she had concluded, "that is the first time I've sung for over a year, except when I've sung to baby." "Oh, then, the baby does have the benefit of your voice?" asked Fenderson, wishing, of course, to say something, if it wasn't so bright. "Yes, I have to sing him to sleep, you know." "Ah, my dear Mrs. Abelyer, what a pity it is that as we grow older we lose the ability to go to sleep when somebody is singing."—Boston Transcript.

The Opening of the Campaign.

To open the campaign with any hopes of speedy success, attack the enemy, malaria, before it has a chance to intrench. An obstinate foe, twill prove if you don't go right at it. If you are prudent, then you will have fortified upon the first intimation of its presence in your neighborhood. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the medicinal ammunition that you require. Every form of malarial fever yields to this fine preventive and remedy. For constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia, nervousness and kidney troubles it is no less effective. Residents of malarial localities, and persons sojourning in or bound for the great west, should select this medicine as a means of defence against the frequent visitation of miasma. Those in delicate health, the aged and the enfeebled, should in every instance restore to this signal invigorant. Use it for weak nerves.

August Cannon, son of President Cannon of the Mormon church, is now in jail in Utah, charged with prejury, in giving straw bail.

No medicine is more conscientiously prepared, more powerful, or more highly concentrated, than Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Its standard of excellence is the result of careful study. This preparation is acknowledged by the medical profession to be the best blood purifier.

In a desperate encounter between United States officers and outlaws at a "corn dance" in the Indian territory two officers and one outlaw were killed.

From Rev. H. P. Torsey, D. D., LL. D., late President Maine Wesleyan Seminary and Female College, Kent's Hill, Me.:

"Dr. F. W. Kinsman: Dear Sir—For fifteen years the students under my care have used Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and have found it second to no other remedy for throat and lung troubles."

Walter Wales of London, aged eighteen years, was drowned in the Suncook river on the 4th.

People with thin heads of hair should use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer to make the hair grow out thick, healthy and strong.

It is said Perry Belmont will not run for Congress again.

Personal.

A young lady of seventeen summers, highly educated, refined, and of prepossessing appearance, desires to form the acquaintance of some unusually nice young man, whom she would advise, if troubled with dyspepsia, to use that great blood purifier, Sulphur Bitters.

The submarine cable to connect Martha's Vineyard with the mainland has arrived at Woods Hole.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c. and $1. Trial size free. At all Druggists.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS — Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. 6t|e80

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering he will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with

The Professional Humorist's Work.

The task of a man who is compelled to get up a certain amount of pointed humor daily is more laborious than that of a bed carrier. It is something like it, too. He just carries stuff to the level of the average comprehension, and having deposited it before the person to get the benefit of it, goes after more. How does the humorist work? Well, it depends largely upon his temperament, and greater or less fitness for his specialty. Some men, although they may have fair ability in some lines of writing, are slow to originate a humorous idea, notwithstanding that they can appreciate it in others. To such, the writing of a humorous paragraph or article is something to be dreaded. It would be a violation of newspaper ethics for a professional writer to decline to get up an article on any subject or from any standpoint. Given a theme and told to treat it humorously, the most sedate member of a newspaper staff will attack it without hesitation, and, in his own time, will do the work well, perhaps as well as the man whose specialty is humor.

But, ah, the labor of the sedate man! How each queer simile, every epigrammatic sentence and every odd expression will wring his soul and make his brain throb! Fun! Tell him that he ought to enjoy his own fun, and he will probably brain you with the office poker. Ask the regular paragrapher whether he enjoys his work, and he will think you a fool. He does it because it is his work, but the terrible wrestle he has with the English language every day to evolve those atrocious witticisms of his, no one knows but himself. To the young man who thinks of going into newspaper work as a funny man, there is only one word of advice to be given, and that, by the way, was used by the most dismal humorist of the present century, London Punch: "Don't!!"—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Hardiness of American Half Breeds.

The experience of the teachers of the Lincoln institution confirms the views here expressed, that the mixed Indian is more exempt from pulmonary disease than the pure Indian; and, further, that if the former are attacked by disease, they offer greater constitutional resistance to it than the latter. This view is also confirmed by the large experience of Capt. R. H. Pratt, superintendent of the Carlisle Indian school, who says in his last report: "Our experience is that the mixed bloods resist disease and death from pulmonary troubles better than the full bloods, and our best health conditions are found among those we send out into families—due, I think, very largely to the regular occupation and varied diet."

Similar views have been expressed by others who have resided among the mixed or half breed races in the northwestern part of Canada. These people are said to be strong and hearty, long lived, and not subject to disease, so long as they remain in their native climate. They regard themselves as the equal of the whites, and look in a patronizing way on the Indian. Their families are usually very large, and the female sex is said to be very handsome. Quite recently I had occasion to investigate the question whether pulmonary consumption tends to exterminate the American Indian, and I then found that nearly all those Indian agencies which show the lowest consumption rate are precisely those which are shown in the table of this paper to contain the largest number of mixed bloods.—Thomas J. Mays, M. D., in Popular Science Monthly.

Best Position During Sleep.

Of all our sleeping millions who arise at sun call with more or less reluctance or promptness, how many are free from morning headache? Not a large proportion, so far as I have observed. It is probable that a majority acquire their pain from wrong posture during sleep. I have asked many how they lie in bed; I find generally they rest upon the side, with legs drawn up and chin upon the chest—rolled up like a chicken in an egg shell. Some few sleep upon the back, one or two prone, and several with an arm stretched up beneath the head; but the usual posture is, I think, as first stated.

Now, in this shape, the human body describes an arc of a circle, with blood and air vessels constricted by pressure on the inside of the arc, and their caliber sensibly diminished. Jugular veins, returning exhausted blood from the brain, find the flow of their contents interfered with, and a condition of passive congestion is set up. Lungs compressed by weight of head and curvature of trunk, expand but partially, and their work is badly done. Therefore it takes an hour or more in the morning, with bath and toilet, to set wheels going that should never have been checked, and to get rid of the headache. Try this way once: When fairly in bed, lights out, and ready for sleep, throw the head well back, upon a pillow of medium height, chest forward, arms by the side and legs extended. Fight it out a few minutes and sleep will come—this time without a headache in it.—William F. Hutchinson, M. D., in American Magazine.

A Pundit's Sly Trick.

About 500 years ago there was a celebrated pundit of Nudya, who was particularly fond of country spirits, and used to take about a quart of it every day. People suspecting him of this weakness watched him. One evening, when he was returning from his vesper prayers at the riverside, he was seen to come out on the sly from a grog shop, with his water pot full of anisced arrack, and he was taxed by the crowd for conduct so disreputable in a Brahmin of his learning and sanctity. He denied the charge, and placed the vessel before his accuser, when lo! it appeared to contain milk. A miracle! a miracle! cried the crowd, and the pundit, instead of being degraded, was canonized; the fact being that the wily toper knew well that anisced liquor, mixed with a little water, becomes milky, and he had prepared it accordingly.—Report of British Commission.

A Season in Washington.

This wintering in Washington is simply a "fad" that has become more or less a fashionable "chronicism," and I know that it is not enjoyed half as much as some fashionable women would have one believe. A lady who passes her summers at Newport or Bar Harbor, and her winters in France or Italy, with a season in London thrown in, concluded to try a season in Washington. To the capital she went, with a retinue of servants and equipages, and established herself in one of the new palaces that abound in the northwest of the city. Two months have completely cured her, and Washington will hereafter be denied the light of her presence. She declares that there are more vexatious causes to disturb one's temper in Washington than in any other corner of the earth, and that life there is not worth the countless worries one must endure to enjoy (?) it.

The servant question alone is one which calls for a special bill that even congress might interest itself in. All the servants in Washington are of the easy going southern darky type, with an indolence of manner and motion that to a nervous northern individual becomes in time exasperating. They have not lost their knack of concocting toothsome dishes, every imaginable kind of hot bread, and other inviting things appreciated by southern epicures; but they (in their own minds) stubbornly refuse to encourage 8 o'clock dinners and midnight suppers. The old fashioned 2 o'clock dinner, universally served throughout the south, is, to their way of thinking, a much more sensible way of conducting this important item of a day's history. Now, when one takes a furnished house in Washington, one must necessarily take half a dozen, more or less, of the above type of servants, and this begins at once to unsettle any proposed life of ease and contentment.—Max Eliot in Boston Herald.

Will the Iron Age End?

"I was talking with Mr. Chamberlain the other day," said Judge Tompkins, "who is a practical man of our coal and iron company. He made a startling suggestion. Said he: 'The time may come when all the iron mines of this country will be abandoned. The most generally diffused metal on earth is aluminum. It is found almost invariably in clay, especially in red clay. It is now extracted from clay by a very expensive and tedious process, at a cost of more than $500 a ton. Some one will invent a process for getting aluminum out of clay by a rapid and cheap process. Then farewell to iron mines.'

"I asked him what was the value of aluminum.

"He replied that it has three times the strength of steel, and only one-third its weight. This makes it, of course, the most valuable of metals. It was only discovered in 1828. It is bright, and it never tarnishes. Louis Napoleon offered $6,000 for a process for extracting it from clay, and two small bars of aluminum were presented to him by a French chemist as the result. It was enormously expensive, but Napoleon had works established for extracting it, and he used it as a substitute for the silver eagles that were borne above the armies of France. It has all the beauty of silver, is more lasting, stainless, and has only one-fourth the weight of silver. The eagles of France are thus made more resplendent, more enduring, and seventy-five per cent. lighter in weight. You look out for aluminum. Some one will yet invent a process for digging up common dirt and extracting therefrom this best of all metal."—Atlanta Constitution.

New Thing in Stock Cars.

I saw up at St. Charles the other day a new thing in stock cars, which is as much an improvement over the old kind as the drawing coach is over the emigrant car. The Humane society could not have designed a more satisfactory convenience for the brute creation, and with this new idea to begin, the accommodation of traveling stock will rapidly advance to the comfortable stage. Cattle and horses have always suffered tortures in box cars, and I think every humane man will rejoice to see endeavors made to assist their condition on a journey. These cars are modeled after the ordinary open box concern so as to give plenty of air. The floor is heavy and slanting, so as to afford a drain. On top of the car is a tank, to which a pipe on either side connects. These run into four iron troughs, from which the animals can drink fresh water at every stop, supplied from the tanks. By turning a crank the troughs are turned and the old water thrown out. Above the animals' heads are two hay racks with sliding wooden grates, which open and shut at the will of the operator on top of the car. These are great improvements for feeding and watering the stock, and it only remains for some genius to get the same number of cattle into the present car as is the custom and still give them room to lie down.—A Stockman in Globe-Democrat.

Care of Neglected Children.

One of the most original and courageous attempts to relieve the afflicted was made by Mrs. Cornelius Du Bois a number of years ago, in taking twenty children, pronounced blind, from Randall's Island. They were put in a comfortable house, well cared for and the best medical attention secured. In less than a year seventeen of the twenty had their eyesight restored. It was not disease, but neglect, that had deprived them of it. Imagine the joy of these poor little souls that had been taught they must grope through life as in one long night. The light from seventeen pair of grateful eyes—what a halo for the head of a good angel!

The next experiment will, to ears polite, seem a more daring one. There was at that time a belief prevalent that the itch was not only a contagious, but an incurable disease, and when Mrs. Du Bois sent for twenty children who were suffering from it, Randall's Island drew a breath of relief, and society in which the brave woman was a leader buried its face in a perfumed handkerchief. The children were exceptionally depraved, and in a state too disgusting to be described. Care and cleanliness took the place of fire and sword, the Gospel practically applied did the rest, and twenty healthy, happy and well behaved chil-

Paine's Celery Compound

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, those wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worse cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is not a cathartic. It is a laxative, giving regular natural action to the bowels. Regularity surely follows its use.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1888: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good."

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a well known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 118 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S.S.S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. E. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it it soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

FOR PRESIDENT,

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

New Hampshire National Guard.

The annual report of the adjutant-general shows but one company of infantry disbanded during the year and one organized during the year. The brigade has the maximum number of companies of infantry, twenty-four, one four-gun battery and a troop of cavalry allowed by law, with a total strength of 109 commissioned officers and 1,127 enlisted men. Reference is made to the excellent condition of the arms and equipment of the force, and the necessity for increased accommodations in many places is alluded to. The force is alluded to as in a satisfactory condition. The following reports and papers are added to his report: Report of Inspector General Wheeler, Brevet. Brig. Gen. R. H. Jackson, major Fifth U. S. Artillery, resignations, discharges and commissions received and issued, enlisted men dropped as deserters, register of commissioned officers, list of workmen in the several classes, and returns showing location and strength of the national guard.

The Westminster Review makes the following remarks on the wonderful growth of federal government within a century: "A remarkable phenomenon of the last hundred years is the impetus that has been given to the development of federal institutions. There are to-day contemporaneously existing no less than eight distinct federal governments. First and foremost is the United States of America, where we have an example of the federal union in the most perfect form yet attained. Then comes Switzerland, of less importance than the United States of America, but most nearly approaching it in perfection. Again we have the German empire, that great factor in European politics, which is truly a federal union, but a cumbrous one and full of anomalies. Next in importance comes the Dominion of Canada, which is the only country forming a federal union and at the same time a colony. Lastly come the Argentine Republic, Mexico, and the states of Colombia and Venezuela. This is a very remarkable list, when we consider that never before the present century did more than two federal unions ever coexist, and that very rarely, and that even those unions were far from satisfying the true requirments of federation. Only three well-marked federations existed prior to the foundation of the United States of America—the Achæan League, the Swiss League and the United Netherlands."

"Tom the Ready, Or Up from the Lowest," by Randolph Hill, No. 8 of the "Boy's Home Library." Paper, 12mo. Price, 25 cents. Published by A. L. Burt, 56 Beekman St., New York.

Of all the series of books which have been published in recent years, under the general title of "Libraries," none has been welcomed more heartily by the public than "Boy's Home Library." No. 8, just published, is "Tom the Ready," by Randolph Hill, a popular writer, and keeps up the high standard of the previous numbers, which are by such authors as James Otis, Horatio Alger, Jr., Harry Castlemon, Edward S. Ellis, etc.

It is for sale at Moses Brothers.

Levi J. Deland, a former member of the democratic state committe of New York, announces his opposition to the Cleveland ticket on account of thefree trade platform.

During the present campaign the Omaha World will have on its staff a republican and democratic editor, each of whom will present his side of the question day by day. The readers of the paper expect to have a grand circus.

Richard W. English, formerly the democratic city auditor of Buffalo, N. Y., the city which gave Grover Cleveland his first boost toward the presidency by electing him (because he was absolutely unknown at the time) as the reform democratic mayor of a strongly republican city, has come out for Harrison. He says: "I personally know of hundreds who will do as I do this year."

Seth Low, a republican with free trade proclivities, says he will vote for Cleveland. The democratic journals show a joy over this one voter saved. The announcement is made with a cackle beside which the fussy brag of the hen with a solitary chicken counts nothing. Per contra, all over the country, every day, there appear announcements of men who have been prominent in democratic councils and regarded as men of decided importance in the regions in which they live, who come out for Harrison and American ideas against Cleveland and British manufacturers.

The republican party is to be congratulated that the biography of Gen. Harrison, their candidate for president, will be written by Gen. Lew Wallace, the author of "Ben Hur." Gen. Wallace will have the assistance of Gen. Harrison, who will give his views on matters of national interest. The book will be a finished literary product, and unquestionably will be the best campaign book published, and have an immense sale. Agents who want to make some money and do a good work for the republican party can apply to the well known publishers, S. S. Scranton & Co., of Hartford, Conn., who have the work to sell by subscription.

If the English nobility could vote here Mr. Cleveland would get a rousing support in November. The London Spectator says: "Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any prime minister of England has ever done."

The circular of a London wine firm says especially that "Lord Blank, one of the partners, is to be in daily attendance in the office."

Drinking Ice Water.

That cool, refreshing drinks in warm weather are delicious is undeniable. That drinking ice water in copious draughts when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is deniable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhœa or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

C. F. Winkley, Esq., a leading New Hampshire democrat and member of the democratic state committee, is out in a ringing letter to Foster's Democrat, denouncing "Cleveland and reform," and demanding a genuine democratic ticket, "such as an honest democrat can support without disgracing himself." Disaffection with the kangaroo ticket is cropping out in every direction. The proper way to make such disaffection count for its face value is to rally under the standard of Harrison and Morton. Hundreds of once stalwart democrats are doing this very thing.

Those truly good democrats who "go into the air" when they are called free traders, have a decidedly previous convert in Ex-Mayor Seth Low of Brooklyn. He says he is in favor of that brand of protection that leads to ultimate free trade. In the same line is Premier Mills, who very recently used this language: "The more confusion the tariff works to business the better I like it, because it will the sooner be done away with. I desire free trade, and I will not help to perfect any law that stands in the way of free trade."

R. B. Anderson, minister to Denmark, has received from the state university of Wisconsin the honorary degree of LL. D.

IN THE OFFING.

And bears afar an anxious watch and ward
Whose dreams, whose hopes whose constant longings yearn
For some fair port from which no ships return.
Some quiet haven undisturbed by strife
Of vexing surges from our weary lives—
Wind driven surges from our wind swept life.

My longing heart sails with them as they go,
Anxious as they, and heavy with their woe;
Where is the peaceful shore we long to find—
The waves are stormy and the path is blind—
The distant sky shuts in the distant sea.
What star of promise holds the dark for thee?

Answer, stern pilot of this phantom sail—
Canst thou be sure thy compass will not fail?
—Louise Chandler Moulton in Youth's Companion.

Unrepealed English Laws.

Among unrepealed acts of parliament in England stand the following gems. Persons tending to use witchcraft, by a law enacted under George II, are punishable by imprisonment. Those practicing palmistry are to be treated as vagabonds and punished accordingly. By a law enacted in the time of Charles I meetings of people outside their own parishes, on Sundays, for any sports or pastimes whatever, are prohibited under penalty of a fine of three shillings and three hours in the public stocks. Any person disbelieving the doctrines of the Established church and refusing to have his children baptized or to partake of the communion may, by a law of Queen Elizabeth, be committed to prison.—Chicago Times.

People Drinking Soda Water.

Did you ever stand behind a soda counter and watch a lot of people drinking? They one and all seem to aim their noses at you through the glasses, and as they try to get the last drop of foam from the bottom of the tumbers, I have noticed this curious fact: not one nose in a hundred is straight with the rest of the face. It either points over my left or over my right shoulder every time. Some noses even seem as if they were trying to get out of the glass altogether—looking around for beer, I always imagine.—Drug Clerk in Globe-Democrat.

Viscountess Valencia urges the importance of women being able to make their own clothes.

A Study of the Face—Meaning of Physiognomical Indications.

The morals of form and face are apparent as the color of one's hair to those who find men and women worth study. Emerson says "a man finds room in the few square inches of his face for all the traits of his ancestors," which can hardly be gratifying to the manes of most ancestors. "The size of the nose is the measure of power," the writers on physiogomy tell us. "All hollows in the face denote weakness," so that a flat face has something in its favor, being wholesome and strong, denoting steady working power. "The larger the lung and nostril, the greater the size and power of the heart," and the force of the whole nature. Full lower cheeks are signs of good digestive power, the full rolling underlip of a sympathetic nature, easily moved; but the thick, straight lip is cruel and coarse. The full upper lip denotes affection, and the old painters always drew such tender lips for the Madonna and the child. The mouth like a Cupid's bow, beautiful as it is, is given to coquetry and experiments in love.

The long upper lip denotes faithfulness, but beware, above all things, of the woman with the upper lip which hardly moves in speaking. There can scarcely be a worse feature in the face, for it is never found without a coldly false, vindictive nature behind it. Beware of the woman who smiles to one side of the mouth, for she is tricky herself and suspicious of others. No matter how gifted, how lovely her taste in dress or perfect her manners, if you would be safe strike off from your acquaintance the woman who shows either of these signs. They are born mischief makers, in neighborhoods, in church, in society. The large, projecting eye is that of a chatterer and a liar, in man or woman. The full eyes of too many Madonnas are those of arrant hypocrites to those who read features. The eye, long rather than round, but well opened, nobly set under the brow, with some depth and reserve, is that chosen by the Greek sculptors for ideal beauty. Large eyes denote command. In historical collections you will notice the beautiful large eyes of the early queens of England. The deeper set eye is one of reflection and self command, always enlarging with muscular exercise and tonics.

The almond eye, praised as it is, belongs to the harem, and is no sign of a straightforward or virtuous nature. Full, white eyelids are beautiful, but the physiognomist does not choose them for the first to trust. They are secretive eyes and watchful of self interest. The eye with drooping lids, slanting ever so slightly to the outer corner, is that of an intriguante. See the earlier portraits of the Empress Eugenie. Sorrow and self communing have made an honester woman of her today, with loss of crown and beauty and ambition. Eyes which slant ever so little to the inner corner are prying, inquisitive and treacherous. Women with such eyes lie without reason, apparently without knowing it. They are bad neighbors in a village or a boarding house. Pity the woman whose lips smile when her eyes do not, for she is the product of an artificial life, and has probably never known a faithful friend or an unselfish person in her life. The face of Patti is such a woman, and the pain of her set, sweet, artist smile and utterly unsmiling eyes is sore to every true woman.

Confused or broken wrinkles on the forehead are signs of a confused understanding, a weak mind, and often a weak body. Deep wrinkles under the chin and around the neck belong to the easy going persons, not inclined to any labor. When found on persons of large brain they indicate characters of great mental vigor, capable of hard and protracted mental labor. Lines down the sides of the nose, which deepen in talking, are evidence of a malicious and dishonest character. Wrinkles across the top of the nose are indications of command, as in those who govern soldiers and sailors, in some teachers and parents of good executive ability and will. Dimples near the corners of the mouth are signs of approbativeness and mirth. Dimpled hands in fair persons show amative disposition. Thick eyelashes show warm passions. Blue eyes with black hair show great ability and control of feelings. Persons of this type carry out their plans secretly while affecting great frankness. Dark eyes with fair hair indicate strength and fineness. Light brown hair with a golden tinge betokens excitability and exaltation, often leading to expression by pen or voice. Let people people with stiff, straight hair be consoled, for such it is easier to be honest and honorable than to be otherwise.—Shirley Dare.

AUCTION.

At the store No. 11 Daniel street, formerly occupied by the late Albert J. Badger, there will be commenced this morning an auction sale of all the tin ware and tools in the store, to continue until everything is disposed of. See advertisement.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Percy C. Fonda, wife and child, of Boston, are in town, on a visit to Mr. Fonda's former home.

Mrs. James A. Blaisdell of Lynn, Mass., is in this city, visiting her father, Mr. James F. Hartshorne.

Mr. Edward L. Laighton of New Haven, Conn., son of Mr. Edward H. Laighton, formerly of this city, arrived here just before the 4th for a visit of a week's duration.

Miss Minnie A. Gibson of Worcester, Mass., is visiting Mr. F. W. Sweet and wife, on Wibird street.

Mr. Albert Sheafe and wife, and Mr. Fred L. Martin, of Boston, passed the 4th in this city, as guests of Mr. Thomas R. Martin of Vaughan street.

Oliver P. Haynes, Esq., of Dover, passed the fourth in this city, his former home.

Miss Nellie C. Mooers, for several years the valued teacher at the Creek school, has resigned, and will enter the Salem (Mass.) Norman school at the beginning of the next term. Miss Nellie E. Rand, a teacher in the Jones school, has also resigned.

Mr. William H. Noyes, formerly foreman of shipwrights at the navy yard started on his return to Norfolk, Va., Friday morning, where he is now employed, after a ten days' visit to his home in this city.

Among the prominent visitors in this city on the 4th was Col. Natt Shackford of Lake Village, who remained over a couple of days to renew old acquaintances.

William H. Haddock and family of Dorchester, Mass., are visiting Mr. Harris Freeman of Islington street.

Capt. James Burke, assistant keeper of Boon island light, came into port on Tuesday evening, the 3d inst., to pass a few days.

SKIPPED.

In Dover, on the 4th inst., Jerry Goggin, one of the liquor dealers who some time ago signed the "waiver" under the nuisance act prosecutions, was held in the police court in $400 on a charge of keeping beer for sale; he furnished bonds and was released from arrest. What then happened is thus told by the Democrat: "As soon as Jerry Goggin was discharged from the police court yesterday morning, after giving his bonds, he decided that the weather was too warm for him about here, and while the sheriff was on his way to Judge Doe to get the papers to arrest Goggin for violating the injunction served against him by the court, Jerry was making quick time for the Pine Tree state. Having distanced his competitor he is now safe from six months in jail as long as he stays out of the state. This makes four that have violated the injunction, and escaped."

THE POST OFFICE RECORD.

During the fiscal year ending June 30th, the receipts at the Portsmouth postoffice from the sale of stamps, postal cards, etc., amounted to $15,403.60. For money orders, there was received $43,799.96, and paid out on money orders, $29,679.62. For this first year of free delivery service, there have been delivered by the carriers 258,819 letters, 44,794 postal cards, and 156,975 papers and circulars.

Dr. Gage and Associate Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor: A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

MRS. B. F. WILSON,
Derry Depot, N. H.

Mrs. Orrin Webber, Bedford, N. H., a cripple and on crutches 14 years with terrible ulcers on her limbs; soundly cured.—Geo. H. Stevens, North Lyndeboro, N. H., cured of terrible burning and itching humor which covered the entire body.—Mrs. Wm. E. Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.—Oliver Pelren, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.—C. L. Buffum, North Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.—Isaac Buttrick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of discharging ears and deafness.—Mrs. A. L. Colby, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.—Mrs. L. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs; cured.—Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.—Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st., Manchester, N. H., blindness cured.—Dr. Levi B. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the doctor did not see him.—Thomas Tuke, Levi Hurt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.—Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 9 years with others.—Son of W. B. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.—G. Ambrose, No. 1 London-derry, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

Elder H. H. Tucker, of Boston, will preach in the Advent church on Sunday; the public are cordially invited.

Among the incidents of the Fourth occurred the following: Three comrades who belonged to the same regiment and same company, met in Grand Army hall, and during conversation found that each, among other wounds received, had lost the right thumb. Following are the gentlemen: John H. Locke, Charles A. Burbank and Alonzo W. Shaw, all of Co. B, 5th N. H. Vols.

The alarm of fire about six o'clock Friday morning was occasioned by a slight blaze in the attic of the Webster house, which was quickly put out, the department rallying promptly. Loss trifling.

The schooner Gertie Freeman, Johnson master, arrived on Friday with twenty-five barrels of alewives for bait, and 3000 large mackerel.

Our Dover exchanges are eloquent upon the subject of Portsmouth beverages. We have got the purest water in the land.—Penny Post.

The Union and Press representatives speak in the highest possible terms of the reception and many kind courtesies tendered by their brethren of the Portsmouth press. They were received at the station by a committee and escorted to the Rockingham, where headquarters were established. Carriages were furnished for the procession, after which the visitors were driven to the various points of interest in the city. After the exercises had concluded the party returned to the Rockingham where they were treated to a sumptuous banquet, and the party was indeed a merry one. The Portsmouth boys could not have done more. Thanks.—Manchester Press.

When the veiling of the monument was being dropped on the 4th, and caught on the top of one of the figures, the prompt action and sprightliness of Boatswain Isaac T. Choate, U. S. N., retired, in climbing up and clearing it, fully merited the applause with which the act was greeted. The veteran seaman couldn't stand it to see anything foul, and nobody likely to at once get it clear.

Mrs. Eugene Randlett and Miss Annie Achorn, from Norwood, Mass., arrived in Kittery on the 3d inst. for a short visit.

Judge Thurman has a fortune of about $500,000.

The Archduke John of Austria has been restored to official favor.

Mrs. Langtry's father is reported to have had only $25 when he died.

Ex-Senator Tabor has an income of from $8,000 to $10,000 a month from one mine.

William K. Vanderbilt has left for Canada on a salmon fishing excursion.

Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D. D., willed everything to his wife, from whom, he said, he received it.

From San Francisco comes another rumor that Senator Fair will presently be married again.

Smokeless gunpowder is the latest addition to the science of war. Now, let somebody invent a smokeless cigarette, and peace will have her victories no less renowned than war.

Dr. Daniel Wilson, president of the Toronto university, has declined the knighthood proffered him by the imperial government.

The "state of siege," which was pronounced some time ago in Havana, has been suspended.

The French chamber of deputies voted confidence in the government by a vote of 376 to 172.

Alexander McKenney was found dead on the shore of lake Ordway, Monson, Me., July 4th, with two bullets in him. Edwin B. Hall of Bangor is held for the murder.

The Missourians celebrated the 4th in a lively style. At Mansfield six farmers had a free fight, and five of them were killed. At Walnut Grove one Will Merritt was murdered in a drunken row, and W. Scott was fatally stabbed at Hallville.

A murderous plot to destroy trains and bridges with dynamite is said to have been discovered on the part of striking engineers of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Several arrests have been made.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the unfailing party funds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

Fire on the 4th damaged the Odd Fellows' block at Rochester to the amount of $1,000. J. G. Morrill & Co., grocers, occupying two stores, were completely burned out. Their loss is $4,000, on which there is a partial insurance. A. S. Gilman, meats, lost $600. The supposed cause is the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

The "distinguished ancestry" bird is coming home to roost. An uncle of President Cleveland in Buffalo, N. Y., has been elected president of a club of veteran republicans who voted for William Henry Harrison.

Democratic papers are making jubilant remarks over the so-called "important accession" to the mugwump ranks of the Providence Journal, and call it a "bolt in Rhode Island." The Providence Journal has been a mugwump sheet since 1884, and is now a full-fledged democratic organ. Mr. Metcalf, its principal owner, is a democrat and a member of the free trade Cobden club; he was also a delegate to St. Louis, and an able member of the committee on resolutions. A most remarkable "bolt," indeed.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. If this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass
Sold by all Dealers in Medicine.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence. To Itself

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the consignment of the universal confidency reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or care that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

OH, WHAT A COLD!

THIS is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.

C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and Croup. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.

"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN MCLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

CANZONETTE.

Tell me not where roses blow—
Tell me, where do roses go,
When their sweet leaves one by one
Perish 'neath the rain and sun?
As I queried, came reply
From a voice that nestled by:
"Roses, when earth's beauty dies,
Bloom afresh in Paradise."

Say not whence affections flow—
Tell me where our life loves go,
When our senses, breath by breath,
Chill into all senseless death?
As I queried came reply
From the love close nestled by:
"Earthly loves with souls arise Still to live in Paradise."

—Espy W. H. Williams.

Stars That Waltz.

When a planet is perturbed some other heavenly body is surely pulling it, which explains the eccentricity of the earth's orbit and also the curious zigzag motion of the star Sirius. Some great body is pulling it, and that body was discovered by Alvin Clark's great telescope. The strangest discovery of the spectroscope was that it could tell whether a star is approaching the earth or retreating from it. It was found fifteen years ago that Sirius was departing at the rate of twenty-nine miles a second. This rate kept diminishing, and now the star is approaching at the rate of twenty-one miles a second. The only hypothesis tenable is that this planet discovered by Alvin Clark's telescope is large in size, but low in temperature, and that Sirius is really a double star. In fact, the two stars are actually waltzing with each other in space, making a curious zigzag movement through their influence of each other. That is the latest discovery of the curious results of motion.—Dr. S. R. Calthrop.

Superstitions of the Pueblos.

The Pueblos—commonly called Indians, but really descendants of the ancient Aztecs—have numerous superstitions. The eagle is a sacred bird with them—the winged throne of their emperor god, Montezuma, for whose promised second advent they still patiently wait. In any of the Pueblo cities you will find the great dark eagles, either tethered upon the housetops or penned in little corrals of cedar, and religiously tended. The Pueblo hunter always has marvelous luck, if he carries with him a tiny stone image of a coyote with a tiny arrowhead lashed to its side. Though nominally converted to Catholicism, the Pueblos are still secret but ardent fire worshipers. The snake, too, is sacred to them, and you will find its symbolic coils in their rock sculptures and on their quaint silver jewelry.—New Mexico Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Close Figuring in a Yacht Race.

Of the many schemes which were tried aboard the Volunteer to add a trifle to her speed in the international races one comes to public notice now and then. In a conversation the other day about the influence of "wiggles" on a yacht's speed Gen. Paine dropped a hint which showed how fine things were worked up on the Volunteer. It appears that during the Thistle races all the reef points were taken out of the Volunteer's mainsail to get rid of the resistance which they would cause. Then, to make the surface of the canvas as perfect as possible, the holes where the reef points had been were plugged with soap.—Boston Globe.

Miss Alcott to Young Authors.

Each must work in his own way, and the only drill needed is to keep writing and profit by criticism. Mind grammar, spelling and punctuation, use short words and express as briefly as you can your meaning. Young people use too many adjectives and try to "write fine." The strongest, simplest words are best, and no foreign ones if it can be helped. Write and print if you can; if not, still write and improve as you go on. Read the best books and they will improve your style. See and hear good speakers and wise people, and learn of them.—From a Private Letter in St. Nicholas

The Empress' Coronation Dress.

The empress of Russia has sent her coronation dress to the national museum. The mantle was literally cloth of gold, for it was a very supple gold tissue, with the heraldic eagle of the Romanoffs appliqued in black silk. On the breast of the bird was the arms of Moscow, the sacred city; on the wings those of the kingdoms over which the czar reigns and of the duchy of Finland. The train of the dress was also of gold tissue, richly embroidered, and the combined weight of so much metallic thread as was used in the dress and mantle caused great fatigue to the illustrious wearer.—Boston Transcript.

Oil of Peppermint.

Oil of peppermint in vapor diluted even to a part in 100,000 will kill cockroaches in an hour, they dying in convulsions. One drop of the oil placed under a bell jar covering a cultivation of cholera bacilli will kill both bacilli and spores in forty-eight hours. It is also regarded as among the best surgical antiseptics, and of great value in phthisis and diphtheria.—Boston Budget.

Two Kinds of Letters.

Roscoe Conkling, who, since his retirement from public life, scrupulously refrained from expressing his opinions otherwise than privately upon public—especially political—subjects, said: "Two kinds of letters bother a man most—those that he writes and those he does not write."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Cooking English Sparrows.

The Japanese students at Cornell university have a way of cooking English sparrows so that they make a very palatable dish, and the Japs like them so much that they make a standing offer of three cents apiece for all the sparrows brought to them.—New York Sun.

An American who has traveled for two years in Germany says he never heard one German ask another to solve a conundrum. They simply don't have any.

There is an Indian tribe in California consisting of one man. When he dies his language will cease to be spoken.

The Metaphysical Novel.

"In the hands of men entirely great," the metaphysical novel is great, indeed; but what is to be the outcome of a reckless handling of subjects of a metaphysical or semi-spiritual, semi-scientific character, by authors who have no other qualification than a vivid imagination and fervid language? If "it takes a clever man to be a fool," it certainly takes a clever and learned man to write a respectable novel, in which second sight, hypnotism, magnetism or spiritualism takes a leading part. But the list of such books increases alarmingly.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very numerous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Cholera is making ravages in Cochin China and Cambodia.

J. H. Jackson, of Croton, N. Y., writes that Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry cured his wife of lung difficulty, with spitting of blood, after she had been under a physician's care for more than a year and used many remedies without avail.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the the most distressing, nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cures of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

The eight hour letter carrier service has been inaugurated at Washington.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

Do Not Think for a Moment

That catarrh will in time wear out. The theory is false. Men try to believe it because it would be pleasant if true, but it is not, as all know. Do not let an acute attack of cold in the head remain unsubdued. It is liable to develop into catarrh. You can rid yourself of the cold and avoid all chance of catarrh by using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. If already afflicted rid yourself of this troublesome disease speedily by the same means. FAILURE OF CROPS is an unknown experience in Central and North Dakota and Minnesota. Maps and full particulars regarding lands, prices, etc., sent free. Address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass Agt., St. Paul, Minn. ?

GO WEST. 18,000,000 acres of the Montana Indian Reservation just opened for settlement near Great Falls, Ft. honestly admit that they can't cure Rheumatism and Neuralgia. Others say they can but—don't. Athlophoros says nothing but—cures. That's the secret of its success. Years of trial have proved it to be a quick, safe, sure cure.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 3, 1887.

In my own family Athlophoros was used as a last resort, the user having suffered from rheumatism for years and having been treated for the disease by different physicians in this State and Massachusetts without even temporary relief. Upon my recommendation some of people have used this remedy with the same results claimed for it. G. H. WILSON.

The Army of Germany.

According to the latest reports Germany can put upon the field in case of an emergency 2,960,000 soldiers who have been thoroughly drilled, and 3,480,000 more who have some knowledge of the art of bearing arms, making a total of 6,440,000 men.—Boston Budget.

Ploughing the Waves.

A storm at sea means inevitable seasickness for ocean travellers. The vibration of a steamer's screw, even, is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparable tranquilizer of sea-sick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveller, tourist or invalid should be without in "crossing the briny," or making a tedious land journey. No unmedicated stimulant of commerce is comparable for efficacy to the great invigorant. Emigrants to the west pronounce it a reliable preventive of malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and miasma-tainted vapors give rise. It renders brackish water drinkable and harmless, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney troubles and rheumatism.

A man was kicked to death in Parkman, Me., July 4th, in a drunken brawl.

Fortify the system, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, against the diseases peculiar to hot weather. This medicine induces a healthy action of the stomach, liver and kidneys, causing them to prevent the accumulation of the poisons which produce disease.

Numerous business rascalities are reported from Montreal.

"Dr. F. W. Kinsman: Dear Sir—For fifteen years the students under my care have used Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam, and have found it second to no other remedy for throat and lung troubles."

A storm of wind and rain did $100,000 damage in the Lackawanna valley last Thursday.

People with thin heads of hair should use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer to make the hair grow out thick, healthy and strong.

Personal.

A young lady of seventeen summers, highly educated, refined, and of prepossessing appearance, desires to form the acquaintance of some unusually nice young man, whom she would advise, if troubled with dyspepsia, to use that great blood purifier, Sulphur Bitters.

The salary of the Newmarket postmaster has been raised from $1100 to $1200 per annum.

Peculiar.

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. GROOMING THE IRON STEEDS.

The Routine Work That Is Done in a Railroad Roundhouse.

A locomotive roundhouse, with its grim, steel armored giants resting from their labor, is an object of irresistible attraction to Sunday strollers along the river front near the Union station. If a visitor happens to be accompanied by an inquisitive small boy, he will find that there are many things about a roundhouse which are not comprehended in a youth's definition in school the other day, "a place where they keep engines." Instead of being dreary as a carriage house, it is as lively as a race horse stable. It is 8 o'clock in the evening, and that the New York express has just departed on its way to Boston. Soon the big express locomotive No. 128 will slowly back down the yard, and switch off down a side alley, as it were, toward the great roundhouse. Rumbling slowly down the grade, it will stop at a gigantic coal heap, where a half dozen dusky figures are ready with shovels, and at once they begin to send the coal in showers into the tender. Meanwhile the fireman and engineer have climbed down from the cab, their day's work done, and have started homeward. In their place has climbed a short, burly man, whose professional name is "hostler," and the big machine is in his charge from this time till the next morning. After the weight of the tender has been increased to several tons by the efforts of the shovelers, the "hostler" slowly runs his charge to the turntable, and the steed is prepared to go to bed for the night.

"Waiting on the table" is not the most inviting occupation, to be judged by the back straining and "leg achy" process of turning a thirty ton locomotive half round, and the "waiters," instead of having dapper white aprons and clean napkins, are equipped with oily overalls, greasy caps and big boots. Indeed, they are the same set who were seen viciously shoveling at the coal pile a moment ago, and have followed the engine into the house to continue their attention. They bear the name of "wipers" and the occupation from which the term is derived will soon be seen. When the engine has "pulled in" to its stall, two bulkheads in the front of the boiler are unscrewed, and two men, sticking long probes into the hole, begin to ram up and down with might and main. This is to get the "sparks out of her," and the torturing process lasts fully fifteen minutes, the bright showers falling from the box into the pit. Meanwhile the "wipers" are not idle. Armed with big bunches of waste soaked with black oil to prevent rust, they rub and scrub vigorously, and soon the effect of their work begins to be seen, for the big locomotive looks as shining and sleek as a racer fresh from the stable.

The "hostler" meanwhile has "banked" the fire, and, after pouring nine buckets of fine sand into the sand box on the boiler, the traveler is left to slumber on a warm bed—warm, for in the pit underneath runs a network of steam pipes, giving a temperate heat, the effect of which is shown by the dripping of the melting ice, if the weather is cold. No. 129 rests peacefully; a smothered snore now and then is the only indication that a spark of life remains in the machine. Early in the morning the locomotive is awakened by the "hostler," who vigorously pokes the fire, and soon the steam is sizzling at a lively rate. About an hour before the train time the "hostler" pulls the engine out, and after making up the train, the engineer and fireman reappear and No. 129 starts out for its day's run of 376 miles.

Like every big barn, a roundhouse has its annexes in the front yard. Near the entrance to the establishment there is a woodshed, a sand house, and an oil cubby. The latter is part of the old roundhouse and the inside arrangements resemble a well regulated kitchen. Near a sink in one corner are seen three brass handled pumps, which connect with three big tanks underneath the floor, which have a capacity of several barrels of oil each. In one of these tanks is the lard oil for drilling in the shops, in another the valve oil for the engines, and in another still is the "engine oil" proper. Besides these substances is the kerosene or headlight oil in a tank by itself. In a little back room is the big pile of waste, and the whole establishment is in charge of a responsible servant of the road, who parcels out the material to the foreman of the roundhouse as he requires. The sand house is also a modest brick structure in which a pile of sand is heaped about a large stove, to be perfectly dried before being sifted, and right opposite is the gigantic woodshed whose pile is replenished every day with a car load. There are, of course, two gangs of hands who have charge night and day respectively, and, taken all together, a jollier, healthier, and more hard working set of men it would be hard to find the whole road over.—Springfield Republican.

Inside of a Japanese House.

While the banto was gone to prepare other things for us to look at the hostess invited us to walk over the house. We were shown the proper cha-no-ma; the family altar, with its image of Buddha in a heavily gilt shrine, and the brass incense burner, flower vase and stork candlestick, and the various living rooms of the family. They were all scrupulously clean, the fresh looking yellow mats giving a cool effect that was most pleasing at this season, although highly suggestive of cold and discomfort in winter, for any means of producing artificial heat were sentirely wanting, if I except the hibachi or brazier, over which the people cower when they are cold. Habit stands them instead of furnaces, stoves and fireplaces.

The feature of all these rooms which struck us most forcibly was the absence of furniture and ornaments. The woodwork of the walls, sliding screens that serve for doors and windows, ceilings and staircases, was very elaborately carved, and evidently cost much money; but excepting a kake-mono in one or two, or a bit of bronze, the rooms contained nothing. One felt constantly as if inspecting a new house, and disposed to say: "How comfortable this will be when the furniture, pictures and hangings are brought in!" Yet the family is a very rich one, and possesses treasures of art that made us almost green with envy.—Professor J. K. Goodrich in The Cosmopolitan.

THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY.

Taking the Leaf to Market—The Process of Curing the Weed.

There is no happier being on earth than the negro farmer riding into a southern town behind a half starved steer, with a load of tobacco in his prairie schooner. It represents the product of a small patch in a favored part of his farm, but it may bring him $1,000 or more.

At one of the sales at Durham, the busy little town in the center of the bright yellow North Carolina tobacco belt, or the Golden belt, as they call it, a gray haired old colored man stood watching the crowd of buyers as they bid against each other on the piles that represented his crop. As the amount rose higher and higher his eyes grew larger and larger, his limbs shook, and he changed his quid of tobacco from side to side so quickly that he didn't have a chance to chew it. When the price reached $1,300 he could no longer contain himself, but shouted: "Stop right there, gemmans; dat's enough! Dis nigga can't stand no more. Never had so much money in all my born days." And he might well be surprised, for his old steer had drawn it all to the sales warehouse at one load.

These tobacco auctions are lively spectacles. In one of the largest warehouses in Durham as many as 1,000 piles of tobacco are laid out at one sale. The auctioneer steps from pile to pile as he sells, the buyers following him. He never says a word about the quality of the leaf, but simply rattles off the figures, never stopping till the pile is knocked down. The buyers know the quality as soon as their eyes rest on it. Occasionally they will run their hands into a pile, select a bunch and feel of it, but usually pile after pile is sold without a person touching it. The rapidity of the selling is remarkable. The bids run right along, each bidder knowing just what he is doing. These bidders are the most expert men in the business and represent houses in the surrounding section and distant manufacturers and dealers. The New York and all the foreign markets are represented at all the tobacco sales in Durham, N. C., and Lynchburg and Danville, Va.

The North Carolina bright yellow tobacco industry has proved a mine of wealth to the planters. When Sherman's army stopped near Durham the boys got some of the tobacco to smoke in their pipes. They were so delighted with it that when they reached their homes they sent for more. The tobacco thus got the best kind of advertising.

The crop is a troublesome one to handle. There are three kinds of worms that like to feed upon it; of these the horn worm likes the plant so well that it has to be picked off by hand, and the field hands go searching for it by lantern light at night. Then the matter of curing the leaf is a very delicate one. A whole crop may be spoiled altogether or precipitated several grades lower in the scale by a little carelessness or unskillfulness in regulating the heat. The barns are usually seventeen and a half feet square, just holding 450 sticks. The heat is raised from the yellowing heat at the rate of 5 degs. every two hours. When the heat reaches 135 degs. it is kept there twelve hours. It is then raised 5 degs. every hour and a half until it gets to 180 degs., which cures both stem and stalk in a short time.

Kentucky, with her 171,000,000 pounds of tobacco, equals the next four highest states. Leaving out Virginia's 79,000,000 pounds, Kentucky's product equals those of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee, North Carolina, Maryland, Connecticut and Missouri, which are the principal tobacco states, although New York looms up with the respectable product of 6,481,431, Massachusetts 5,369,426, Indiana 8,872,842 and Illinois 8,935,825 pounds.—New York Press.

Treatment for Bee Stings.

It is a common mistake to suppose that an angry bee is certain to sting on alighting upon a human hand. On the contrary, she will always examine the skin very carefully first with the palpi—very delicate and nervous feeling organs, which are situated near the sting. It may seem that she stings at once, and without care or reflection; but a bee can do a great deal in a very short space of time, in proof of which it may be mentioned that "she can flap her wings more than 400 times per second, and that each flap involves the extension and contraction, through a nerve impulse, of the muscles employed in the wing movements." This being the case, as Mr. Cheshire says, "we shall see at once that the 'no time' difficulty is removed." When a person has been stung by a bee, he should remove the sting immediately, "if possible, by the nail, running it in the direction opposite to that by which it has entered." On no account let him take hold of the sting with his thumb and finger or a forceps, for then he will probably squeeze more of the virus into the wound from the poison bag, which is generally left attached to the sting.

Although the virus of a bee sting is a strong acid, it does not always follow that an alkali will cure it. Much depends upon the temperament and constitution of the patient, and while arnica montana and ledum palustre will give relief in many cases, in others they are injurious. We may discuss the subject of bee stings by giving the young beekeeper two pieces of comfort—the first, that at swarming times bees are nearly always in an exceedingly good temper; the second, that each time he is stung he will probably become less susceptible to the effects of bee poison.—Saturday Review.

An Automatic Medicine Dispenser.

An American manufacturer of sugar coated pills added to the attractions of an exhibit of his product in London an ingenious piece of mechanism, which might have been intended to represent the pharmacist of the future. It was in the form of a cabinet provided with a series of knobs or buttons, each inscribed with the name of some malady for which a remedy might be asked. The customer puts a coin into a slit and presses the button calling for the remedy he requires, when immediately a drawer flies out containing the article sought. This automatic dispenser of course makes no mistakes. If the customer accidentally presses the wrong button, he alone is responsible for the error. Is this really what we are coming to?—Scientific American.

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, those wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worse cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate diseases. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1888: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good."

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a well-known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 115 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

FOR PRESIDENT,

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have constantly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught us that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, a the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The Republican Tariff Bill.

A special to the New York Commercial Advertiser from Washington says that the bill to be proposed by the republicans in the senate as a substitute for the Mills bill will make a greater net reduction of revenues than the Mills bill, though it will be framed on protective principles. Almost every article on the chemical list will suffer some reduction. The duty on carpet wools will probably be removed, and the objectionable classification as to worsted will be remedied, but the woollen schedule as a whole is not likely to be greatly changed. The committee is inclined to abolish all duties on sugar, and substitute bounties therefor. As to the metal schedules no decision has yet been made. The internal revenue tax on tobacco will be abandoned, and that on spirits reduced one-half. The total reduction of revenue is estimated at nearly $100,000,000.

Gen. Sheridan.

The United States steamer Swatara arrived at New York on the 6th inst., from Washington via Delaware breakwater with Gen. Sheridan on board, and anchored in the upper bay off Liberty island. The doctors reported that he slept well the previous night and showed general improvement. He was anxious to get to Nonquitt as soon as possible. General Scofield and a party from Governor's island visited the Swatara in the evening, and were permitted to call on General Sheridan in the cabin for a few minutes. They found the patient on his swinging cot, bright and cheerful, and feeling better for his journey. The Swatara sailed from New York for New Bedford, via Long Island sound, at 7:45 o'clock A. M. on the 7th. She reached New London after a pleasant run made in slow time, and anchored for the night. At New London the doctors reported the general patient as doing finely.

Naval Intelligence.

Lieut. Emory H. Taunt, sentenced some months ago by a court martial to be dismissed from the navy for misconduct, has after a long period of hard work with the department by his influential friends been allowed to resign, and his resignation was handed in on June 29th, and accepted, to take effect the next day.

Paymaster Frank H. Hinman has been relieved from duty at the Norfolk navy yard, and placed on sick leave for four months, on recommendation of a medical board of survey.

Chief Engineer John W. Moore and family arrived at Vallejo, Cal., June 30th, and take up their residence in the engineer's quarters at the Mare island navy yard on the 9th inst., on which date Chf. Engr. Moore relieves from duty Chf. Engr. Kutz.

The Pullman train from Boston was an hour and a quarter late in arriving at this station on Sunday evening, owing to the breaking of a connecting rod on the left hand side of the engine just after leaving the Greenland station. A shifting engine went out and brought in the train, after which the engine Longfellow was coupled on in place of the disabled one, the Mayflower, and the train proceeded.

The Messrs. Cotton of Farmington, managers of the Wilson house in that town, are the new lessees of the Webster house on Vaughan street, this city. They are said to be practical and efficient hotel conductors.

Tourists can find the Preston specialties, and many simple remedies from Preston's Portsmouth Pharmacy, at the leading seashore and mountain hotels in New Hampshire.

The orchestra of the Appledore house goes on duty this morning. It consists of five ladies and two gentlemen, the musical director and leader being Miss Fannie P. Hoyt of Newington, the favorite young violinist. There will be as good music at Appledore this season as during any previous one.

Complaint is made by some of the boat fishermen of the south end of the population of their traps. It is not generally done by grown persons, but by small boys who wish to enjoy fishing operations. The fishermen should not tempt them by the exposure of their gear.

There were fine displays of fire-works at the Ocean, Atlantic and Thompson hotels and many private cottages at York beach on the evening of the 4th; and there was a hop at the Ocean house.

Mr. James H. Nowell of the Scotland district, York, is building a two-story dwelling for his own occupancy.

"I am sorry to hear, Willie," said the minister, reproachfully, "that you spent Sunday fishing." "So am I," responded Willie penitently; "I didn't catch a fish."

Drinking Ice Water.

That cool, refreshing drinks in warm weather are delicious is undeniable. That drinking ice water in copious draughts when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is deniable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhoea or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

Peter Reed of Rockville, Pa., an employe on the new railroad bridge of the Eastern railroad across the Merrimac river at Newburyport, was drowned on the afternoon of the 6th inst. He was working on the top of the bridge, made a misstep and fell into the river. He was twenty-one years old.

Individual suits by many hundred holders of Boston & Troy railroad bonds will be at once commenced against the Fitchburg railroad, which absorbed the former road in April, 1887, since which time no interest has been paid on the bonds.

The hearing for a new trial for Stain and Cromwell commenced in Bangor, Me., on the 5th inst., before Chief Justice Peters. Attorney L. A. Baker represented the defence, and Attorney General Baker and County Attorney Appleton the government. A large number of witnesses were examined.

The strike of the brewers' union at Cincinnati was formally declared "off" on the 6th inst., after continuing three months. The strike was not against the employers, but against all workingmen not in the "union" ring; and the strikers were beaten from the start, as was proper.

By a boiler explosion in Alleghany City, Pa., July 6th, six persons were hurt, three fatally.

The Languages of Birds.

Shall we never master the language of beasts, as even the parrot and the starling will in their own automatic way master portions of ours? To a certain extent this has been accomplished. A hunter tries to imitate by his "calls" the cries of the animals he is luring to their destruction, and is often successful in an exact ratio to his skill in this rough acquaintance with the speech of the lower animals. Mr. Henderson, an American "gunner," has managed to set the cries of some of the game birds in musical notation, and finds that they are quite as uniform as are the same words spoken by different persons. They have their songs of love as well as exclamations of fear and defiance. The quail has one set of notes when it is "a proud, happy, and affectionate father," and another when in the autumn he is sounding the "assembly" in order to tell the scattered birds of the chosen rendezvous for the covey. Every other bird has, in like manner, language suitable for different occasions, and the clever sportsman can often easily wile the birds within range.

Some songs, like some human languages, are more difficult than others. The spotted sandpiper's is much easier than that of the yellow leg, while the English snipe is a moody bird, which speaks only in its unmusical squeak when it is startled, and springs into flight. Hence a musician can readily write it down. The song birds—the robins, the thrush, the nightingales, and so forth—have, however, a far more complicated tongue, and Mr. Cheney, who has reported some of their melodies, finds the task by no means simple. Some of these songs are stereotyped, but on more than one occasion the songsters have been noticed to extemporize when the mood took them. For example, the song often varies before and after rain, in spring and autumn; while one of the redbreast's songs is to the same tune as that to which the spinning girls sang fifty years ago while reeling their yarn. —London Standard.

The Man and the Boy.

Boys are quick to learn, and you have only to get them interested in a thing to teach them how to do it. When you set them at a new piece of work, explain it to them. Tell them not only how to do this or that thing, but why you do it. Explain the reasons for it, and set them to thinking for themselves. Encourage them to be self reliant, and when they have done anything well, give them the credit to which they are entitled. Treat the boy as if he were man—for he is, on a smaller scale than yourself—and he will act like a man. Take him into your confidence, and make a companion of him, and he will surprise you by his manliness and his sensible ideas. These ideas may be crude, but the germ of sense is in them, and it is your duty to assist in their development in every way.

Too many men make their boys feel that they are of little or no account while they are boys. Lay a responsibility on a boy, and he will meet it in a manful spirit. On no account ignore their disposition to investigate. Help them to understand things. Encourage them to know what they are about. We are too apt to treat a boy's seeking after knowledge as mere idle curiosity. "Don't ask questions," is poor advice to boys. If you do not explain puzzling things to them, you oblige them to make experiments before they find out, and, though experimental knowledge is best, in one sense, in another it is not, for that which can be explained clearly does not need experimenting with. If the principle involved is understood, there is no further trouble, and the boy can go ahead intelligently. — Eben E. Rexford in American Agriculturist.

Anecdote of Mlle. Rachel.

When Rachel Felix, afterward the world renowned Mlle. Rachel, the chiefest glory of the French stage, was a child and newly come to the Paris Conservatoire, she solicited M. Provost, a sociétaire of the Comedie Francaise, to give her private lessons in acting. M. Provost looked at the sallow and unattractive girl and rather brutally reminded her of her previous vocation by a tart recommendation to abandon her ambition and go and sell nosegays.

Long afterward the great tragedienne had her revenge. She was playing Hermione. The theatre was filled, and the genius and the thought of Paris united to do honor to their illustrious countrywoman. Hermione was called and recalled, and her Grecian tunic was filled with the flowers which enthusiastic admirers had launched at her. In the midst of her panting triumph she ran after M. Provost, dropped a courtesy and said:

"I have followed your counsel, Monsieur Provost, and I sell nosegays. Will you buy one?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Scourge of Southern France.

The mistral is the northwest wind, which is the scourge of the south of France in winter and spring. The mountain ranges of the Cevennes being covered with snow, and the shores of the Mediterranean being many degrees warmer, the icy cold air rolls down the slopes of the mountains with terrific violence, and, invading Provence and Languedoc, destroys the vineyards, uproots trees, throws down buildings, and is so intensely dry that it withers every green thing. According to Strabo the melamboreas precipitated men from their chariots and stripped them of their arms and vestments. Locally the saying is that the three plagues of the country are the parliament, the mistral, and the Durance.—Longman's Magazine.

The Fibers of Wool.

Why does not wool felt on the sheep's back? The answer is simple. Because all the fibers are lying one way. The serratures always point in the direction away from the root of the fiber, and thus they cannot fit into each other any more than two saw edges pointing the same way could interlock, or than two fir cones could stick together if both lay in the same direction. But reverse one of them and then try to draw it past the other while touching it, and they will at once become fastened together. In like manner, during the various processes of manufacture, the fibers of wool are pulled about in every direction, and thus their edges are placed with many of the points facing each other and ready to seize hold when the felting operation begins.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

Oysters for a Cough.

An experienced vocalist has, it is said, during fourteen years, cured any number of cases of obstinate cough by prescribing the free use of raw oysters as a diet. The remedy is easily tried.—Exchange.

Gen. Booth announces that the Salvation Army conducts 9,100 processions through the streets of the United Kingdom every week, or an average of 1,300 daily.

The latest figures show that there are 16,447,990 Sunday school scholars in the world.

COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

Benjamin W. Adams, of Canaan, was brought before United States Commissioner Hackett last week by Marshal Barker, upon a complaint of an officer of the internal revenue department charging him with falsely representing himself to be a revenue officer of the United States, with intent to defraud Mr. Snow of Wentworth. Adams was in the Second New Hampshire Volunteers in the war, and claims that from certain infirmities caused by sunstroke he is at times unconscious of his acts. Although he was not a very bright actor in the role of officer he succeeded in obtaining loans of small sums, and stirred up several persons in Rumney and other towns, who may or may not have sold cider or liquors without paying the special tax. The evidence was such that he was held by the commissioner in $1000, and for want of bail was committed to the jail at Concord to await the action of the grand jury at the Circuit court in October. Frink, United States att'y, for the government; Hatch for Adams.

FIRE.

About quarter to four o'clock, Sunday morning, an alarm of fire was pulled in from Box 28, located at the junction of Broad street and Lincoln avenue. The cause of the alarm was a fire which started in the barn of Mr. John H. Hutchinson on Spring street, on the opposite side of that street from the rear of his homestead lot, and which before it was gotten under control destroyed the building in which it originated and the barn of Mr. Henry T. Ridge close by, and slightly scorched Mr. Ridge's house. Mr. Ridge's nice furniture was all removed from the house, and of course suffered severely by the operation. The fire department responded promptly, but there was no water of any account to be had nearer than the Madison street reservoir, necessitating laying of long lines of hose and causing much delay before a stream could be got on the fire. Fortunately a brisk wind was blowing in a direction to partially carry the flames from the house; had it been a few points more to the westward Mr. Ridge's house and Mr. Pearson's must have gone, and Mr. Jacob Chrisenton's on the opposite side of Broad street from Mr. Pearson's could hardly have been saved. How the fire was started is not known, but a tramp is supposed to have caused it. Mr. Ridge's horses, hogs and carriages were saved, but a large lot of hay was burned, and one dog; another dog, which was tied in the barn cellar, was got out after the fire was subdued, apparently unhurt, the lower floor not having been destroyed.

It is a grievous wrong that this important and rapidly growing part of the city should be utterly neglected so far as protection from fire is concerned. There is in the "new part of the town" more than half a million of assessed (and duly taxed) property liable to destruction by fire, and the only protection vouchsafed by the city is a fire-alarm box! This box is a good thing, so far as it goes; but it is of no great value to extinguish a fire, and the man or men whose property was on fire would probably find it out without the aid of the fire alarm. Money is freely expended on matters of far less importance to the city than this; but with the best of facilities for the construction of a good reservoir in that section, when a fire occurs the firemen cannot get water upon it without laying two thousand feet of hose. It is all right to build costly sewers and improve suburban roads; it is not all right, in order to do this, to deprive hundreds of citizens of the protection of a fire department which they are taxed to support.

ACCIDENTAL.

On the 4th, while several boys were playing with a box containing a pound of powder it was accidentally ignited, and a boy by the name of George Herbert received the most of the charge in the face, causing him to have brain fever, from which he died Sunday afternoon. The other boys, named Dunn and Killenbeck, were badly burned about the face, but are doing well. The deceased was about fifteen years old, and came in from the Shoals, where he was employed in one ter.

On the evening of the 7th a team containing Mrs. Carrie Swain was run into near Sagamore bridge by another team, throwing Mrs. Swain out, breaking one of her ribs and injuring her otherwise. She was taken to her home on Water street, and medical aid summoned. The team was badly smashed.

Mrs. Michael J. Ryan, who was badly injured on the 16th of February last, by being thrown from a sleigh at the Vaughan street crossing of the Boston & Maine railroad, in consequence of the piling up of the snow and ice there at that time, has brought suit against that corporation for damages. Mrs. Ryan has been an invalid from rheumatism ever since. She is now recovering by the use of a Foradic electric battery.

NOTICE---BILLS JULY 4th.

All persons having bills against the committee of July 4th, are requested to at once present them to persons contracting them, or to the chief marshal for approval.

It is desired to settle accounts before the 10th inst. ANDREW P. PRESTON, Chief Marshal.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.

The Rockingham County Temperance Association will have a grand rally at the Hedding Camp ground in Epping on Thursday, July 12th. There will be addresses by Rev. H. S. Fisk, Rev. W. P. Clancy, Rev. H. M. Penniman, and Mrs. N. H. Knox, president of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U. All are urged to attend, and bring Gospel Hymns. The exercises will open at 9:30 A. M., and there will be a basket collation at noon.

GIVEN UP.

The proposed excursion of the Maine Historical Society to Kittery on the 11th inst., has been abundant for this yerr, in consequence of a misunderstanding on the part of the general ticket agent of the Boston & Maine railroad. Mr. Flanders offered a reasonable rate for transportation from Portland to Kittery, but required the committee of arrangements to guarantee a party of fifty. That was, of course, impossible. The members of the society are scattered over the whole state. They cannot be consulted, and it is impossible for any committee to know or to ascertain their engagements or plans for the 11th, or indeed for any given date. The condition imposed by Mr. Flanders was impracticable, and the committee has given notice that the field day for 1888 is indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Wm. E. Noyes was in to see us on Sunday for the first time in nearly two weeks, he not having been out of the house for a week, except for an hour on the 4th to see the procession pass. He is still suffering from the effects of blood poisoning which followed the puncturing of his right thumb with a pen.

Mr. Charles H. Mendum and wife passed Sunday in Winchester, Mass., with their son, Mr. Wm. J. Mendum.

Mr. Charles F. Vaughan and wife, of Manchester, passed the 4th in this city with Mrs. Wm. A. Vaughan of Manning street.

Mr. J. Loring Jones of Brooklyn arrived on Saturday for his usual summer visit to his native city.

Mr. William Entwistle and family of Lewiston, Me., and Mr. William Knight and wife of Waltham, Mass., are visiting at Mr. Thomas Entwistle's on Cabot street.

Mr. E. R. Goodwin, formerly principal of the Portsmouth high school, and late of the high school in Manchester, has resigned the latter position to take charge of the high school in Lawrence, Mass., having been elected to that position at a salary of $2500.

Hon. Wm. E. Chandler and wife are guests of Mrs. Kinsley, Mrs. Chandler's sister, at Little Boar's Head.

Mrs. Wingate, wife of Commander George E. Wingate of the navy, is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. R. Holbrook of Court street.

Mrs. George Hartwell of New York is visiting relatives in this city.

Mr. Wm. T. Raynes of Lowell passed Sunday in this city.

Mr. Francis Parkman of Boston is passing July with his daughter, Mrs. J. T. Coolidge, at the Gov. Wentworth mansion at Little Harbor.

Mr. S. R. Niles and wife and Mr. E. G. Niles and wife, of Boston, are at Wentworth Hall, Jackson.

Mrs. John N. Sherburne and Miss Eva Sherburne, of Boston, arrived last week at their summer residence on Daniel season.

Mr. Charles H. Morss, superintendent of schools, and family, left this city Saturday morning for Middleboro, Mass., where Mr. Morss will pass the summer vacation.

Charles Charlton Coffin of Boston was the guest of Prof. M. G. Farmer at Eliot on the 4th of July.

MARITIME NOTES.

The German schoolship Ariadne arrived at Boston on the 6th inst. from Newport, R. I. She has 250 apprentices for the German navy on board, and is armed with six guns. She will remain at Boston for a few days and then sail for this naval station.

Charles Caswell came in from the Shoals on Saturday with 270 lobsters, which were delivered to Capt. Joseph Preble of Newcastle, and were forwarded to the New York market.

It is reported that the steamer Pinafore, now running between Appledore and Star islands, has been sold by Laighton Brothers to Capt. Cheney, of the gondola Edgar Weston, who will commence making trips with her up river early in September. Capt. Cheney intends to have a new gondola built the coming fall, for general freighting purposes.

The American ship Farragut, Hardwick master, 1548 tons register, built at Newburyport, Mass., in 1876, and owned in Boston, sailed from Calcutta from New York on the 20th of January last, and is now so long overdue and unheard from that all hope of her safety has been given up. Advices received at Queenstown, Ireland, on the 6th inst., report that the wreck of a large wooden ship, believed to be the Farragut, was passed recently about 1500 miles from Calcutta. Capt. Hardwick's wife, who was with him on this voyage, was formerly Miss Katie Hill of this city, daughter of Capt. James M. Hill. One of Capt. Hardwick's children, a daughter, was also on the ship; his other child is with Mrs. Hardwick's sister, Mrs. Nowell, in New York.

The boys of the training ship Portsmouth, or a good part of them, were ashore on liberty Saturday, and comported themselves in a proper manner generally. They are a well appearing set of young men.

The schooner J. Frank Seavey, the latest addition to the Dover Navigation Co.'s fleet, was launched at Bath, Me., last week, and will soon be ready for business. She will be commanded by Capt. Gustavus Kelley, and carry a crew of seven men, all told; she will load ice at a Maine port for Philadelphia, where she will take on about 400 tons of coal for Dover.

The schooner July Fourth went ashore at Cuttyhunk on the 4th of July, and on the 6th was high and dry at low water. She was floated on the 7th, after part of her cargo had been jettisoned, and was taken to New Bedford, leaking badly.

The U. S. S. Enterprise, before reported ashore at Drabok, Norway, arrived at Christiania on the 6th inst., having been hauled afloat by a Swedish ironclad. It was at first intended to dock her, but as she was making no water and appeared to be uninjured, it was decided to continue the cruise.

The British schooner Mower struck on the rocks near Matinicus, July 4th, slid off, and went down in twenty fathoms of water; vessel and cargo a total loss; crew reached Rockland, Me., on the night of the 5th, in their own boat. The schooner was bound from New York to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, her home port, with 215 tons of coal.

The "Acme" coffee advertised by Charles E. Laighton & Son is unsurpassed for strength and flavor. It is sold roasted and ground, in two-pound cans of full weight at seventy cents each. We find no better coffee in the market.

An investigation into the cause of the fire at the Webster house on Vaughan street, Friday morning, was commenced Friday and continued on Saturday.

The Great Falls correspondent of the Dover Democrat says the 4th was a much more quiet day in that town than the Sundays usually are. Most of the town was in this city that day.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia, I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

ODD NOTIONS OF BARBERS.

Shaving as an Art—How an Apprentice Learns the Trade.

There are two superstitions yet found among barbers. Years ago barbers were among the most superstitious of workmen. If he cut a man on Monday, the barber was sure he would cut seven men before Sunday. If the first customer in the morning complimented him, he would get little but grumbles and curses for the rest of the day. If he didn't receive at least one tip above the regular fees on Monday the week would be a bad one. These beliefs are rapidly disappearing. There are two curious facts about razors, though, that still give rise to general superstitions, and probably always will. It is noticed that after long continuous use it is difficult to give a razor an edge. The knowing hand will quietly lay it away with the remark that the razor is "tired" and "needs rest." After letting it "sleep" a few days—that is, simply not using it, the razor is found to be in good condition. Few barbers attempt to explain this. But the explanation is simple. The edge of a razor consists of a series of microscopic teeth. Long continuous use wears these down, despite stroppings, and it needs the oxidation which time only can provide to bring out again the microscopic roughness. Another peculiarity of the razor is that, though in splendid condition when last used, it sometimes positively refuses to take an edge when put on the hone in the morning. A few hours later it will take an edge beautifully. This is due to the same principle of oxidation. Barbers will sometimes say a razor is "balky," by which they mean that it refuses to take an edge, although not made "tired" by long previous work. Some razors, because of peculiarities in the grades of steel, are more apt to be "balky" than others.

"Do barbers allow superstitions to affect their method of shaving?" was asked of a Broadway veteran.

"There is only one method of shaving," said the barber; "there never has been but one, and there never will be more. The barber rubs the lather into your stub until it clings to the face itself. To accomplish this he has first sponged your face with water to remove skin secretions. When first put on the lather sticks on top of the stub and does not touch the skin much. Rubbing brings it into the skin. It also softens the beard, and a barber always lathers you before he strops his razor, so as to give the lather time to get in its work. Then when he shaves you it is always with the grain. That is, every distinct portion of your face is shaved in the direction the hair grows. If this rule were not followed the toughest skin would, an hour later, show abrasions, and eruptions would come. After the face is once shaved, the barber shaves it again for closeness. This second shave may safely be against the grain. Most faces can stand the second shave against the grain, but there are some men with stiff beards, too, whose skin is so tender that they can only be shaved one way. The barber can never know positively from the appearance or touch of a skin whether or not it can stand the second shave. That is something the owner of the face must discover by experience. So when he shaves a stranger, unless he is sure he has a tough skin, the barber asks, after the first shave, if the man desires it close. The razor is placed nearly flat with the face. The free hand draws every bit of skin tight before he shaves over it. Some barbers pick up the skin between their fingers, others merely press it tight. Practically, though, every barber the world over shaves the same way.

"He has no room, therefore, to bring in superstitions, so bound is he by the recognized principles of the art, except in such little details as beginning the shave on the right or left side of the face, shaving the upper lip before or after the chin, and other things of that kind. Every barber has some little maxims of his own about these unimportant items, and some believe that bad luck attends the man who doesn't shave every face in precisely the same manner regarding these little details."

"How do men learn to be barbers?" was asked of a barber who shaves lawyers and bankers in Wall street.

"You've got to pay for it," said the barber. "Here and there you will find a barber who keeps a sort of school, and charges a round price to give lessons. They allow the learners to practice when they gain a little deftness on the chins of unsuspecting chance customers. Generally, though, a boy who wants to be a barber is bound out to a regular barber for two years. The barber exacts $25 or more a year and the boy's entire service. In return he boards and lodges him, and makes him a good barber. My own experience is a fair sample case. I was only 14 when I was bound to a barber not in this city. I paid $25 cash down, and got half a bed and poor board. They put me on lathering first. Lathering looks easy, and is easy, too; but you've no idea how awkwardly a new man will go about it. So, when there were no customers around my boss would have one of the workmen lie down in a chair and set me to lathering his face. There is a knack in getting over a scapy face deftly and quickly. Sometimes you use your fingers, other times the palm. An even pressure is required that isn't easy to get. If you press too hard you make it uncomfortable for the man you're lathering. The boss stood over me in these lessons and taught me the points, one at a time. Then I lathered the face of a customer while the boss got ready to shave him. For several months I had to stand behind the boss' chair while he was shaving and watch every motion of his hand and wrist—for a barber only uses the hand and wrist in shaving. Then, after shaving an imaginary face or two under the eyes of a barber to show me the way a razor is held and moved, I was put to practice on the faces of the employes. My boss stood over me and watched every motion. Then he made me shave him. I trembled so that I cut him. It was a long, long time before they let me touch a customer, and then only when some good natured fellow who came often and knew me invited me to try my hand upon his chin. Once in the traces I got confidence and was a good barber. Then my boss had a good barber bound to him for over a year yet at no expense but board, and he was to get $25 to boot, too, which was what I had agreed to give him for the second year as well as the first."—New York Sun.

Gathering the Vanilla Bean.

The vanilla bean is the costliest bean on earth. It flourishes in Mexico, chiefly in Papantla and Misantla. It grows wild, and is gathered and marketed by the natives. Just as they come from the forests the beans sell at $10 or $12 per 1,000. After the beans are dried and cured they are worth from $7 to $12 per pound, according to quality. Last year the vicinity of Papantla alone exported 60,000,000 beans. They are used by druggists and confectioners, and are an important article of commerce.—Frank Leslie's.

Parisians Not All Frivolous.

Grace Greenwood says that all Parisian women are not frivolous, any more than all Boston women are profound. She does not believe that Anglo-Saxons enjoy a monopoly of home virtues an practical piety, and she does believe that the great majority of French wives are loyal, French mothers tender, French grandmothers and elderly maiden ladies devout.—Harper's Bazar.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Will and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise, doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

A Friend in Need.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing coughs and diseases of the lungs and throat? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, 1st Division New York Appraiser's Office.

I was troubled with catarrh in my head to an annoying extent for three years. After using one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm I was entirely cured. — Wm. J. Cline, Victor, N. Y.

The management of the Palermo mica mines at North Groton will shortly increase the working force to fifty men. When in full operation the mines have an output of about 58,000 pounds a month.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. New Style of Picture Frames.

The new picture frames of oak or chestnut shaded by the rubbing in of umber from very light at the inside to very dark at the outer edge are the latest fad in their line. They are especially effective when used around a tinted print of a shade nearly matching the inner edge of the frame. It is predicted, however, that they will soon become too common and go out of fashion. Some dealers in New York won't put such frames on pictures sold by them at all, claiming that the style violates artistic taste. As one dealer's a still more striking frame is having a run of popularity. It is of broad oak with real bars half an inch thick, colored to look like iron set across it from side to side. Imitation hinges on one side and a very real looking padlock on the other increases the resemblance to the barred door of a cage. With a picture of the head of a lion or other beast behind it, the effect is very startling, if not strictly artistic.—New York Sun.

Ploughing the Waves.

A storm at sea means inevitable seasickness for ocean travellers. The vibration of a steamer's screw, even, is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparable tranquilizer of sea-sick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveller, tourist or invalid should be without in "crossing the briny," or making a tedious land journey. No unmedicated stimulant of commerce is comparable for efficacy to the great invigorant. Emigrants to the west pronounce it a reliable preventive of malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and miasma-tainted vapors give rise. It renders brackish water drinkable and harmless, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney troubles and rheumatism.

Passed Asst. Engr. A. C. Engard is detached from the Ranger, and ordered home.

Fortify the system, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, against the diseases peculiar to hot weather. This medicine induces a healthy action of the stomach, liver and kidneys, causing them to prevent the accumulation of the poisons which produce disease.

Personal.

A young lady of seventeen summers, highly educated, refined, and of prepossessing appearance, desires to form the acquaintance of some unusually nice young man, whom she would advise, if troubled with dyspepsia, to use that great blood purifier, Sulphur Bitters.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We knew of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headach, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

Books Published Last Year.

The number of books published in this country last year was 4,437. This is something more than 2,000 less than were published in 1886, the difference resulting from the falling off in copyright books, and the increase in story newspapers and magazines. The cheap publication system is accountable for a good deal of this, but one is at a loss to know where the nearly 2,000 new publications of last year are all to be found.—Boston Herald.

ANTIQUITY OF THE TELEPHONE.

The Priests of India Have Used It for 2,000 Years.

"The principle of the telephone has been known for 2,000 years in India," was the rather incredible statement made the other night by Fred Amesbury, who has just returned to New York after a two years' sojourn in the land of striped tigers and wonderful fakirs. "I do not assert, mark you," continued Mr. Amesbury, "that they use the telephone as we use it, or that they have any system of general communication. What I do say is that the high caste people have a method of communicating with each other by vibratory action on a diaphragm, just as we do, but it is confined entirely to their temples, and its existence has remained a secret until within a very few years.

"I was in a town called Panj, about 200 miles from Madras, and while there became acquainted with an English officer named Harrington, who was a prime favorite with the natives because on one occasion he had saved a priest from drowning. He was a very genial, pleasant fellow, and had that peculiar magnetism about him that made and kept friends everywhere.

"It was through Harrington that I was enabled to learn the existence of telephone communication and to satisfy myself of its antiquity.

"There are two temples in the village about a mile apart. In the interior and on the ground floor of each is a small circular structure which is guarded day and night from the natives as well as from strangers, and is supposed to be the abiding place of the 'governing spirit,' but in reality is the terminus of the telephone line, which is laid underground from one building to the other.

"The superstitious natives regarded this little structure with the greatest awe and reverence, because they had seen demonstrated before their eyes—or rather ears—the power of this spirit to communicate with the other temple. They were required to make their offering in one building and make known their wishes and desires. Then immediately repairing to the second temple they would be informed of all they had said and done, although neither priest had left his post. This was regarded as a demonstration of the power of the spirit.

"We were unable to determine the composition of the wire that connected the two buildings. It was some kind of metal, but neither steel, copper nor brass, although it closely resembled the latter. The transmitter was of wood and about the size of the head of a flour barrel, and to establish connection, instead of ringing a bell, the person wishing to attract attention at the other end stood close to the curious looking thing and shouted, 'Ooey! ooey! ooey!'

"This was answered by a similar shout, which while faint was distinct and could be heard two feet away.

"After Harrington and I had gained the confidence of the priests—or, rather, after he had—we were given a carte blanche to do as we pleased, and we talked to each other from one temple to the other for more than an hour, and were enabled to make an incomplete investigation.

"We learned that the telephone that we saw had been in use for thirty years. The priests were very old men and they remembered that the line of communication had been renewed only once during their incumbency.

"They showed us the remains of worm eaten transmitters and wooden conduits that must have been hundreds of years old. They claimed that the system had been in existence since the creation, and laughed at us when we told them that the same principle has only been applied in England and America within the last dozen years. In every part of India and in Burmah this system of secret communication exists, although hundreds of travelers have never suspected it. I believe that it dates back fully 2,000 years."—New York Graphic Interview.

Russia's Political Offenders.

When a burglar, murderer or other common Russian felon has been tried, found guilty and sentenced to penal servitude, he is, as a rule, released from the solitary confinement in which he has been held pending trial, is allowed to mingle with other prisoners of the same penal grade, and is forwarded without unnecessary delay to Siberia. When, however, a political offender has been tried, found guilty and sentenced to penal servitude under the same code of laws, he is not released from solitary confinement, nor sent with reasonable promptness to Siberia, as he would be if he had merely killed his mother with an ax, but is thrown into a bomb proof casemate in what is known as the "penal servitude section" of the Petropavlovsk fortress, or into one of the smaller cells of a "central convict prison," and there lies in solitude and wretchedness for one, two, three, or even five years, before he finally goes insane or is sent to the convict mines of Kara.—George Kennan in The Century.

THE "HARMONITE" COMMUNITY.

An aged Economite approaches us, coming slowly down the shaded pathway. He is feeble, but his dark eyes are very bright. His portly frame is clad in the usual suit of blue, and he wears the broad brimmed hat. There are pigs in the field beside him; he tosses them an apple over the fence. They quarrel for its possession, squealing in rage. He laughs till his fat sides shake. He tosses them more apples, fairly exploding with mirth as he watches them crowding and jostling each other. So on he goes out of sight, entirely oblivious of our presence. The pigs follow him as far as the boundary of the field will let them, drowning his merriment with their squealing.

This man may be said to be a typical Economite. Innocent, honest, simple minded, with little knowledge of the great outside world and its complexities, he is easily amused. I recall another like him, the former keeper of the orchard that incloses the old burying ground, to which our ramble will soon take us. He was an elderly personage, little, spare and strangely deformed, but of singularly interesting mind. He was quite comical and original without knowing it. The childlike innocence of some of his remarks was delightful. I visited his little vine covered watch house very often.

Closing an eye and regarding me with great gravity, he once said:

"Death is a funny fellow."

"Why so?"

"He has been playing with me these ten years."

"I do not understand."

"Look at me and see how bent I am. It for me is very hard to walk. People say I should long ago have died. But I am here. Death takes younger people, and laughs when he brings them here," pointing to the orchard.

"That is a joke you can enjoy."

"So I do; I smile back at him. What is there in death to make me afraid?"

A few weeks later I called to see the little German at his post. His cozy watch house was there, covered with luscious grapes that perfumed all the air. My friend was not there, but following the direction of a German laborer I found him. A mound was over him, upon which some tiny morning glory vines had already taken root. Death, the joker, had grown more earnest. I could not but wonder if death was still a joke to the honest and kindly little German.

Opening a white gate, August leads the way into a spacious orchard, through which runs a long, straight roadway. On our right as we enter is a little vineyard, so trim and perfectly kept that one cannot but admire it. Not a weed mars the ground between the trellises. The odor of the grapes is exquisite. On our left is a peach orchard in full bearing, and the fruitage is worthy of Delaware or Maryland. A little further on begins a pear and apple orchard, which extends for fully half a mile.

"Here," said August, pausing, "our dead lie."

We look about us, nonplussed. Before us is a square inclosure in the orchard, fenced with white palings. Pear and apple trees grow within; the grass-grown surface is very smooth. There are no monuments, headstones, railings, flowers or evergreens; the place has the appearance of a pasture.

"Where are the graves, August?" we asked.

"Dere, in de ground."

"But you cannot tell one from another!"

"Vy shoolt we; vill God forget?"

Upon closer inspection we find some new made graves near the fence, with the earth heaped over them in the usual form, but with nothing to designate them. They are arranged in long rows extending entirely across the inclosure, and the last row is now begun. When complete, it will doubtless see the end of the Harmony society. The old graves are all level with the ground, and many are entirely obliterated. Curiously, and I trust typically, the plant called "life everlasting" grows over them, and grass and flowering vines run riot, being only occasionally disturbed by the scythe. No effort is made to beautify the place; but it is a most impressive spot.

"Are many buried here, August?"

"De Harmony society is dere," is the sober answer.

Just beyond the burying ground is a so called "Indian mound," a relic of the ancient Mound Builders. Over it grow a few stately oaks and hickories, in the shade of which benches have been arranged in the form of a circle. There the workmen in the orchard eat their noonday meal. The mound has never been explored, nor will the Harmonites permit the ancient tumulus to be desecrated.

Near by is a frame building, in which pears and apples are sorted and barreled.—H. D. Mason in American Magazine.

Chinese and the Bicycle.

Although the shackles of authority hold in check the murderous mob, howling for any barbarian gore outside, a constant stream of officials and their friends are admitted to see me and the bicycle. In making an examination of the bicycle, the peculiar "Ki-ngan-foo squeak" finds spontaneous expression at every new surprise. A man enters the room, peers wonderingly into my face—squeak!—comes closer, and looks again—squeak!—notices the peculiar cut of my garments—squeak!—observes my shoes—squeak—sees helmet on table—squeak!—sees the bicycle—squeak!—goes and touches it—squeak!—finds out that the pedals twirl round—squeak!—and thus he continues until he has seen everything and squeaked at everything; he then takes a lingering survey of the room to satisfy himself that nothing has been overlooked, gives a parting squeak and leaves the room.—Thomas Stevens in Outing.

The Early Supreme Court.

The duties of the early justices of the national supreme court could hardly be called onerous. During the first twenty years of the court it had very little business. From 1820 to 1861 the cases submitted to it averaged only about fifty-five a year. After 1860 the dockets became crowded, and now a new case is ordinarily not heard for five years.—New York

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1888: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in my way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good."

Dr. J. N. Chenay, a well-known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Liston, 118 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

FOR PRESIDENT,

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"Uneasy Rests the Head," &c.

"Daniel," enquiringly remarked the executive, "I wish you would ascertain if there is not some better way in which this crow can be served. It seems rather tough. Here comes a river and harbor bill bigger than the last one. The boys want to spend the money in the campaign, and yet to be consistent, as I always am, I suppose I must veto this monstrous expenditure." And as the brow presidential was relieved of its surplus perspiration, there seemed a cloud on the mind of the executive as if he was endeavoring to draw the line between the advocate of one term and the candidate for re-election.

Medical Director George Peck was placed on the retired list July 9th.

Asst. Engr. C. C. Kleckner has been detached from the Swatara, and his resignation accepted, to take effect July 5th, 1889.

The London Post in an editorial on the morning of the 8th "expresses the opinion that President Cleveland will be returned to office. It anticipates that his term of office will be signalized by a revolution of the fiscal system, which may have an important bearing on European as well as American trade." All the British tory papers which are earnest in their approval of coercion for Ireland and against home rule, express confident hopes of Cleveland's re-election. If the British ruling classes do secure the same control over the American markets which they now have over those of Ireland, it will be [illegible] aid of the Irish-American vote.

The Tablet, an influential Irish-American organ, has the following to say of the position of its compatriots in the coming contest: "As for Irish-Americans, it is simply adding insult to injury to call upon them to rally to England's support. We are aware, of course—and the fact is as humiliating as it is amazing—that among England's most useful allies in this country in the past have been many of the very people whom the tyranny of that same England had driven from their native land and forced into exile. But this has been all changed, as the 'machine' bosses will find out by and by to their cost."

The democratic papers are laboring hard to convince the people that the republican proposition to repeal the internal revenue laws means "free whiskey." Better go slow, brethren on the other side. If you once bring your readers to believe what you assert, you won't have left of your party, even in the southern states, enough members to make the usual returns of ten thousand majority in districts whose total population is less than one thousand.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND RICHER.

A Charlestown Woman Draws a Prize in The Louisiana State Lottery.

Mrs. Mary E. Clark, wife of Mr. Linus E. Clark, superintendent of the money order department of the Boston post-office, who lives at No. 217 Main street, Charlestown district, is $15,000 richer today than she was a few days ago. The following story of how she obtained the money was told to a Herald reporter by her husband: "As long as you have called on me," he said, "I suppose I must say something, but, for good reasons of my own, I had hopes that nothing would be said in the papers about the matter. Notoriety is not what I am looking for. I will say, however, that it is true that my wife held one-twentieth of the ticket 90,443, which drew the first capital prize of $300,000 in the drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery company at New Orleans on the 12th inst. My wife has invested $1 in a ticket occasionally in this lottery, and had always drawn blanks. I said to her: 'Mary, are you going to try your luck again this month?' alluding to the June drawing. She replied that she thought she would, but asked me if it was not too late. I replied that it was not, and she sent $1. She thought very little about it afterward, but I took the precaution to look for the announcement of the lucky ticket after the drawing, and I found it was 90,443. When I went home, I asked my wife what her number was, and she said she really did not remember. She had tucked the pasteboard away in her handkerchief box in a bureau drawer. I went to the drawer little thinking that she had drawn part of the capital prize, but I had an idea that perhaps she had drawn an approximation prize. As I ran my eye over the ticket, comparing it with the telegraphed lucky number, I was almost paralyzed at finding that they exactly tallied. It is needless for me to add that my wife was crazy with delight. I sent the ticket to New Orleans by Adams' express for collection. Last Friday I received a check for $15,000 from the National bank of New Orleans on the Maverick bank of Boston, and I have cashed it.

"My wife and I had been plodding along, trying to get ahead, saving a little here and a little there, and now we have got quite a start, enough to get a couple of good houses, any way. I shall invest the money carefully, and we naturally feel elated over our good luck, which will probably never come to us again."—Boston (Mass.) Herald, June 27th.

Four men who were hunting in the mountains of Texas about fifty miles from Denison, have been found dead in their camp, riddled with bullets. Near by was the body of an unknown man, evidently one of the attacking party.

Drinking Ice Water.

That cool, refreshing drinks in warm weather are delicious is undeniable. That drinking ice water in copious draughts when a person is overheated is injurious, not to say dangerous, is also undeniable. But that the free drinking of water in some form in hot weather must be avoided, is demable, and is one of the greatest popular errors extent. When perspiring freely from every pore, a vast amount of water is drawn from the body, which must be re-supplied, or great injury is being done to the physical health, and the foundation of some of the worst forms of kidney disease is being slowly but surely laid. Why! Someone will exclaim, that just causes kidney troubles, drinking water freely which contains so much lime. Wrong again! so long as the water drank is freely carried through the system, and converted in its passage to its naturally acid reaction of the urine and prespiration, no danger can occur, by deposits of urea or lime in the kidneys and bladder; because they remain perfectively in solution, and are carried out of the body instead of remaining in it. Literally they are washed out of the body, by the copious draughts of water, (that most perfect of all known solvents,) same as a series of pipes are "flushed" with water to clean them.

Do not drink ice cold water, but pure cool water, a little lemon juice will improve its effectiveness. Plain soda with a little acid is also excellent.

If from drinking too much ice-water you have stomach cramps, or are "water logged" as it is called, or are attacked with cholera morbus, summer complaints, diarrhoea or dysentery, do not resort to alcoholic stimulating drinks, which irritate rather than soothe and allay the inflammation which has caused the trouble; but adopt the practice of taking daily just before retiring, during July and August, one teaspoonful of Johnson's Anyodyne Liniment in a little sweetened water, which will prevent all such attacks and ill effects from ice water. In fact a little pamphlet sent free to anyone, by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., contains a vast amount of information, about treating those summer troubles, with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is marvelous how many complaints this old-fashioned remedy will prevent or cure.

Cornelius Buckley of Amherst, this state, died on the night of the 7th inst., from injuries received through falling from a train at North Chelmsford, Mass., July 4th.

Daniel T. Ingalls, aged ninety-three years, and a prominent resident of Merrimack, was choked to death recently while eating his dinner. He had held many offices of honor and trust in his town, and was greatly respected by his townsmen.

J. D. Little's shingle mill in Colebrook was burned July 6th, with a large amount of stock.

The ladies managed to escape and save two of the children, but two children of Mrs. Brocklebank were drowned.

PASTEUR AND THE RABBITS.

An Attempt to Rid Australia of Its Pest. Some Doubtful Experiments.

The offer of a reward of £25,000 by the government of New South Wales to any one who should find a new and effective method of exterminating the swarming rabbits of Australia caused M. Pasteur to suggest the introduction of chicken cholera by means of the microbe of that disease. The reward was offered in November last. At first M. Pasteur did not intend to compete for the prize. He afterward came to the conclusion that the money could be well used for the support of the Pasteur Institute, and in a letter to the agents general of the Australian colonies he formally put his name on the list of competitors.

Since November last, when M. Pasteur published in Le Temps, of Paris, a description of the method which he proposed to use, he has made some interesting experiments upon rabbits in France. Some time ago the owner of several famous vineyards near Rheims determined to breed wild rabbits in one of them which covered twenty acres and was surrounded by high walls. The animals multiplied rapidly, and the excavations which they made began to encroach upon extensive vaults where champagne was stored. The proprietor applied to M. Pasteur for relief, and he fed the rabbits with the microbes of chicken cholera. On the following day all of them were dead.

When M. Pasteur's assistants arrive in Australia they will find that experiments like his were made there before his suggestions were published in Le Temps. The disease which an Australian scientist proposes to introduce is not, however, chicken cholera, but rabbit scab or itch. The Adelaide Register published in November a report written for the crown lands department of South Australia by Professor Watson, of the University of Adelaide, concerning an inquiry made by him with reference to the cultivation of this disease. Professor Watson asserts that scab is not communicated from rabbits to men, dogs, horses or cattle, and his experiments prove, he thinks, that it is not communicated to sheep. He asks the government to permit him to continue his experiments on some island set apart for the purpose. But other authorities in Australia are of the opinion that sheep would be endangered if the disease should be used for the extermination of rabbits. Although Professor Watson was carefully guarding his infected rabbits, it appears that other persons had already undertaken to spread the disease, for in The Adelaide Observer of Dec. 31 a correspondent writes: "Steamers have been taking diseased rabbits up the river for distribution, and scab has since broken out among the cattle at Blanchetown and is spreading rapidly."

The evil for which a remedy is sought is a great one. The rabbits threaten to put an end to farming and sheep raising in great tracts of country. The colony of New South Wales alone paid more than $1,500,000 last year for the destruction of rabbits. It has also built a wire fence 4 feet high and 203 miles long for protection on the line of its western boundary, and it is proposed that $3,000,000 shall be expended in extending this barrier. The experience of one land owner may be cited as showing that the public expenditures are but a small part of the cost of dealing with the nuisance. After spending $300,000 in vain attempts to clear his land he was forced to give up farming.

While the introduction of chicken cholera might sweep away the rabbits, there is danger that it would at the same time kill all the birds, and that cattle and sheep and even human beings might suffer in some way from the pestilence. If M. Pasteur's method should be adopted the animals would at least gain the privilege of dying peacefully. It is said that fowls, when attacked by the disease, "curl themselves up into a ball and drop into a deep sleep, which ends in a painless death." The Australians now kill millions of rabbits every year by the use of steel traps, arsenic, strychnine and phosphorus, so that the suffering of the victims is intense.—New York Times.

Wound Up the Wood Business.

When I began steamboating, along back in 1845, the wood boat business was a big feature of river traffic. At that time there were no less than seventy-five boats running that carried nothing but cordwood, and their owners, with few exceptions, became opulent. All of the cordwood then came from along the banks of the Illinois, upper and lower Mississippi river, and it required a small army of men to handle the business. For many years the receipts did not fall below 60,000 to 70,000 cords annually. When coal came into general use it curtailed the traffic, and the fact that the river country was denuded of wood far back from the river wound up the wood business, so that now there are not more than three or four boats engaged in the traffic.—Globe Democrat Interview.

The Landlord in Cuba.

The proprietario is as hard upon his Cuban brother as Spain is upon the island. This landlord lives his little spendthrift life in the gay capital, only to become overwhelmed with debt and in time be supplanted by other land proprietors, who, in their turn, dissipate, grind the tenantry and make way again for others. Thus the landed aristocracy of Cuba is constantly passing from opulence to beggary. A common expression here illustrates the quick shifting of fortunes in commerce as well as in lands: "Padre bodeguero, hijo caballero, nieto pordio sero!" ("The father a grocer, the son a gentleman, the grandson a beggar!")—Edgar L. Wakeman's Letter.

The Mountains of Jamaica.

No scenery is grand on an empty stomach. I remember a distinguished editor in New York asking me one time what was the best hotel to go to in the Catskills. I recommended the old Mountain house because it commanded the best scenery. "Bother the scenery," said he; "I can't live on scenery. Where can I get the best dinner?" I thought of that when we were up in the Jamaica mountains filled up full of emptiness. The scenery was grand almost beyond description, but we three New Yorkers would gladly have exchanged it all for a sight of [illegible] half way house where we were [illegible] t.—William Drysdale in New [illegible]

SUICIDE.

A Man Blows His Head Off With a Gun.

Mr. Fred A. Forsaith, for some time past manager of the Webster house on Vaughan street, was standing on the sidewalk in front of the house on Monday evening about eleven o'clock, talking with an acquaintance. He shortly entered the house, proceeded to his chamber, undressed himself, tied one end of a strip of cloth to his right foot and the other to the triggers of a double-barrelled shot gun, took a seat on the side of the bed, placed the muzzle of the gun in his mouth, and blew his head to pieces, dying instantly. His wife was just entering the room as the shot was fired. The deceased is said to have been considerbly exercised over the prospect of having to vacate the Webster house; and the recent fire in the house, and the resulting investigation, was another source of trouble, all together having probably unsettled his mind.

BASE BALL.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Portsmouth base ball association, Saturday evening, Messrs. True W. Priest and Thomas E. Call were chosen directors, in place of Fred F. Church and Horace S. Hatch, who decline to serve longer. It was decided to play a game on the 18th with the Lowell club for the benefit of the association, tickets on that occasion to be fifty cents, boys' tickets twenty-five cents, and no passes to be issued to any one.

Ladies will not be admitted free to witness ball games on the south end grounds hereafter, but will be charged the regular price of admission. Girls under fourteen years of age will be charged fifteen cents.

The Lynns will not play the Portsmouths on Friday, July 13th, as advertised, as a new schedule has been arranged for the New England League, which filled that date. They will probably play here Thursday.

Benefit game on the south end grounds July 18th, with the Lowells. Everybody should purchase a ticket on this occasion, as a good attendance will put the home club squarely on its feet, and will free the association from debt.

John A. Davis, pitcher for the Portsmouth base ball club, was on Monday released by the management from further service. The cause of his release was the necessity for retrenchment in expenses.

The game on the South street grounds, Monday afternoon, resulted in favor of the Portsmouth club, who made twelve runs to eight by the Nashuas. The score is as follows:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Nashua	0	0	0	0	0	0	3	5	0—8

Earned runs, Portsmouth 5, Nashua 3. Struck out, Portsmouth 5, Nashua 4. Base on balls, Portsmouth 4, Nashua 4. Base hits, Portsmouth 15, Nashua 7. Three base hit, Portsmouth. Hit by pitched ball, Nashua 3, Portsmouth 1. Passed ball, Canavan 5, Webster 1. Wild pitch, O'Conner, Lyons. Umpire, Mahoney. Time of game, two hours.

The Portsmouths play in Nashua today.

Mrs. Oliver Brewster of Boston, after passing June at Newport, R. I., has arrived at the Isles of Shoals for a stay of several weeks, during which she will be joined by her son, William Brewster, who has been for some time travelling in Europe.

Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury goes this week to Manchester, Mass., to visit his sister, Mrs. Lowrey, and family, who pass the summer there.

CARD.

I hereby tender my thanks to the Fire Department for their prompt and efficient services during the fire at my place on Sunday morning; also to neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted in saving property and giving other valuable aid.

HENRY T. RIDGE.

CARD.

I wish to say to the Fire Department that I regretted to disturb them so early Sunday morning, and thank them for prompt action; and ask for their help, that our city may provide a supply of water for future needs.

Res'y, J. H. HUTCHINSON.

MARITIME NOTES

Schooner Agnes E. Downs of this port arrived at Portland on the 8th inst., and reported having seen plenty of mackerel, but owing to the weather being rough could not throw her seines.

Work on Philbrick's wharf will be completed this week, and the firm will at once erect a large coal shed.

The schooner Franklin S. Schenck sailed on Monday for Gloucester, to fit for the Cape shore fishing.

Mr. Joseph H. Jameson on Saturday last bought two trips of mackeral of 2500 each, paying nine dollars per hundred. The schooners Island Home and Shooting Star landed the fish.

The schooner Grace Choate is fitting at Herbert's wharf for seining, and will start before the end of this week.

The repaired mast of the schooner John Lenthall, now lying at Commercial wharf, was stepped on Monday. The tongue splice put in makes the mast stronger than before, as where the break occurred at the mast head the old stick was quite rotten.

The yachts Eugenie, Breeze, Albatross and Gitana arrived in Star island roads, Shoals, last week.

The many friends of Miss Annable will find her at M. C. Foye's "Ladies' Furnishing Store," No. 4 Market square. Mr. Foye has placed her in charge of the stamping and worsted department, and a better selection could not have been made, as she thoroughly understands art needle work.

Alderman Urch expects to visit Salem on Wednesday to inspect the operation of the horse railroad there, previously to the commencement of the proceedings of the Portsmouth horse railroad company.

Asst. Marshal Peverly and Officer Kehoe, of the police force, are now enjoying the annual vacation of ten days allowed the members of the force.

The Strafford Guards Veteran Association of Dover have voted to have their annual reunion at Fort Constitution on Saturday, July 28th. An invitation has been extended to Hon. Hannibal Hamlin to be present, and other prominent men have also been asked.

The following is the personnel of the orchestra engaged at the Appledore and Oceanic hotels, and which reported for duty on Monday: Miss Fannie P. Hoyt, 1st violin; Miss H. P. Kelley of Haverhill, 2d violin; Mr. Paul Listemann, Boston, viola; Mr. Wilson, Boston, flute; Mr. F. Bryant, Lowell, cornet; Mr. J. A. French, Boston, double bass.

A Washington dispatch of the 8th inst. says: "Frank Jones of Portsmouth took a very pleasant drive to-night, getting into Colonel Lamar's carrriage and going out to Red Top, where he had a long talk with the president. Mr. Jones seems to be very confident that the democrats will make a fine showing in New Hampshire this year."

The "half man and half horse" who created such a sensation at Austin & Stone's Museum, Boston, will be here on exhibition for a few days, beginning to-night. He will be shown under canvas on Fleet street, next to Thomas McCue's livery stable, and will probably attract crowds.

George M. M. Smith of Lake Village, a moulder by trade, on Saturday afternoon went into a drug store and complained of feeling unwell. A relative employed in the store told him to take a glass of brandy, and he helped himself, went out of the store, and inside of ten minutes dropped dead, having taken bromidia instead of brandy. He was a Knight of Pythias, and drummer in the Highland band, which gave such fine music in this city on the 4th of July.

The Charlestown navy yard is to be made into a coal wharf for the treasury department, so far as it is needed, and W. H. Hills of the treasury is now at the yard making arrangements for the landing and storage of 3000 tons of coal for the use of the Boston custom house and the different buildings connected with it, the postoffice, sub-treasury, United States court room, and other federal buildings. The coal has already been purchased from Pennsylvania dealers, and the commandant at the yard is having sheds constructed inside the yard to receive it.

Mr. James O'Donnell of the Sporting house on Water street has leased the Hiawatha cottage at York beach for the season, and will remove his family there the present week.

The dry house of S. B. Emery's furniture manufactury at Sanford was burned July 6th. Loss $400; no insurance.

An electric light plant is to be put in at Kennebunkport by a Portland company, to light the summer hotels at the beach.

Col. Joseph G. Goodwin was on Monday reported as being dangerously ill at the Goodwin homestead in North Berwick. He is a brother of the late ex-governor Ichabod Goodwin of this city.

Three young men, all under twenty years of age, have been found murdered in the Indian territory.

Thomas Tierney, a saloon keeper of Long Island City, killed one man and fatally wounded another in a fight July 6th.

Gov. Ames of Massachusetts has been dangerously ill, but is reported to be better.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence repessed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neverval travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary dealers on those who call for

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing, Glycerole, came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Price 25 cents per bottle.

DEATH TO PAIN.

Palates Made of Rubber.

"Here is something which might interest you," said the physician, handing the reporter a red flap of soft rubber spatulated at one end like a beaver's tail and bearing small rivets at the other.

"What's that?"

"That's an artificial soft palate. You know some people are so unfortunate as to be born with a cleft in the roof of the mouth, which interferes sadly with their speech. All sounds which depend upon the breath being excluded from the nose, like "n" and "m," they are unable to pronounce. These sounds are called nasal, because they go through the nose. Look in the glass with your mouth wide open and you will see a little tongue dangling away back at the roof of the mouth. This is the uvula, which is absent in the case of those who have cleft palates. It helps in swallowing as well as in speech. Now, this artificial uvula is not the natural shape, as you see, but is thinned out and spread out like a fan at one end. That is so that it may rest against the muscle which would naturally move the palate. The other end of the piece is riveted to a plate which is kept in the roof of the mouth, either by suction or by springs.

"A queer thing about these cases of cleft palates is that the perception of the proper sounds of letters dies out as the man grows older. A child in whose mouth an artificial palate is attached soon learns to talk as naturally as people whose palates are normal. But those who have passed middle life before they have one put in have, it is said, to learn a language like French, where the great prevalence of nasal sounds compels them to notice their importance. Only in that way do they learn to speak English properly."—Chicago Mail.

Sawdust Is a Costly Fuel.

Very few people have ever estimated the value of the fuel which feeds the sawmill furnaces in the form of sawdust, which moves directly from the saw to the fiery gulf into which it is dropped by the automatic sawdust feeders in the mills. Rating it at the price it would bring provided it could be saved in the form of inch lumber one would stand appalled at the figures.

For every million feet of lumber piled on the docks, coming from the circular saw, about 200,000 feet of the best portion of the timber passes into the "fiery furnace" as fuel, in the form of sawdust. Or, to make it more comprehensible, in the year 1882, the mills on the Saginaw river cut over 1,000,000,000 feet of white pine lumber, which was the turning point in the output.

During that year 200,000,000 feet of pine timber passed into the seething receptacles which produced steam, and was consumed for fuel. Suppose we estimate the cost, 200,000,000 feet at $14 per thousand "straight measure," and we have the enormous sum of $2,800,000! This looks like a pretty expensive fuel account for the mills on the Saginaw river, but that is what it would amount to in the form of lumber instead of sawdust.—Timberman.

Matching Two Humpbacks.

Another curious feature in Chinese life is reported in the native press. A difficulty having been found by a good looking humpbacked girl in procuring a husband, the go between discovered that an identical difficulty prevented a certain humpbacked young man from getting a wife. She accordingly arranged a match; but as each party was of very eligible quality in other respects, each of the respective parents insisted upon obtaining a surreptitious view of the amorous one on either side. The go between accordingly arranged that the girl should be interviewed as she sat at her spinning wheel with her hump deftly inserted in a hole in the mud wall, while the man was introduced as he was conducting home a water buffalo and leaning over its neck with his rain coat negligently thrown over his back. The marriage took place, and it then became too late for tergiversation, as it had been indorsed by law.—San Francisco Alta.

Statistics of English Pauperism.

The statement as to pauperism in England and Wales during the quarter ended Christmas last shows that the number of paupers gradually increased from 704,110 at the end of the first week of October to 758,146 at the end of the last week of December. The latter number represents a proportion of 26.8 paupers in every 1,000 of the estimated population. This proportion is by a small fraction less than that of the two preceding years, though the number itself is greater than in any year since 1877. In London during December the number increased from 102,559 at the end of the first to 104,097 at the end of the fourth week. This last number is greater than in any year since 1873, and the proportion, 24.7 in 1,000, is slightly greater than in any of the preceding four years, though in only eight of the preceding years was the proportion of pauperism to population smaller than in 1887.—London Times.

Royal Blood at a Discount.

The Courrier des Etats Unis publishes some interesting notes on the marriages of German and Austrian princes. Royal blood appears to have been for some time at a discount in the matrimonial market. A brother of the empress of Austria married a plain Miss Mendel. The Archduke Henry married a singer in the Gratz theatre, a Fraulein Leopoldine Hoffman. An uncle of the emperor of Austria fell in love with a postilion, who was the daughter of a postmaster. She was a great horse woman, and, as there was no postilion for Highness at the Brandhofen station, where she lived, she volunteered her services, put on the leather breeches, cracked her whip, and started out on the road to fame and fortune.—New York Sun.

Old Men in Prison Garb.

There were three men, apparently infirm and gray with age, at work shoveling the snow from the sidewalks on Nicholas street, and the three were conspicuous inasmuch as that they wore the prison garb. A white headed senator from down near the sea, who tottered past, halted when he saw the trio of veterans in uniform, and murmured to his colleague who escorted him: "Life is not worth living when the evening of it is spent in that way."—Ottawa Free Press.

New York's Annual Mortality.

The health of New York compares very unfavorably with that of London. The annual mortality in the British metropolis is about 20 in 1,000, while in New York it is 26 in 1,000. The population of New York is also much more crowded, there being an average of 16 persons to a dwelling while in London the average is only 7.—St. Louis Republic.

Electrically Colored Hair.

An overseer in one of the mills at Biddeford, Me., who is exposed to a strong electrical current, generated by the rapid motion of the belts near by, has had his iron gray hair changed to a beautiful bay color.

"So you've been fishing this afternoon instead of going to school, I hear," said the old man, as he seated himself at the table and glared birch-rods at the boy; "never mind, sir; you just wait until after supper. What have you here, wife? I'm hungry as a wolf." "Brook trout, pa," hastily exclaimed the boy; "I caught 'em." "That so?" said the old man, as he helped himself liberally, "but you mustn't neglect your education, my dear little boy; that will never do, you know."

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O, dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Police Captain B. P. Eldredge has been appointed chief inspector of the Boston force, in place of O. M. Hanscom, dismissed.

A Friend in Need.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing coughs and diseases of the lungs and throat? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, 1st Division New York Appraiser's Office.

I was troubled with catarrh in my head to an annoying extent for three years. After using one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm I was entirely cured.—Wm. J. Cline, Victor, N. Y.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. NEW BUSINESS CENTERS.—The building of railroads in a new and fertile country creates new towns, affording excellent business opportunities. Particulars regarding such opportunities in Montana, Minnesota and Dakota will be sent upon application to C. H. WARREN Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

PROSPEROUS North Dakota never had better crops than those just harvested. Many opportunities to secure fine Government lands recently surveyed, near excellent coal fields and adjacent to railroad. Maps and full particulars, free, upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

STOCK IN MINNESOTA.—From an exclusive grain country, Minnesota is being rapidly transformed into the finest stock and dairy state in the Union. Cheap lands still obtainable, convenient to railroad. Particulars free upon application to C. H. WARREN Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

So far as the country east of the Rocky mountains is concerned, the democrats will waste their powder by attacking General Harrison's Chinese record. Chinese immigration has not been a burning question except on the Pacific slope, and even there candid people must admit that General Harrison's position in 1882 was honorable. He voted, with other republican senators, against the exclusion bill simply because he believed it to be in violation of treaty obligations. President Arthur vetoed the bill on the same ground. It was not because they favored the Chinese, but because they had regard for the national honor. It is a creditable record.

Ploughing the Waves

A storm at sea means inevitable seasickness for ocean travellers. The vibration of a steamer's screw, even, is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparable tranquilizer of sea-sick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveller, tourist or invalid should be without in "crossing the briny," or making a tedious land journey. No unmedicated stimulant of commerce is comparable for efficacy to the great invigorant. Emigrants to the west pronounce it a reliable preventive of malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and miasma-tainted vapors give rise. It renders brackish water drinkable and harmless, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney troubles and rheumatism.

A federation of all the women's societies of Chicago has been formed under the name of the Federation of Women's Societies, with Miss Frances E. Willard as president.

AT THE ONE NIGHT STANDS.

The one night stand is commonly made in a theatre owned and managed by some fairly successful bill poster or alderman or real estate speculator, who knows as much about a play house and the way it ought to be run as I know about the Sanskrit originals of Mr. Arnold's poems. A good many of these theatres are on upper floors above shops and offices. They are approached by flights of narrow and winding stairs, and I never go out of one without thanking my stars that there has been no fire or panic during the night. Queer things happen in these up stairs places once in a while. John McCullough was playing "Hamlet" in a theatre of this sort some years ago. Just beneath the stage was a furnace, attached to a bakery or something of that kind, I believe, and when the trap was opened for the grave digger to get in, a gush of hot air came up that was stifling. The curtain went up, and you can wager that the grave digger made lively time getting that pit ready for Ophelia. The sweat poured from the poor man in streams, and he piped his little song and whistled his little speech and got out of there with a jump. When the queen came to scatter flowers on Ophelia's coffin the hot air caught them up and wafted them into the flies, for they were made of tissue paper. The curtain cut off that scene with a roar from the audience.

In these cheaper theatres the manager does not attend to business, but lets the house "run itself," and whatever you need in the way of properties you must beg, borrow, or buy, for he cannot be looked to, or, at least, relied on, to furnish a sofa, a fire screen, or a pitcher of water. The only time that he is punctual is when the business man is counting up receipts. The "stage" in these theatres is usually small, the scenery bad, the picked up orchestra set your teeth on edge, the programmes are cheaply printed and full of errors, lighting, heating, ventilation and cleaning are subjects that the proprietor has not brought himself to consider, and you begin your night's work under most discouraging circumstances. You change your clothes in a perfect sty of a dressing room, with cold air whistling through partitions of unpainted boards; you wash in a battered tin basin; you "make up" with a light on only one side of your face, and there is no lock on your door. Then you go to your hotel—and there's another precious circumstance.

Hotel life in cities, as a rule, is not bad, especially if you have your pick of rooms and name your hours for meals, but you should see some of the hotels out west, and, worse still, down south. To all appearances they are comfortable and clean, and a glimpse of the dining room, with white cloths and porcelain and black waiters in place, is like a promise of merry sunshine; but wait until your dinner comes—hog, hominy, hog, water, hog, dry bread, then more hog. Everything swims in pork fat, and the cook throws in sand and cinders by way of seasoning. A troupe that struck a town in Georgia one day when the regular dinner was over could not get a blessed thing to eat but bacon—no eggs, vegetables, bread, butter, coffee, milk or tea—just fried bacon. The star of the troupe glared over the table and went away, followed by the rest, and bought some crackers in a grocery.

Then there are the hours. You get through your play at 11, go to your hotel, rise at 4 or 5 to catch a train for your next stand, get there at noon, have something to eat, skirmish around for properties, perhaps rehearse, eat your dinner, go to the theatre and act and often have to take your next train directly after the performance. But there —from these grumblings one might fancy an actor's life to be all shadow and no sunshine. I have not dwelt on the pleasures of the life because they are more apparent, and everybody knows them—the kindly appreciation of the public, the good words one has from press and people, the odd and interesting sights and adventures one meets in traveling, the information that even the dullest picks up when he knocks around the world for some years, the friends one makes and the intervals of ease and comfort that come when an actor has established his reputation and his play has become popular. An actor's life, like most men's lives, has more pleasure than pain it.—W. J. Florence in New York World.

Blacks of the West Indies.

On, the road we met barefooted darkeys, plodding steadily along, who gladly returned our salutations, and turned to stare at us as long as we were in sight. They carried everything with which they were encumbered on their heads—cocoanuts, jugs, coffee pots, cups, bottles—all as securely balanced as if those articles were a part of the anatomy of their bearer.

The children, mere pickaninnies, toddled along with cans and calabashes of molasses, yams, bananas, oranges, or what not, as firmly fixed on their crania as if they had been wens. A Martinique boy will stow away as many personal effects on the top of his head as a Yankee boy will find room for in the pockets of his trowsers.

We saw one youngster with a large grass mat, several feet in diameter, which he wore as jaunty as a chip hat. From a distance he looked for all the world like an animated mushroom out for a stroll—an object, by the way, we should not have been at all surprised to fall in with during our travels in this land of sensitive plants, and ferns as tall as full grown cherry trees.—Down the Islands.

Not Ready for That.

A Mrs. Blank was spending the summer in the country, and was very anxious to catch a certain train. As that event seemed, from the leisurely gait of the horse, extremely uncertain, she urged the country driver to make the beast go faster. The coachman plied whip and reins with no apparent effect, while the lady alternately examined her watch and encouraged the driver. At last, however, her patience became completely exhausted, and, espying a place in the tough hide of the stolid brute where the harness had chafed, she cried out vehemently: "Hit him on the raw, Mr. Cassebooom! Hit him on the raw!" "Ma'am," responded Mr. Cassebooom, with unmoved gravity, "I'm a savin' the raw till we come to the hill."—Boston Courier.

Statistics Concerning Public Libraries.

Some library statistics show that the European country which possesses the largest number of public libraries is Austria. In Austria there are no fewer than 577 public libraries, containing 5,475,000 —without reckoning maps and manuscripts—a total which comes out at 26 volumes per 100 of the population. France possesses 500 public libraries, containing 4,598,000 volumes and 135,-000 manuscripts, or 12 volumes per 100 of the inhabitants, Italy ranking next with 498 libraries, 4,349,000 volumes and 330,000 manuscripts, or 16 volumes per 100. In Germany the public libraries number 398, containing 2,640,000 volumes and 58,000 manuscripts, or 11 volumes per 100 of the population. Great Britain possesses only 200 public libraries, according to these statistics, the volumes numbering 2,871,000 and the manuscripts 26,000. There are 145 libraries in Russia, with 952,000 volumes and 24,000 manuscripts, or a fraction over 1 volume to 100 persons.

It is noteworthy that in Bavaria alone the public libraries number 169, with 1,368,000 volumes and 24,000 manuscripts. Reviewing the principal libraries separately, it appears that the most considerable in Europe is the Bibliotheque Nationale, in Paris, with 2,078,-000 volumes, while the British museum, with its millions of books, assumes the next place. Then comes the Munich Royal library, containing 800,000 volumes; the Berlin, Dresden and Vienna libraries taking rank as follows in the same order; 700,000, 500,000, and 420,-000 volumes. The Oxford and Heidelberg universities each possess about 800,-000 books. At the Vatican the manuscripts attain almost as large a total as the printed works. The latter number 30,000, while the manuscripts are returned at 25,000.—Home Journal.

English and American Kitchens.

A Philadelphia lady who has just returned from a long visit in London was recently discussing certain domestic points peculiar to England and comparing them with relative matters here. "We all know," she said, "as housekeepers, the worry we have if our kitchens are in the basement, though they have elevators and dumb waiters, stationary washtubs, hot and cold waiter, are carpeted and fitted with every conceivable convenience. In a London house the kitchens are always in the basement—no elevators, no washtubs, and by no means any 'frivolities' in the way of conveniences. But an English kitchen is a picture, nevertheless. The bright tins and coppers, the burnished dish covers ranged in sizes, the well stored cupboards, the many tables for every conceivable purpose, the range of the most perfect make and large size and the entire absence of the dirty part of the kitchen work, which is confined to the adjoining scullery, make a contrasting picture of aggravation to us, who, while we adore all these kitchen virtues, seldom arrive at them. Though our kitchens in Philadelphia be large and airy, our help, as a rule, are incapable of sustaining the dignity of an English cook, who is a person of dignity and respectability. We pay high wages, give great privileges and are not allowed to order our own dinners and, at any rate, are not expected to reorder the remains." —Philadelphia Press.

A Trick of Napoleon's Partisans.

When the return had been plotted, and just before it was executed, Napoleon's partisans went through France seeking land to purchase. When about to close the bargain for a field, they would ask to be shown the title.

If they found, as they generally did, that the field was land which had been confiscated at the Revolution, they broke off the negotiation at once. The title, they declared, was insecure; for the Bourbon government of Louis XVIII did not recognize the legality of the act of confiscation.

The rumor and words spread throughout France the rumor that the Bourbons meditated the resumption of all those lands—the chief part of France—to restore them to the former owners. The rumor, thus artfully started and spread abroad, caused thousands of peasant proprietors to welcome Napoleon's return, because thereby the downfall of the Bourbons would occur.—Youth's Companion.

Pity the Poor Woman.

A State street physician gives it as his opinion that four-fifths of the earnings of his profession are derived from women, though in this estimate he does not include the very large and prosperous class of specialists whose services are required by men only. It is a sad commentary upon the morals of the community the existence and prosperity of hundreds of such specialists for men, and the picture is less encouraging on the other side, where so many women with health impaired by foolish dressing, improper diet and violations of the laws of nature, maintain an army of medical practitioners. It is only among civilized peoples that women are less healthful than men. Let doctors and the common surmise tell why this is so. The fact remains that there may be seen on the streets of Chicago twenty strong, handsome men above the age of 30 to one woman. The woman who is able to retain her youthful comeliness beyond 30 is the exception. Good looking men of middle or even advanced age are as common as flagstones, while a handsome matron is almost a curiosity.—Chicago Herald.

Pastel Painting in England.

Pastel painting is once more finding patrons in England. The splendid portraits which Alfred Stevens lately exhibited in Brussels were enough to make fashionable people eager to revive the art. In Paris there is a society of pastel painters. One of the members, M. Lacaze, has discovered a process by which permanency is insured to the colors, and it has received the official approval of the society. Hitherto a fixing process has always diminished the beauty of the colors, and hence pastel painting, having to depend on the crayons alone, was restricted to countries where there are fewer atmospheric changes than in England.—Home Journal.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and gives the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

Impurities in the blood produce diseases. Bodily and mental health depend upon a healthy condition of the blood. The blood, particularly in the spring and during the hot summer months, becomes clogged with impurities, which poison it and generate disease. A harmless blood purifier, without a particle of mineral poison in it, such as mercury or potash, is necessary to remove these impurities and to restore the healthy tone of mind and body. The best purifier and tonic known to the world is Swift's Specific (S.S.S.). In regard to its wonderful purifying and tonic powers we give a few testimonials as follows:

Mr. Wm. A. Siebold, with Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce Street, New York, writes March 29th, 1888: "I feel it my duty, for the benefit of others who may be afflicted as I was, to write you this letter, which you can use as my testimony in any way you choose. I will answer any inquiry from others in relation to the facts herewith stated. In February last I suffered great pain and inconvenience from boils, all over my neck; I could not turn my head without acute pain and my blood was in poor condition. After trying all the usual remedies in such cases, and finding no relief, by the persuasion of Mr. J. W. Fears, Manager of your New York Office, I used one bottle S. S. S., and I improved rapidly and very soon I was entirely relieved of my "Job's Comforters." Now not a sign of my affliction can be seen. I feel strong and cheerful. S. S. S. is a fine tonic as proved in my case. I sleep soundly and my appetite is good."

Dr. J. N. Cheney, a well known physician writes from Ellaville, Georgia: "I use S. S. S. in convalescent fever cases with the best results. It will, in my judgment, prevent summer dysentery, if one will take a few bottles in the spring, thus preparing the bowels for the strains of summer."

Mrs. Scott Elston, 115 Zane street (Island), Wheeling, West Virginia, writes: "Having used S. S. S. for the blood, I can safely say that it beats anything I have used to cleanse the blood and make a new being out of a person."

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, Winston, N. C., writes: "I was in very poor spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enabling me to stand the long, trying, enervating hot summer days. On using it I soon become strong of body and easy of mind."

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen."—Republican motto.

MATTERS IN YORK.

DOG CORNER, YORK, ME., July 9th.

[Formerly known as "York Corner"—re-named in honor of the rapidly-increasing population of dogs."]

The 4th passed very quietly here. The small boy with the cracker was, as usual, in plenty. D. C. Goodwin, Esq., of Cape Neddick, on the 4th left his fast horse "Graybeard" with Mrs. Goodwin in the wagon, while he stepped into Pierce's bakery at York Beach for a few moments. The horse became frightened from some unknown cause, and being a very high spirited animal Mrs. Goodwin was unable to manage him, and he turned the carriage over, throwing Mrs. Goodwin out and injuring her spine so that she is unable to attend to her household duties. The horse ran about a mile, but was brought to a stop by the reins winding around one of his hind legs. Dr. Hazen was fortunately present at the time of the accident, and cared for Mrs. Goodwin.

"Blessed be he that keepeth a yelping cur to disturb his neighbors' morning nap, for of such is the Kingdom of Dog Corner."

An important epoch in the history of Dog Corner is the receipt by Mr. John L. Hatch (the painter) of a—a—dog of the feminine persuasion. The canine stock at Dog Corner will doubtless increase—in numbers—never in value!

The fact is, Mr. Editor, every family ought to have a dog—to shoot at. I will invest my entire capital in dogs (if I could get them at a fair value) and begin life over again financially.

You may think I don't like dogs, but I do; I want them all in sausage!

It was "Children's day" yesterday at the Christian church. The church was evergreen, arbors, vases of roses and other flowers; also a handsome cross of evergreen, the handiwork of Miss Mary E. Mitchell and her sister, Mrs. Laura A. Walcott of Natick, Mass. It was a very pleasant occasion for old and young.

Mrs. Walcott, with her two children, are making their annual visit to her parents, Mr. Samuel Mitchell and wife. P.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., July 10th.

Our people are now busy at haying, in accordance with the injunction to "Make hay while the sun shines." The hay crop is excellent this season, and the weather very favorable so far. The air is heavy with the fragrance of new mown hay.

The schools in districts six and seven closed on Friday last.

Mrs. L. S. Remick and daughter, of East Somerville, Mass., are visiting Mrs. Remick's parents, Mr. Wm. A. Lydston and wife.

Miss Grace M. Remick is at Saco this season, as attendant in the dining hall.

Mr. Charles Welch and wife, of North Berwick, passed the 4th in this town with Mr. F. Herbert Spinney and family.

Hotel de Paul opened on Saturday, the 7th inst., and will no doubt have a full run this season.

J. Dillingham and friends are expected at the cottage of Mr. E. K. Paul this week, for the summer. They were at Mr. Paul's last season, and enjoyed themselves so much that they engaged the same cottage for '88.

Albert Hanscom and family and Major White and family, of New York, are passing a few weeks with their brother, Arthur L. Hanscom, at Clover Farm.

Mr. Marshall and son, of Saco, passed Sunday with Mr. Marshall's brother, Rev. W. F. Marshall, pastor of the Methodist church of South Eliot.

J. Howard Paul, fireman on the Boston & Maine railroad, was at home on Sunday, the 8th.

Mr. Stephen Paul of Gravelly Ridge, Portsmouth, passed Sunday last with his brother, Wm. J. Paul, and a few old schoolmates. Mr. Paul had not visited this town for some time before, on account of ill health.

A large number of the young men and women of this town who are resident or employed in Boston and other cities, were at home on the 4th.

The house of Oliver Prime will be ready for occupation this week, under the skillful workmanship of George P. Paul and brother.

Mr. James Pettigrew of Manchester is passing a few days with Mr. Lyman Spinney. HARRY.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY, ME., July 10th.

Oscar Marr, engineer of the Knickerbocker line of ocean tug boats, who has been passing a short vacation in Portsmouth during the time the line's boats have been undergoing repairs, has accepted the position of chief engineer of the Eastern Dredging Co. of Boston. Will Abbott and Thos. Abrams, who were with Mr. Marr on the Knickerbocker line, will probably go with him. Mr. Marr left town on Monday morning to assume his new charge.

Mr. Geo. B. Wilson will go to Dartmouth college for a few weeks to take a special course of medicine, after which he will return to the University of Pennsylvania and finish with his class in '89.

Haying is well under way, and a fair crop is reported, but nothing more.

Mr. George A. Hill, second officer of one of the big ocean steamers plying between New York and Liverpool, is at his home in this town on a brief leave of absence.

Dr. M. F. Wentworth has returned from a trip to the eastward; during his absence Mr. E. E. Shapleigh, who has been studying with Dr. Wentworth, assumed charge of his patients.

SUB ROSA.

Dr. Talmage has declared for co-education of the sexes.

Three horticultural schools, free to women, have been opened in Denmark.

The Anti-Catholics of Boston on Saturday hired Music hall for their Sunday services; later the Catholics learned that payment had not been made in advance, so they hired it, paid for it, and kept it shut all day Sunday.

The women of Rhode Island pay taxes on about seventy millions of dollars. Yet they cannot vote for the men who will have the spending of their tax-money, nor have they any voice in regard to its use.

The Earth's Motion.

In a minute we are whirled around on the outside of the earth by its diurnal motion, a distance of thirteen miles, and at the same time go along with the earth on its journey around the sun, 1,080 miles.—Chicago Herald.

Improved Dry Plates.

In some improved English dry plates the developing mixture is fixed to the back of the glass, so that the photographic negative is developed by simple immersion in water.

The Sovereigns' "We."

The use of we instead of I by sovereigns began in England with King John, 1199. The German emperors and French kings used the plural about 1200.—Boston Post.

Admiral Hornby says that England would require at least 186 cruisers to protect her merchant vessels from the enemy's cruisers, and that she has but forty-two.

Irish Wonders: The Ghosts, Giants, Pookas, Demons, Leprechawns, Banshees, Fairies, Widows, Old Maids and other Marvels of the Emerald Isle. By D. R. McAnally, Jr. Illustrated; 218 pages, handsomely bound in boards. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston; for sale in Portsmouth by M. Goodrich; price $2.00

This is a collection of fourteen amusing tales, the folk-lore of the Irish peasantry, told in a most pleasant style in the quaint language of the people, and illustrated by over sixty appropriate engravings. The book is printed with large, clear type on fine paper, and is just the thing for the seashore on the tourist's satchel.

A lady in Portland, Me., lately went out fishing with her husband, and caught a forty-two pound salmon, which she landed after an hour's fight. This is believed to be the largest salmon ever caught by a woman.

To Save Life

Frequently requires prompt action; hour's delay waiting for the doctor may be attended with serious consequences, especially in cases of Croup, Pneumonia, and other throat and lung troubles. Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

NONE BUT 4-PAW.

The Only Big Tented Aggregation to Exhibit Here this Year.

Through an arrangement entered into between the proprietors of the leading circuses of the country, the Forepaugh and "Wild West" combined shows, which appear in Portsmouth on Friday, July 27th, will be the only tented exhibition of any importance that will visit this city during the present season. Already the circus-loving portion of the community is on the tiptoe of expectancy over the coming of this big aggregation, and it can be set down as a certainty that it will attract tremendous crowds.

Adam Forepaugh, who is the acknowledged head of the circus business in the United States, is said to have outdone all previous efforts this year, both in the novelty of the entertainment and in the expensiveness of the features introduced. The "Wild West" department alone represents a direct cash outlay of $150,000, and, although exhibited in conjunction with the largest and grandest circus performance extent, is said to surpass in truthfulness, detail and startling realism all similar reproductions of incidents and warfare of the perilous and romantic west. In its wonderful interesting pictures of prarie life, and in the spectacular drama, "Custer's Last Rally," which fittingly rounds up the "Wild West," over two hundred Indians, scouts and cowboys are engaged, and the hero of the Little Big Horn massacre is impersonated by Dr. Wm. G. Carver, the noted scout and dead shot of the plains.

Adam Forepaugh, Jr.'s daring and unparalleled 30-horse bareback act, and the feats of his trapeze pony, "Eclipse," have created a genuine sensation wherever the show has exhibited. Adam fils also appears with his famous troupe of fighting, dancing and clown elephants, which, during the memorable season of the Forepaugh show in New York city, became the wonder and talk of the metropolis. There are over one hundred arcsic stars, and the hippodrome races are real contests, stubbornly fought, and interesting and exciting to a remarkable degree.

The monster street parade unfolding to public view all the stupendous processional resources of the combined Forepaugh and "Wild West" shows, takes place at ten A. M. daily.

PERSONAL.

Hon. John S. H. Frink went to Lancaster on Monday to act as referee in a case involving the title to lands in the Coos region.

Hon. Daniel Clark, judge of the United States district court, will go to the Appledore next week for the season. The judge is greatly improved in health of late.

Mrs. Isaac Maxwell of East Boston, formerly of this city, is visiting at Mr. John L. Randall's on Jefferson street. Mr. Mark Mahoney and wife, of Haverhill, Mass., are also visiting at Mr. Randall's. Mrs. Maxwell is mother of Mrs. Randall, and Mrs. Mahoney is Mrs. Randall's sister.

Mrs. Wm. H. Treadwell and daughter, of State street, are at York beach for the season.

Rev. H. E. Cook and family, of Manchester, are visiting in this city.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

Ex-Governor Smyth and wife passed Sunday last at Old Orchard. The wait on Monday at Newmarket Junction for the beach train afforded ample opportunity for the president of the Concord road to ponder upon the chances for improvement.

The Concord railroad managers are erecting a new station at the East Epping Camp-ground station. The new structure on the shed which for so long has in dull weather partially prevented the rain from descending upon the just and unjust while tarrying at this spot.

BASE BALL.

The Dover club beat the Manchesters, of the New England league, at Dover on Tuesday, in a finely contested game, by a score of eight to five.

A postponed game with the Dover club will be played on the Portsmouth grounds on Thursday; play called at 3:15 P. M.

The directors of the Portsmouth base ball association at a meeting on Monday evening elected T. E. Call president. It was voted, on the suggestion of Manager Leonard, that ladies should be charged but fifteen cents admission to all future games, instead of the full rate of twenty-five cents, as had previously been decided on.

Daniel Hennessey, a boy employed in the shoe factory, had his head badly cut on Tuesday afternoon by the elevator, which struck him as he was looking down the well to a lower floor. He was lucky to get off so easily.

It is reported that Dover is to have a new democratic daily, which will support Mr. Cleveland.

The flagstaff in front of the Prospect house at Rye beach was shattered by lightning during a recent shower.

Mr. Foster Shores, who was in this city quite recently on a visit to his relatives and many friends here, died in Newark, N. J., on the 10th inst.

Mr. Wm. E. Noyes has taken the agency for this vicinity and a large portion of western Maine, for the "Lives of Gen. Benj. Harrison and Hon. Levi P. Morton," by Gen. Lew Wallace, the brilliant author of "Ben Hur," who is a warm personal friend of Gen. Harrison. The work will be illustrated with steel portraits of Gen. Harrison and Mr. Morton, and numerous wood engravings; and will undoubtedly be the best written and most interesting campaign biography ever issued. Mr. Noyes is a life-long republican, from principle—dyed in the wool, 'way through—and intends to make a thorough canvass of his territory.

Mrs. Nellie Boucher Locke, manager of the "Pigeon coop" on Bow street, was locked up in the police station Monday night, howling drunk. On Tuesday she was before the police court, and was dismissed after paying $9.90.

Nelson Craft, of Dover point, a Frenchman, was before the police court Tuesday on a charge of criminal assault on Bridget Murphy, the eight-years-old adopted daughter of Mrs. Sweeny, who keeps the Commercial house near the railroad station in this city. The accused was bound over in the sum of $300 to the October team of court, and in default of sureties was committed to jail.

There is a report that an independent democratic club will soon be organized in this city. The active movers in the matter are somewhat uncertain as to their personal preferences for presidential candidates, but all are opposed to the reelection of President Cleveland.

Some of the aldermen express an intention of ordering a close scrutiny of the bills attending the 4th of July celebration before authorizing their payment.

The veteran city expressman, Plummer Spinney, now seventy-four years old, has had a succession of misfortunes which would discourage a less energetic man. First in the series of disasters was an accident to his mother by which her hip was broken, an injury which confined the old lady to her bed for many months. A year ago Christmas his wife fell and broke her shoulder, and has been an invalid ever since. Last fall Mr. Spinney was moving the household goods of a family when a heavy cook stove fell on him and broke his left leg. The expense and loss of time following these accidents to himself and family have made the old teamster a poor man, and now another calamity has befallen him, in the loss of his horse by an incurable lameness which has rendered him useless. A neighbor who knows Mr. Spinney's circumstances has started a subcription paper to raise money enough to buy a new horse for the worthy but unfortunate man, and it should be generously responded to.

A prominent democratic official of this city, who says that in the future he intends to keep himself out of all political entanglements, expresses a desire to know how much more time and labor will be nedeed, and how much money—nobody knows yet how much has been expended—will still be required to be paid out, before Sagamore road and bridge will be completed.

An excursion under the auspices of the Methodist society of Dover went to York beach from that city on Tuesday. There were about 550 in the party, filling eleven cars.

Mr. Jay Hunt, the comedian, supported by John S. Moulton's Comedy company, will open the season here by an entertainment at Music hall on Monday evening, Aug. 20th. Mr. Moulton, the well known founder of the Bennett & Moulton Co., has engaged a most excellent company of singers and dancers, who are especially adapted to the parts for which they have been secured. They will appear here in a comedy replete with new and attractive specialties.

The "Seaside Methodist," the bright little monthly sheet edited by Rev. O S. Baketel, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of this city, presents in the for a centre-piece an excellent representation of the front of the church edifice as it was before the door was cut for the vestry entrance. We do not remember to have seen vessels under sail so near the rear of the church as the picture shows them, but the water view adds to the picture's beauty, and does not detract from the likeness of the building. The same number says: "The pastor expects to be in his pulpit every Sabbath during the summer, and will also be present at most of the evening meetings. If his services are needed he can easily be reached by sending to the camp ground at East Epping, N. H. He will answer any calls for visiting the sick, burying the dead, or marrying the living."

Letter carriers are supposed to attend to the duties of their official position, and not to spend the time for which they are paid by government in gossip, nor to complain of what letters are or are not put in certain mail boxes. With private affairs they as officials have nothing to do, having only to attend to the duties for which they are paid; else upon information to the post-office depariment, the post-office at Portsmouth is liable to be visited by a special agent of the department. X. Y. Z.

Among the recent transfers of real estate in York county, as left for record in the office of the register of deeds, are the following: Kittery — Clementina P. Mugridge to Alice P. Spinney, real estate for $275; Wm. H. Fernald of Kittery to Fred A. Bradbury of Dover, N. H., real estate in Kittery for $800. Eliot —Inhabitants of Eliot to Mary F. Staples, real estate for $1; M. H. Bartlett of Eliot to J. H. Bartlett of Worcester, Mass., real estate for $500. York—Ellen N. Ellis of York to John E. Rider of Portsmouth, N. H., real estate in York for $175; Ellen N. Ellis of York to Thomas H. Rider of Portsmouth, real estate in York for $200.

Sheriff Hamilton of Saco, accompanied by Deputies Goldthwait, Elliot and Stuart, made a pilgrimage to Sanford on Tuesday, July 3d, and seized six gallons of gin, five gallons of whiskey and about fifty bottles of beer at Frank Tibbetts' place and the Allen house.

Landlord Hill of the Rockingham house, Biddeford, does not seem to have been as successful as Landlord Hill of the Rockingham of this city. The Biddeford Journal of the 5th says: "The Rockingham house is no more. This morning Wilson R. Hill, the proprietor, dismissed his boarders and closed up the restaurant for good."

A trial trip of the cars of the Saco and Biddeford horse railroad was made on Saturday, July 7th.

It is said the finest display of fireworks along this part of the coast on the evening of the 4th was made at Sea Cottage, York beach. Landlord Grant of that house says he is entirely satisfied with his season's business so far, and thinks he has a larger number of boarders than any other house at York at present.

The Rockport, Me., Baptist church has extended a call to Rev. F. A Snow of North Berwick to become its pastor, and Mr. Snow will probably commence work there August 1st. He is a graduate of Colby university, class of '85, and a graduate of the Newton Theological school.

Thomas Burns of Biddeford, aged about fifty years, died of heart disease while surf bathing at Old Orchard beach on the evening of the 7th inst. His body was found floating in the water by a floating party, he having been alone at the time of his death.

George Gleason of New Bedford, Mass., confined in the York county jail at Alfred awaiting trial on a charge of stealing a yacht in Biddeford last month, escaped from the jail on Sunday, the 8th inst. Outside parties made a break on the jail about midnight, and stove a hole through the rear wall and liberated Gleason. The locks of other cells were partially pried off, but a prisoner gave the alarm. Gleason is wanted at Roxbury, Mass., and Old Orchard, for breaking and entering.

A general strike of union engineers and firemen on all the railroads entering Chicago is threatened, as a consequence of the failure of the "Q" strike.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence repesed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE !

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Price 25 cents per bottle.

DEATH TO PAIN.

NATIVES OF PATAGONIA.

Dress of the Men—Women Do All the Manual Labor—Ornaments.

Four years ago Chili and the Argentine Republic divided Patagonia between them, the former taking the Straits of Magellan, the key to the commerce of the west coast, and the latter the pampas. Thus in the partition the Indians fell to the Argentines, but they kept as far away from their owners as possible, for fear of being impressed into the army. Their numbers have been so much reduced that there are not more than 3,000 of them left, and these remain around Puenta Arenas, where they find the society of the Chillanos more agreeable than that of the Argentines further north. They are still mindful of their tribal relations, and have similar customs to those of the Sioux. The term Patagonian is unknown to them and was given by the early explorers because of their large feet. Those who formerly inhabited the lower latitudes had the tribal name of Tehuelches, while further north they were called Chennas.

The native dress of the men is a chirpa or breech clout; a shirt of calico, which is a modern innovation; leggings of horsehide or the skin of the puma (the pampa lion), and over all a splendid robe of guanaco fur fit for any king. These robes, like the blanket of the North American Indians, are never laid aside, and are worn like the celebrated breeches of Bryan O'Lynn. The leather side is painted in bright colors, with symbol and tracery to represent the achievements of the owner in battle or in the chase, and some of them bear fantastic designs. A well tanned robe is worth half a dozen horses, and is much prized by the owner, who will not part with it unless he is very drunk or thirsty. The best ones are made of the skins of young guanacos, sewed together with the sinews of the ostrich, so that the shape of the animal will appear. The fur is soft and silken, the backs and sides being of fawn color, and the belly of the purest white. One can buy them of the traders at Puenta Arenas, but they seldom go to market, as people on passing vessels pick them up for curiosities.

The Indian women dress as the men do, and it is difficult for a stranger to distinguish the sex of a Patagonia native, except from the difference in stature, as the women are short and stumpy and generally have a baby slung over their backs. They do all the manual labor, pitch the tents or toldos, as they are called, skin the game that is brought down in the chase, make the robes, cook the meals and everything else in the way of drudgery, for their lords and masters are opposed to every form of work that cannot be done in the saddle. Both the men and women are given to wearing loads of solid silver ornaments, much of which is antique, and handed down from generation to generation. The silver comes from the Andes, and is obtained by trading with their neighbors, the Arucanian Indians of Chili. Hunting is their business, and their amusements are gambling and horse racing. They are great smokers, but do not have the calumet of their North American brothers, using cigarettes exclusively, like the Spaniards, from whom they have acquired the habit, and rolling them with the skill and grace of a haughty don.—Philadelphia Times.

Uses of the Willow.

It is an interesting fact that not only is the presence of extensive growths of the willow found to be anti-malarial in its influence, but that from a certain species of this same beautiful tree, or its bark, is derived the comparatively new but well known antiseptic preparation called salicine; it is of a pure, bitter taste, highly febrifugal in quality, is largely used in various solutions, also in surgical operations, and is the most effectual preventive of putrefaction in the system yet known. For these purposes the willow is now being extensively and systematically cultivated. At the end of two years the switches are from four to seven feet long, and are cut and gathered into bunches like sheaves of wheat; in the stripping building they are steeped in water and the bark at the larger ends loosened for a couple of inches by machinery; one by one the switches are placed in the mechanical stripper and with a pair of pliers are pulled through with a sudden jerk, being then wiped off with a wooden cloth, bundled, and laid away to dry. All the leaves and bark are dried and baled, the average yield being a ton to the acre, the willows commanding, when dry, $200 per ton.—Frank Leslie's.

How the Grouse "Drums."

I have had some experience with the ruffed grouse. The peculiar noise made by them while drumming is usually made while the bird is standing upon a log, but the log has nothing whatever to do with the sound produced. The bird while drumming assumes an upright position and droops his wings until the flight feathers almost or quite touch the log or other perch on which he stands. He then, by an intense muscular effort, makes quick, spasmodic beats with his wings. In doing this the ends of the wing feathers may, and perhaps sometimes do touch the log; but it is the intense quiver of the flight feathers, as they come in contact with the still air, in the short and intensely rapid beats that produce the soft, yet powerful and far reaching sound. No impact of a feather or feathers with a solid substance—especially a moss covered log—could ever make a sound capable of being heard for a quarter of a mile. The air seems to be filled with the sound, soft as it is, and it seems to come to you from every direction, so that it requires a quick and practiced ear to locate it correctly. This is proof positive that it is produced by vibratory action in the air, and not by the impact of two solid substances.—Cor. American Field.

Facts About Berlin.

A lover of the "curious in number" has arrived at some interesting facts about Berlin. The city has 210 miles of streets, so that a person might walk ten days in the capital without retracing his steps. If the 1,400,000 inhabitants marched in double file they would form a line nearly 750 miles in length. If the citizens determined to start upon a journey at the same time, all the cars of Germany would accommodate but two-thirds of the number.—New York Tribune.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every ounce of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do, you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, 1st Division New York Appraiser's Office.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A Blind Newsdealer.

There is in Philadelphia a blind newsdealer whose sense of touch is so acute that he not only makes change accurately and rapidly, but can detect a counterfeit note or coin at once. His stand has been for many years near the corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets. In nine years, he says, only $3.50 in counterfeit money has been successfully passed on him. His sense of hearing is also remarkable, and after he hears the voice of a regular customer he can always call him by name. —New York World.

Cost of a Fossil Egg.

A plaster cast of a fossil egg, found in the tertiary strata of the island of Madagascar, the original of which is in the Paris Academy of Sciences, belongs to the National museum at Washington. It is 34 1-2 inches one way by 39 inches the other. The original is supposed to have been the egg of a bird three times as large as the ostrich.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Ploughing the Waves.

A storm at sea means inevitable seasickness for ocean travellers. The vibration of a steamer's screw, even, is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparable tranquilizer of sea-sick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveller, tourist or invalid should be without in "crossing the briny," or making a tedious land journey. No unmedicated stimulant of commerce is comparable for efficacy to the great invigorant. Emigrants to the west pronounce it a reliable preventive of malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and miasma-tainted vapors give rise. It renders brackish water drinkable and harmless, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney troubles and rheumatism.

The other day the guests at the Pavilion hotel, Gloucester, Mass., were treated to a novel scene. A large horse mackerel appeared among the bathers. A boat was manned, and, with a harpoon, he was soon captured and killed. He measured fifteen feet, and weighted about 2000 pounds.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Whose Face Is Her Fortune.

The fabled butterfly seated in the rose's heart is not more confident of present sovereignty, and more thoughtless of the future than the hapless woman whose face is her fortune and who is content therewith. An unspoiled beauty, if not a lusus nature, is a specimen of her kind sufficiently rare to warrant surprised inspection. So difficult is it for her to keep her head steady and to order her heart aright, that even her plain visaged companions accord her magnanimous applause when she succeeds in doing one or both. She is more likely to pose as Narcissa, exacting tribute of adoration by inordinate estimate of her attractions. Once convinced that she is the beauty of her family, she aspires to eclipse every woman she knows; is loath to perceive the charms of others, and, when forced to do them partial justice, hates her rivals. The speck of blight works fast and far in a nature where the conserving power of sound sense has been reduced to a minimum by excessive vanity, bordering upon monomania. Flattery, conveyed in various vehicles, is her daily diet, and, if stinted in supplies, she seeks it avidly, and at any cost—let it be of her own soul. Earth has no drearier spectacle than that of a passe belle, who clings with both hands to the scepter claimed by younger or fairer pretenders to the throne.

It is harder for beautiful women to be good than for those who have been taught from babyhood to seek the approval which all crave in the cultivation of mental and moral traits. Hard for them to put self out of sight. Our beauty is so fair to view; promises such lavish return for outlay so trifling that friends conspire to foster self-esteem. It is harder for her than for her sisters to refrain from appeals to the sensuous love of physical beauty in men that leads them to critical survey of her as a fine animal, not the goodly case of a goodlier soul. Harder to be generous to those who trench upon her province and threaten to divide her spoils.—Marion Harland in Philadelphia Times.

Fish Living Out of Water.

Some years ago in Africa a detachment of troops came to camp on a level stretch of country, perfectly dry and devoid of a suspicion of moisture. In digging up the ground to arrange the tents a fish was found as dry as a chip—a long eel like creature coiled in a ball and seemingly incased in a mud cocoon. The fish was supposed to be mummified and was taken as a curiosity and in the course of several weeks fell into the hands of a naturalist, who placed it in water. The mud slowly dissolved and soon the fish gave a gasp, then a convulsive struggle, like a sleeper awakening, finally swimming off.

Here was a singular example of a fish living out of water. It belonged to a group known as lung fishes, the members of which have a peculiar faculty of migrating overland and of being able to exist not merely days but months out of the water. At certain seasons the lakes and ponds of some localities in the dark continent dry up, and were it not for some provision which enables the fishes to bridge over this time it is evident that many would be destroyed. Nature, however, comes to the rescue, and, as the waters dry up, the fishes either crawl away to other streams or immediately descend into the earth, where they form themselves into a round ball and lie in a semi-desiccated condition until the water comes the ensuing season. It is even said that fishes have been known to pass two consecutive seasons in this condition. —C. F. Holder in Philadelphia Times.

"Ah, if our dreams only came true," sighed the young man that boards. "Last night I dreamed that I called on a lord. I find that I can control my visions to a considerable extent by dieting. For instance, if I wish to enjoy a calm night with dreams of a pleasant character, I eat toast or bread and milk just before retiring. If I wish to have a little excitement, quarreling, disputing or a little active exercise, I eat squash pie. I have found from experience and observation that squash pie acts strongly on the posterior part of the brain, where lie the bumps of combativeness and acquisitiveness. I have known times when the consumption of two pieces of squash pie has led me to slay a man for his money within fifteen minutes after going to bed. To make my brain a chamber of horrors, however, I sit down an hour before bedtime and eat three sardines, six olives, a little Rochefort cheese with crackers, washing the whole down with a bottle of Bass. Before morning I charge single handed with my razor on herds of wild horses, and jump from sundry steeples. Oh, yes, it is possible to control one's dreams, and when we understand psycology aright we can lie down and map out our dreams as we now map out a day's work."—Buffalo Courier.

Treatment for Severe Burns.

I was called in some haste to a little child, about three weeks ago, who was badly burned about the hands and face from falling on a hot stove. The burns were deep, the pain excessive and the shock very considerable. I espied upon the shelf a bottle of pinus canadensis (colorless). Remembering its wonderful soothing influence in acute inflammations, I at once concluded to try it. Taking a corner of a soft handkerchief, I rapidly painted the injured parts, when, like magic, the pain ceased. You can well imagine my surprise and delight at the result. I directed a camel's hair brush to be purchased, and had the mother make free applications, and the case had no more treatment, save a little collodion ointment a little later on. Since this I have tried it in several cases, both slight and severe, and with the same delightful results.—Cor. Medical Journal.

Hunting Wild Cattle.

New Zealand now contains great numbers of wild cattle, which have descended from those lost by the farmers during the Maori wars which ended in 1868. Hunting these animals is an exciting and dangerous sport. The game is not easily secured, as the animals hover—seemingly for protection—about thickets filled with long twining creepers, in which progression is very difficult. Into these vines they dash at the slightest alarm, seeming fully aware that neither horse nor man can follow them.—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE VETERINARY HOSPITAL.

Treatment for Sick Dogs—A Surgeon Talks About His Cases—Hydrophobia.

A rather short man, with a red, Grant beard and a sharp but kindly eye, walked down the aisle of the Chicago Veterinary hospital the other day, glancing right and left at the various wards. As he went horses and dogs, the patients of the hospital, turned their heads to look after him and whinnied or whined when he passed. He was Dr. A. H. Baker, who holds the chair of theory and practice of veterinary medicine and surgery at the hospital, and is one of the most successful and distinguished practitioners in his line in the west.

"What sort of dogs make the best patients?" was asked by an inquisitive reporter.

"The higher bred the dog is the better it stands the pain, as a general thing," replied the doctor. "As for breed itself, I do not know that there is any choice in bravery under these circumstances. I have seen a wee mite of a black and tan exhibit as much fortitude as a mastiff."

"What are the dogs oftenest treated for?"

"Oh, broken legs mostly, but dogs have plenty of diseases in common with man. They have pneumonia, kidney troubles, tumors and cancers, and the goitre and indigestion, decay of the teeth, and throat affections of all sorts. I cannot help referring to their intelligence while under treatment. It is a constant source of wonder to me. You can give them orders for the cure of themselves which they will obey better than a human patient will do. And the affection they develop for the doctor is truly remarkable. I know dogs that have recognized me years after I treated them, and will come barking about me with every sign of recognition and good will.

"We often have hunting dogs with sore tails brought to us. The constant switching of the tail against grass and bushes causes tumors and other sores to form on the end of it. These are extremely painful to the dog, as we frequently have to cut off three or four inches of the bone. Tracheotomy has to be frequently performed in treating dogs, and, owing to improper indigestion, dogs' teeth frequently get out of order. The bites received on the legs during fights purposely or otherwise engaged in by dogs often cause tumors that are apt to grow to dangerous proportions, and require delicate treatment to remove or cure.

"Broken legs are very common with dogs. The legs of these little black and tans are like pipestems. One little fellow jumped on his mistress' back when she was stooping down and fell off when she arose. He broke both his forelegs. I did them up in starch bandages, and the mite of a dog sat on his haunches and favored his broken limbs as intelligently as if he had as much reason as a man. When he became tired he would whine and they would lay him on his side. He was running around again in three weeks.

"The bites which dogs so often get from one another we generally sew up with a few stitches. A spaniel I attended on the West side had the pneumonia badly for three weeks. He was nursed just as a human would have been, dressed in a warm flannel shirt, poulticed and fed quinine and febrifuges. In treating dogs for diseases common also to man, the patients receive equal doses of about the same medicine. The attachment of people for their dogs is touching. I have seen strong men break down and cry like babies at the death of a favorite dog, and women cry nearly always under the same circumstances. One lady had hysterics when I told her the dog was no more.

"One splendid Newfoundland dog that watched in a North side grocery store was found one Sunday morning suffering terribly from inflammation arising from a terrible wound made by a crowbar. Thieves had broken open the store, but the dog had driven them off and not a thing was missing. The crowbar was found near the dog. He was brought to us, but although he was treated immediately, the progress of the inflammation could not be stopped and he died. I have his skeleton. His pelt measured six feet from the tip of his nose to the root of his tail. He was the largest Newfoundland dog I ever saw. I treated a case of goiter in a puppy on the North side. The disease caused the dog to have convulsions, and, as is often the case, he was thought to be mad. The owner bought some chloroform and was about to kill him when the pup, which was feeling somewhat better just then, looked up into his master's face with such a comical expression that he postponed the execution. I came, gave the dog some internal medicine and a liniment, and in three weeks the goiter disappeared, and to-day he is healthier than ever before in his life."

"Are not many dogs killed for being mad which are not mad at all?"

"That is often the case. In all my experience I have never seen but about twenty cases of genuine hydrophobia among dogs and about five among horses. Dogs are quite subject to convulsions and fits, and people immediately jump at the conclusion that the animals are mad and have them killed, whereas some simple remedy would cure them in a few hours. There has recently been sent to me a specimen of a worm that is killing the dogs in Florida, and I presume that I am the only person in this country who possesses a sample of it. It is very common in China and India, where dogs exist in such numbers, and the disease often attacks the human race. Owing to its peculiar nature it is invariably fatal, and I regard it only a question of time before we shall hear of people dying of it. The worm, which is called the filaria immitis, or 'cruel thread worm,' is about the thickness of a fine linen thread, and from ten to twelve inches in length when full grown. The germ is inhaled or taken into the stomach by some means, and the worms are generated. They work their way to the veins, and finally they all congregate at the heart in a wad, producing death from three to thirty-six hours thereafter. When once the worm enters the blood there is no hope for the patient, for anything which would kill the worm would also kill the man or dog. There is no warning of the disease until the last sickness suddenly appears. The death is a horrible one, it is said."—Chicago Times Interview.

Inherited Diseases.

In the realm of disease the facts of inheritance are most numerous and are daily accumulating. Here, alas, they become terrible, fateful and overwhelming. No fact of nature is more pregnant with awful meaning than the fact of the inheritance of disease. It meets the physician on his daily rounds, paralyzing his art and filling him with dismay. The legend of the ancient Greeks pictures the Furies as pursuing families from generation to generation, rendering them desolate. The Furies still ply their work of terror and death, but they are not now clothed in the garb of superstition, but appear in the more intelligible but no less awful form of hereditary disease.

Modern science, which has illuminated so many dark corners of nature, has shed a new light on the ominous words of the Scriptures, "The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation." Instances of hereditary disease abound. Fifty per cent. of cases of consumption, that fearful destroyer of families, of cancer and scrofula, run in families through inheritance. Insanity is hereditary in a marked degree, but, fortunately, like many other hereditary diseases, tends to wear itself out, the stock becoming extinct. A distinguished scientist truly says: "No organ or texture of the body is exempt from the chance of being the subject of hereditary disease." Probably more chronic diseases, which permanently modify the structure and functions of the body, are more or less liable to be inherited. The important and far-reaching practical deductions from such facts—affecting so powerfully the happiness of individuals and families and the collective welfare of the nation—are obvious to reflecting minds, and the best means for preventing or curing these diseases is a subject of intense interest to all. Fortunately nature has provided a remedy, which experience has attested as infallible, and the remedy is the world-famous Swift's Specific, a pure vegetable compound—nature's antidote for all blood poisons. To the afflicted it is a blessing of inestimable value. An interesting treatise on "Blood and Skin Diseases" will be mailed free by addressing

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Democratic Vote Factory.

The New York Tribune says it took only a few minutes for the news to spread among the 1,200 mechanics and laborers at that navy yard that Congress had approved a joint emergency resolution, extending the appropriations thirty days from the fiscal year just ended. Consequently the work in progress at the navy yard will not be suspended at present, as was feared. The work in hand is the rebuilding of the monitor Miantonomah, the completing of the Chicago and Boston for sea, the repairs to the Galena, and the preparations for beginning the work on the new cruiser Maine.

The board of survey has made its report upon the condition of the Pensacola, which is to the effect that she is "very fair and sound" for a vessel so long in the service; but it is not considered for the best interests of the service to put her in repair for only a one year's cruise. The estimated cost to fit her for a three years' cruise is $43,737, or about seven per cent of the cost of a new vessel like her. There are new boilers ready to put into her, and the board makes a quasi recommendation to expend about $50,000 upon her, when she will be of service for six or seven years. As her repairs would furnish work for men who are urged by democratic lieutenants to be cared for before election, the department will probably order repairs at once.

Three of the navy vessels now on squadron duty have been ordered home for repairs—the Brooklyn, flagship of the Asiatic squadron, to New York by way of the Cape of Good Hope; the Mohican, of the Pacific squadron, and the Ranger, on surveying duty in the Pacific. These vessels will arrive about the latter part of August, and in time to give work to more men whose votes will be a material consideration in November. In addition there will be the Monongahela, which is to be refitted and repaired at Mare island for duty as storeship in the south Pacific: the Iroquois, under repairs at Mare island, the Chicago, Boston and Pensacola, under repairs at the Brooklyn navy yard, and the 6,000-ton armored cruiser Maine, which will be under way at the Brooklyn yard at that time; the 6,000-ton armored cruiser Texas, building at the Norfolk navy yard and the Fortune, at the same yard, and the Kearsarge at the Kittery (Me.) navy yard.

It is only four years ago that the Brooklyn received repairs which took eleven months to make, and she then went on a short cruise in the West Indies and later in search of "a number of American steamers" which the American consul at Aspinwall had reported were carrying on a filibustering scheme. After a long search she returned without capturing any of the "violaters of the treaty laws." She then returned to the Brooklyn navy yard and underwent another "thorough overhauling" and sailed for the Asiatic. When the navy vessels made such short cruises under former administrations the opposition papers characterized them as "mere pleasure trips made at convenient intervals, and returned to the navy yard in time not to embarrass the local political schemes; or rather to find employment for those whose votes were requisite." But no such suspicion is aroused at this time.

The American Flag Don't Count Now.

The state department has been informed of another outrage to an American citizen by the Spaniards, but will probably do nothing about it. This time it is Captain Silas Graham of Baltimore, commanding the barque Albemarle. While coming off shore at Porto Rico to his vessel with his wife, he was hailed by a Spanish man-of-war. A boat was lowered and he was captured and placed on board, protesting vigorously. After being detained for some time the captain and Mrs. Graham were released, it having been ascertained that they were not the runaway couple the Spanish officers were looking after. Captain Graham laid the case before the American consul, who said it would be useless to demand any investigation, as the Spaniards insult Americans at will, laugh at the American flag, deride our navy, and have no fears of interference when apologies are asked for and refused. It didn't use to be this way, in the days of Jackson or of Grant;—but then they were American presidents.

State Officers Reappointed.

At a meeting of the governor and council in Concord on the 10th inst. the following reappointments were made: J. W. Patterson of Hanover, state superintendent of public instruction; Dr. E. H. Currier of Manchester, member of the state board of pharmacy; W. N. Dow of Exeter, special commissioner of the Boston & Maine railroad; Dr. W. H. H. Mason of Moultonboro, Waterman Smith of Manchester, J. F. Perry of Exeter, trustees of the asylum for the insane. At the afternoon session Warden Colbath and Chaplain Wilkins of the state prison, and Superintendent Ray of the industrial school, were appointed delegates to the American Prison Association meeting in Boston on July 14th.

An Odd Case.

"Strange as it may seem," says the A B C Pathfinder, "the old Boston & Providence railroad, now the Old Colony, never had such a thing as a time-table, for either employes or public. It was the custom to issue a printed sheet showing the leaving time from either end of the road, while the arriving time at intermediate stations—and some passengers were foolish enough to ask for such information—could only be ascertained by energetically pumping the conductor or brakeman. From these sheets the Pathfinder compiled the table which has appeared in this guide for many years, and this table was the only one in existence until Division Superintendent I. N. Marshall issued recently the first official time-table ever printed by the road. Only the initiated can appreciate the difficulties which Superintendent Marshall has overcome in preparing such a table for such a large number of trains without any basis to work on."

Took the Law in His Own Hands.

Rufus King, a wealthy farmer living near Kingsville, Missouri, in whose honor the town was named, had in his employ a pretty servant girl. The young men of the neighborhood admired the girl, but King objected to their calls and to her going with them, particularly at this harvesting season. Last week one of her admirers sent her a note, but King tore it up. The young man, learning of this, procured a United States special delivery stamp and sent a letter through the mails This also came into King's hands and was torn up. The young man then swore out a warrant before a United States commissioner, and King is now in the law's hands.

Another Masculine Usurpation.

Mr A. Campbell, of Deering, Me., owns a gobbler which is deserving of an item. Not long ago Mr. Gobbler manifested a strong desire to sit, and Mr. Campbell accordingly gave him thirteen turkey's eggs to experiment with. To Mr. Campbell's surprise the gobbler at once began to cover the eggs, and in due time hatched from the thirteen eggs ten plump little turkeys. And now the gobbler may be seen strutting around with and caring for his young brood, the proudest gobbler in the state.

New Hampshire Items.

Miss Rachella R. Kempton of Newport, this state, a teacher at East Braintree, was burned to death while manipulating an oil stove at her boarding place in South Braintree, Mass., on Saturday afternoon, July 7th.

William Butterfield of New Boston died in the Manchester jail on Saturday, July 7th. He was eighty years old, and was imprisoned for threatening the lives of his son and the latter's family.

The new Roman Catholic church at Hanover was formally dedicated July 9th. Bishop Bradley of Manchester, Father Birney of Quebec, and Father Paradis of Lebanon were present.

The Dartmouth hotel and other buildings at Hanover were destroyed by an incendiary fire July 11th; loss $16,000.

H. H. Vandyke of Nashua, aged thirty-five years, was found dead in his bed at noon on the 10th inst. He was around town the day before, apparently all right.

E. W. Haleford, late managing editor of the Indianapolis Journal, takes charge of the Washington Post under William Henry Smith's control. It is consequently expected that the Post will be a strong Harrison paper.

The Buffalo (N. Y.) News says that fully 500 republicans in that city who voted for Cleveland four years ago will be in line for Harrison and Morton this fall.

Charles Voorhis, for eight years a democratic state senator from the Shelbyville district of Indiana, has declared in favor of Harrison and Morton, and will take the stump for protection.

Riddleberger and Mahone, whose differences have been a serious drawback to the Virginia republicans, have become reconciled, and will work together in the present campaign. Cleveland had less than 4000 majority in that state four years ago.

Dr. Gage and Associate Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor; A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.——Oliver Peirce, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.——C. L. Buffum, North Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.——Isaac Buttrick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of discharging ears and deafness.——Mrs. A. L. Celly, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.——Mrs. L. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs, cured.——Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.——Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st. Manchester, N. H., blindness cured.——Dr. Levi B. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the Doctor did not see him.——Thomas Tuke, Levi Burt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.——Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 9 years with others.——Son of W. B. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.——G. Ambrose, No. Londonderry, N. H., cured of cancer.——C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.——C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

Henry W. Moore, managing editor of the Post-Despatch of St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. Norton, wife of the proprietor of the paper, recently ran off to Topeka, Kansas, where they were found at a hotel living as husband and wife. Before starting they stole all of Mr. Norton's money and goods they could lay their hands on.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall of Pennsylvania, who on the 10th was reported to be critically ill, was on the 11th announced to be much easier.

Since Jan. 1st there have been nine murders in Maine, by which thirteen men and women lost their lives. Hanging for murder in Maine is played out.

ONE SUMMER NIGHT.

There was never a song of starling
So sweet, or will ever be,
As the voice of my own, my darling,
Confessing her love to me;
The very stars went swooning
In such a delicious light
That it seemed like a white, sweet swooning
In the heart of enchanted night.

And a hundred times and a hundred
We whispered the fond words o'er,
Till the tremulous passion vine wondered
Was there ever such love before;
And the moon fled into abysses
Of maidenly, fleecy mist—
She envied the joy of our kisses,
Forever herself unkissed.

Too soon came the rapturous waning
Of night, and the flush of the day,
But not till the dearest explaining
That ever stole hearts away;
We saw in the far light just gleaming,
The stars melt into the morn.
And felt the starlight of our dreaming
Merge into the love that was born.
—Charles Henry Phelps in Home Journal.

No Fireplaces in Mexico.

Hubert Bancroft, in his shrewd and analytic discussion of Mexican life and history, shows the remarkable place which a house fire and hearth have occupied in human evolution. The old English life was wholly centered about the festal board in the great hall, or "all," where the boar's head and rosemary and flagons were all that tempered social intercourse. Our own life moves out from, and back toward, the fireside. But "home, as we understand it, does not exist in Mexico," says Bancroft. "The absence of fireplaces constitutes one great obstacle to those family reunions which have so important an influence on our society. Dinner parties are rarely given, and home entertainments are restricted mainly to the so called tertulias—a medley of singing and dancing, forfeit games and gambling." The part that fire has played in human progress can hardly be overestimated. To kindle a fire was the first great achievement of primitive races. —Globe-Democrat.

Hot Water to Relieve Thirst.

It is a mistake to suppose that cold drinks are necessary to relieve thirst. Very cold drinks, as a rule, increase the feverish condition of the mouth and stomach, and so create thirst. Experience shows it to be a fact that hot drinks relieve thirst and "cool off" the body when it is in an abnormally heated condition better than ice cold drinks. It is far better and safer to avoid the free use of drinks below 60 degs.; in fact, a higher temperature is to be preferred; and those who are much troubled with thirst will do well to try the advantages to be derived from hot drinks, instead of cold fluids, to which they have been accustomed. Hot drinks also have the advantage of aiding digestion, instead of causing debility of the stomach and bowels.—Boston Budget.

Protection Against Tickling.

I was a very ticklish youngster, and my comrades sometimes used that weakness for their own amusement. One boy used to show me how little effect tickling had upon him; but one hot summer day, as he was lying reading, I tickled him on the ribs, and he almost went into convulsions. I found that he was far more sensitive than any boy in the company, and he revealed his secret to me under condition of my never telling any one else. By holding his breath he became pachydermatous, and would let anybody tickle him as much as they pleased; but of course they always gave it up at once when they saw his stolid look. I tried the plan, and it worked admirably; and it is my only protection, even unto this day, for my cuticle is as sensitive as ever. — R. McMillan in Science.

Glass Flooring in Paris.

In Paris the substitution of glass flooring for boards continues to increase, this being especially the case in those business structures in which the cellars are used as offices. In one of these the whole of the ground in front is paved with large squares of roughened glass imbedded in a strong iron frame, and in the cellars beneath there is sufficient light without gas for business purposes. Though the first cost of glass is much greater its almost unlimited durability is greatly in its favor.—New York Sun.

A proposition to submit to the people of the several states a constitutional amendment to prohibit the liquor traffic in the United States has been favorably reported to the senate by Senator Blair from the committee on education.

Senator Gorman says he could have been chairman of the national democratic campaign committee had he desired the place.

THE MOST WONDERFUL FAMILY REMEDY EVER KNOWN.

To Save Life

Frequently requires prompt action; hour's delay waiting for the doctor may be attended with serious consequences, especially in cases of Croup, Pneumonia, and other throat and lung troubles. Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Warmer, fair weather, southwesterly winds.

PICNIC PARTIES.

A lawn party of about 100 ladies of the Universalist society, accompanied by the pastor, visited the suburban residence of Hon. John S. Treat on Tuesday, the 10th inst. They enjoyed a picnic on the beautiful grounds during the day, where ample refreshments were served; in the cool of the evening they repaired to the parlors, where singing, instrumental music and conversation filled the time until the hour for breaking up arrived. It was the unanimous verdict of the company that Mr. Treat and wife could keep a hotel if they wanted to.

The Methodist Sunday school picnicked at York beach on the 11th, going over in the forenoon in barges, and returning in the early evening.

Quite a large party of members of the Middle street Baptist society and Sunday school went to York beach on a picnic by the 11:20 A. M. train on the 11th inst.

The annual picnic of the Unitarian Sunday school was held at Rye beach on Wednesday, the 11th inst., the party going and returning in barges.

OBITUARY.

The remains of the late Mr. Foster Shores, who died on the 10th inst., in Newark, N. J., were brought to this city on the 11th, and interred in the south cemetery on the evening of that day. Foster Shores had many warm friends in this, his native city, and was widely known and universally popular among the banking fraternity of Boston; he was of a very happy, sociable disposition, good tempered and agreeable in his daily intercourse with others, and always courteous to every one; and though fond of a joke, he could never see any fun in inflicting pain or annoyance on others. He could have had no enemies of his own creating.

The funeral services of the late Fred A. Forsaith were held in the ladies' parlors of the Webster house on the afternoon of the 11th inst., Rev. W. H. Alden, D. D., officiating. Although the obsequies were private there were present a very considerable number of the friends of the deceased and of his family. The remains were interred in the south cemetery.

MATRIMONIAL.

Miss Agnes Iola Rounds, daughter of Professor C. C. Rounds, principal of the normal school at Plymouth, and formerly of the Farmington, Me., normal school, was married July 10th at the Pemigewasset house to Edwin Scott Matthews of Boston, who is connected with the Graves Elevator company. Miss Rounds has been critic teacher in a training school at Cambridge, Mass., for the past year, and has also held similar positions in the normal school at Plymouth and in the west. The ceremony was private, and was performed by Rev. Henry Porter Peck of Plymouth.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club played the Nashua club on the grounds of the latter, June 11th, the score at the close being fourteen to nine, in favor of Portsmouth.

Game between Dover and Portsmouth on the South street grounds this afternoon; game called at 3:15 o'clock.

Jack Manning of the Nashua club has been released. The club has now but ten men. The heavy expense required a curtailment of the salary list.

It is reported that the salary list of the Dover club has been reduced.

MARITIME NOTES

The dory Dark Secret, Capt. Andrews, which left the Point of Pines, Mass., June 17th, was spoken July 8th northeast of Georges bank by the fishing schooner Laura Nelson. At that rate of progress the Dark Secret will get across the Atlantic in about two years. Andrews said that since leaving he had been three times blown back in sight of Cape Cod, several times came near foundering, had broken his gaff, and lost his drag and lanterns. He was furnished with supplies and proceeded.

Schooner Addie & Hattie, Capt. Thomas Davidson, is fitting out at Fort cove, Newcastle, preparatory to salt fishing. She expects to sail about Monday.

Mr. Charles H. White is making a business the present season of catching eels and cunners, which he disposes of without difficulty in the Portsmouth and Manchester markets.

The schooner Island Home landed on the 10th 500 mackerel, which were sold to Mr. J. H. Jameson at nine cents each.

The sloop yacht Annie, Hawes master, ran aground on Four Tree island on the 10th inst., and filled. She was raised on the 11th and temporarily repaired, and proceeded on her cruise.

Mr. G. H. Carlton has sold the past week two hundred dozen cunners, caught by Mr. Charles H. White.

The schooner Venus, of Lanesville, landed on the 11th 500 mackerel to Mr. Jameson, at ten dollars per hundred.

Mr. Charles H. Johnson is making a specialty this season of dealing in cunners and eels, most of which are delivered at houses of citizens on orders previously given. He received on the evening of the 11th inst. sixty pounds of eels and thirty-five dozen cunners, which is about his average daily receipt.

The Newfoundland bait-protection steamer Ingraham arrived on the evening of the 10th inst. at Placentia with two French bank fishermen in tow, having captured them Monday morning, the 9th. They had capelin on board, taken at St. Mary's to be used as bait. This act will in all probability lead to complications between the governments of France and Great Britain, and it is quite likely the government of France will not be found so wanting in backbone as the Cleveland administration has proved.

PERSONAL.

Ex-Gov. Currier of Manchester passed through this city on Wednesday, the 11th inst., on his way to Union Bluff, York, for a short stay.

Supt. D. W. Sanborn of the eastern division of the Boston & Maine railroad, was in this city on the 11th.

Mrs. Nowell, wife of Rev. Wm. G. Nowell of New York, was in this city on the 11th inst. Mrs. Nowell was formerly Miss Hattie Hill, daughter of Capt. James M. Hill, and sister of Mrs. Hardwick, who with her husband, Capt. Hardwick of the ship Farragut, and her daughter, it is feared perished on the trip from Calcutta to New York.

Mr. Arnold Knowlton, wife and child, of Providence, R. I., accompanied by Capt. John G. Moses of this city, will sail for Germany on the 21st inst. Mr. Knowlton and family will remain abroad a year, but Capt. Moses will return shortly.

The dustiest place in the world, for a week preceding the shower on the evening of Wednesday, the 11th inst., was that portion of Sagamore road on which the recent improvements have been made. A steam fire engine was taken down there on Wednesday, and wet down those portions of the road which could be reached; all the rest of the road was blown up town in a cloud of dust when the brisk southerly breeze sprang up in the evening.

Kearsarge steam fire engine, No. 3, arrived back on the 11th inst. from Manchester, where she has been for some weeks undergoing repairs.

A Raymond excursion party of about 130 persons arrived at the Oceanic, Isles of Shoals, on Tuesday, the 10th inst., and remained there until Wednesday forenoon, when they came in, and took seats in three special cars attached to a regular train bound east.

The Penny Post says that "It is reported that Mr. James H. Dow, with other gentlemen, contemplate the purchase of Clark's island to be developed as a pleasure resort."

Mr. A. Shaw Waldron, weigher for E. F. Sise & Co., was stationed at the scales of Mr. Gardner J. Greenleaf, corner of State and Church streets, on the 11th inst., attending to the weighing of Sise & Co.'s teams while that firm's scales were undergoing repairs.

It is reported that Mr. Michael R. Perkins will put on Harrison buttons during the coming presidential campaign. He says he has always voted for a democratic candidate, and that it is very hard for him to vote anything else.

Mr. James Janvrin, democratic ex-councilman and ex-alderman from the south end, on being asked if he should vote the Cleveland ticket answered, "I vote it! O! no. I can't vote that." He announced himself as looking about for a third party candidate.

As announced through the papers, and from the pulpits on Sunday, the 8th inst., a meeting was held Monday evening, the 9th, in the Middle street Baptist vestry by pastors and delegates from the various evangelical churches of the city. Between twenty-five and thirty were present. Rev. John A. Hainer was made chairman, and Mr. Lewis E. Staples secretary. After an interesting discussion it was unanimously voted to invite the Young Men's Christian Association Board of the state to hold its annual convention in Portsmouth the third or fourth week in September. A chairman of a committee to arrange for the convention was appointed in the person of John S. Rand; but the selection of the necessary committees was deferred until early autumn. The meeting adjourned to the call of the chairman.

Mr. A. Brackett Trefethen was on the 11th placing a set of marble steps at the new entrance of Mr. Fred B. Coleman's drug store, corner of Vaughan and Congress streets.

Mr. Irving Blake of Harvard square, Cambridge, Mass., arrived in this city on Tuesday evening, the 10th inst., with a procession consisting of eight horses and ten carriages, the latter comprising buggies, dog carts, village carts, basket carriages, etc. The cavalcade, which was from Cambridge that day, put up at R. H. Beacham & Son's stable for the night, and on Wednesday morning started on the way for Kennebunk beach, where Mr. Blake will run a livery stable until the close of the season. His patronage in Cambridge is almost wholly from the Harvard students, and there is but little business doing for him in that line now until next fall.

Prof. Thomas Riley and Prof. P. S. Mack, the Australian swimming champion, had a mile race off Old Orchard beach on the 10th inst., the American champion winning by half a second. J. M. Taylor, sporting editor of the Boston Globe, was referee.

The body of Luther Bryant, a little boy who was drowned in the river at Biddeford, was found floating on the 10th inst., after being in the water forty days.

The horse cars are now running regularly between Saco and Biddeford and Old Orchard beach.

It is probable that a new democratic daily will be started at Washington, with Melville Stone, recently of the Chicago News, as editor and proprietor.

Trusts are to be closely looked after at Washington. A congressional committee has been appointed to investigate and draw up a bill looking to their regulation.

The British government has instructed Sir Charles Warren, chief commissioner of police, henceforth to suppress Saturday meetings in Trafalgar square, London.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., has an elopement scandal in "high life."

Montreal shipping interests are reported in a bad condition.

A feud between families at Jellico, Tenn., has resulted in the death of several persons.

Montreal bucket shops are doing a thriving business, notwithstanding the recent law for their suppression.

Floods are doing great damage to crops in West Virginia. Much cut timber is also going to destruction.

In announcing the death of Mr. Mandeville, member of parliament, Mr. O'Brien declared in the British house of commons that he had been murdered by brutal treatment in Tullamore prison.

The next census will endeavor to show to what extent western farmers have mortgaged their property.

President Diaz of Mexico has been re-elected, practically without opposition.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence repesed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Allspice Is Well Named.

"Oh, no; allspice is not a mixture of a number of spices, but is a simple product itself," said a wholesale grocer. "The proper name for it is pimento, but as it combines the flavor of cinnamon, cloves, mace and nutmegs, it generally goes by the name of allspice. Pimento trees are natives of South America and the West India islands. The bulk of the pimento of commerce comes from Jamaica. Large groves of the spice trees grow on the hillsides of the islands, and thrive without cultivation. The leaves of the tree are bright green and glossy. When bruised they give off a spicy odor. The flowers grow in dense clusters. The fruit is a small, aromatic berry the size of a small pea. If permitted to ripen they become pulpy and lose some of their pungency. They are therefore gathered while green, and dried in the sun on rough platforms. When well cured they are packed for shipment in large bags holding from 160 to 180 pounds. The growers seldom get more than four cents a pound for the dried berries. The business does not afford a livelihood, and most growers feed horses and cattle on the rich pasture in the pimento groves.

"The value of the crop has increased from $180,000 in 1874 to $700,000 in 1887. The spice is shipped to this city and to London, about half going to each place. It is received in the berry and ground between revolving stones. It is then put up in tin cans, and is no longer known as pimento, but is the allspice of commerce."—New York Mail and Express.

Attractions of One of the Azores.

At San Miguel the first real disappointment came in shape of the announcement that the steamer would not stay long enough to go to the Furnas. The Furnas has, it is claimed, the most wonderful hot springs in the world. You can sit with one foot in a hot sulphur spring and have the other in hot iron, while you drink soda water from a well in front and brandy punch from another at your back. There are also several streams running through the place where boiled trout can be easily caught, and if this is all strictly true, there is no question but the Furnas has yet to be developed as a winter resort. Being compelled to miss this, we tried to drown sorrow in the native pineapples, and my impression is that I shall try to have some more sorrow to drown next time I go to the place. If the pineapples of San Miguel were any better, a man would go insane when he ate his first one. The pineapples we have in America are like grapeshot compared with these.—Cor. Boston Transcript.

The Month for Suicides.

"March is pre-eminently the month for suicides," said a well known physician. "An assertion to which statistics and, in fact, the horrible record of the last few days will amply bear witness. Of course, it is a well recognized theory that such crimes assume the form of an epidemic on slight provocation, but it still remains susceptible of demonstration that the windy month overtops all others in swelling the list of self-murders. My theory is that the vital forces have had such a draft upon them during the severe winter months that the system is so run down at this season of the year that despondency ensues on the slightest provocation, and then comes the end. I have not worked this out as thoroughly as I should like, and for the present shall refrain from elaborating my views."—Chicago Tribune.

A Priest Wearing Whiskers.

Dr. James G. Hyndman, the throat specialist of the Ohio Medical college, tells how the only Catholic priest in America who wears a beard came to let his whiskers to grow. The priest, whose pastoral duties are performed in Cincinnati, O., is subject to throat troubles. On the advice of Dr. Hyndman he let his beard grow and had no further inflammation in his throat. His superiors, however, objected to the innovation, and the priest was obliged to go to Rome to obtain permission to wear whiskers. He took with him a full account of his case from Dr. Hyndman's pen, and the church authorities at Rome at once granted him the permission desired.—New York World.

Burned by Electricity.

George Bielich was trying to make a large electric lamp burn the other night in Virginia, Nev., standing on a step ladder to reach it. He took hold of the lamp with one hand to balance himself and then accidentally touched the other side of the lamp. Instantly he was drawn off his feet, and curled and writhed like a snake as the electric current went through him. Finally one of the wires broke, and he fell to the floor unconscious. He soon recovered, but his hands were seared and blackened.—New York Sun.

To Perforate Earthenware.

A method which is said to be very satisfactory is recommended by Professor Stuart as follows: Instead of a drill, a soft copper rod or pipe is used in the lathe, it being fed with a mixture of powdered emery and linseed oil. The emery is embedded in the copper by the friction, and cuts right through the hardest material in a very short time.—Scientific American.

Who Settled Kentucky.

Col. T. W. Bullitt, of Louisville, says that it was not Daniel Boone who made the pioneer settlement in Kentucky, but an ancestor of his own named Walker. In proof of this assertion he shows a hatchet with which the said Mr. Walker blazed a path through the trackless woods in 1749.—Chicago Herald.

Can Do Nothing Else.

Russell Sage says he keeps on at stock dealing because he does not know what else to do. He thinks New York superior to Paris, and says Broadway is good enough for him, and adds: "I'd rather stay at 71 Broadway and guess on the prices of things than be anywhere else in the world."—New York World.

Effective Pulpit Work.

For effective pulpit work a rested brain is the best of all immediate preparations. Had I to choose between a manuscript with a weary head on my shoulders, and a fresh head—not a new one, of course—and no manuscript, I would select the head.—George C. Lorimer in The Writer.

A Perfect Pendulum.

The construction of a perfect pendulum has been accomplished, it is announced, by suspending a lead shot by a single fiber of cocoon silk in a vacuum produced by means of a Sprengel pump. The shot, one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter, weighs one-third of a grain, is suspended by a two foot fiber, and is placed in a tube three-quarters of an inch internal diameter. It has a vibration range of one-fourth inch on each side of midposition, the vacuum being equivalent to one-tenth of a millionth of an atmosphere.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Ex-Senator Tabor has an income of from $8,000 to $10,000 a month from one mine.

A Friend in Need.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing coughs and diseases of the lungs and throat? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

The crop summary shows that the yield of winter wheat will exceed the early estimates, and that the condition of corn is fairly good.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think I is scrofulous humor do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Dr. Mackinzie, in an interview, denied that he conceiled the cancerous nature of Emperior Frederick's malady in order to prevent a regency.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

Rev. George Duffield, a well known writer of hymns, died at Bloomfield, N. J., July 6th, seventy years old. He was a son of the late Rev. George Duffield of Detroit, who was known as the "Patriarch of Michigan."

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, 1st Division New York Appraiser's Office.

I was troubled with catarrh in my head to an annoying extent for three years. After using one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm I was entirely cured. — Wm. J. Cline, Victor, N. Y.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Fecundity of Fishes.

Fishes produce so many eggs that if vast numbers of the latter and of the fishes themselves were not continually destroyed, these animals would finally fill up all the waters. For example, man annually takes 60,000,000 or 70,000,000 codfish from the sea around the shores of Newfoundland. But even that quantity seems small when we consider that each cod yields about 45,000,000 eggs each season, and that even 8,000,000 have been found in the roe of a single cod. Were the 60,000,000 cod taken on the coast of Newfoundland left to breed, the 30,000,000 females producing 5,000,000 eggs every year, it would give a yearly addition of 150,000,000,000,000 young codfish.

Other fish, though not equaling the cod, are wonderfully productive. A herring weighing six or seven ounces is provided with about 30,000 eggs. After making all reasonable allowances for the destruction of eggs and the young, it has been calculated that in three years a single pair of herrings would produce 154,000,000. Buffon calculated that if a pair of herrings could be left to breed and multiply undisturbed, for a period of twenty years, they would yield an amount of fish equal in bulk to the globe on which we live.—Scientific American.

Ploughing the Waves.

A storm at sea means inevitable seasickness for ocean travellers. The vibration of a steamer's screw, even, is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparable tranquilizer of sea-sick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveller, tourist or invalid should be without in "crossing the briny," or making a tedious land journey. No unmedicated stimulant of commerce is comparable for efficacy to the great invigorant. Emigrants to the west pronounce it a reliable preventive of malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and miasma-tainted vapors give rise. It renders brackish water drinkable and harmless, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney troubles and rheumatism.

Fortify the system, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, against the diseases peculiar to hot weather. This medicine induces a healthy action of the stomach, liver and kidneys, causing them to prevent the accumulation of the poisons which produce disease.

Four thousand of the new $20 silver certificates will soon be put in circulation.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla, Sold by all druggists.

RINGERS AT THE DOOR BELL.

Excitements Incident to Life in a New York Flat—A Lady's Experiences.

They "come as the winds come when forests are rended, come as the waves come when navies are stranded," and each individual in the multitude seems to have some distinguishing peculiarity in his purpose or his method of attaining it. Broadly, however, they may justly be classified in five grand divisions—peddlers, beggars, thieves, swindlers and solicitors of favors. The margins of these divisions are necessarily ill defined, for the reason that individual representatives of either are so apt temporarily, under the temptation of opportunity, to merge themselves into the other classes. The ostensible peddlers are, of course, by far the most numerous. There were registered at the marshal's office during the past year 1,512 new licenses issued to this class of hawkers and 408 renewals, the former at $1 each and the latter twenty-five cents. But the marshals say that there is a great deal of neglect to renew the licenses of merchandise peddlers, either because they drift away from the city or choose to run the risk of being fined $10 for peddling without a license rather than pay twenty-five cents for its renewal. It is estimated that there are not less than 2,000 of these baskets carrying hawkers, besides whom there are many who conceal their wares in their pockets. A bright little lady who recently moved into an up town flat on the west side was requested to "keep tab" on her invaders for five days, and at the end of that time reported:

"If there are, as you say, only about 2,000 peddlers infesting New York, then they must be badly distributed, and I feel that I have had more than my share, for no less than thirty-seven have rung my bell this week. And such a variety of things they had! It would astonish you. I had no idea of half the things being peddled that I know now are sold in this way in New York. Why, they included cravats, suspenders, shoe laces, cheap jewelry, soap, rugs, matches, blacking, cheap candies, brushes, needles, tape, thread, buttons, garters, furniture polish, gas burners, plaster of paris thingmummies, a sure cure for corns and bunions, stationery, a catarrh remedy, felt slippers, bamboo wristlets, a lot more things that I neglected to put down, and, would you believe it, liquors and lottery tickets? Nearly all the peddlers looked as if they were Jews, but those vending the last two things I name were not. The liquors were sold by a stout, elderly, good humored Irish woman, who carried quite a lot of little flasks of gin, whisky, and, I suppose, other liquors, though she said those two were most in demand among the ladies who bought from her. She had them in a basket, and said she had built up quite a good family trade, upon which she supported her husband, who was disabled by rheumatism, and her two younger children. The lottery tickets were sold by a lame man, who seemed to be English. He assured me that he sold a great many lucky tickets, and I would have a good chance to draw $300,000 if I bought a ticket for the next drawing, but he couldn't persuade me. Then he said that if I would like to try a little 'policy,' as a great many ladies did, so the dead quiet, he would come around whenever I wished, get my numbers, make my plays and fetch my money to me. Of course I didn't, I am not such a fool.

"The next numerous class were the beggars. In some way, heaven and they only knew how—the janitor says he doesn't—nineteen of them, men and women, old any young, got up to my door in those five days. I began by giving a few pennies to nearly every one that came; they looked so miserable that I couldn't help it; but one thing happened that rather hardened my heart on the second day. An awfully ragged young fellow said he was starving, and really looked as if he was. I thought the quickest way to help him would be to give him a good big ham sandwich, so I told him to wait at the open door while I stepped into the kitchen and got it for him, and he seemed very grateful. I was back with it in a few moments, and he, thanking me effusively, turned away toward the stairs. Just as he did so I caught a bright metallic gleam at the back of his neck, and it flashed on me at once that that was the silver head of Jack's Sunday cane that had been in the stand inside the private hall near the door. On the impulse of the moment I sprang forward and clutched it. Sure enough it was. I hauled it out from under the tramp's coat, where he had poked it up, and took it into the kitchen to wash it, while he plunged down stairs without either of us saying a word.

"Another tramp, a great big fellow, with a most villainous countenance, when I told him I had nothing for him, said he would come in and see, and began to force his way in. I was frightened, for I was all alone, but did not let him see that I was. I just called out as loud as I could, 'Jack, come here, quick!' and that big tramp made such a scramble and tumble in getting down stairs that I could not help laughing. There was a woman, rather decently dressed, who wanted ten cents to help her get home to her sick husband in Cohoes, and she was so ashamed of having to ask charity, but her pocket had been picked of all the little money she had. I gave it to her, and Jack said when I told him that I was a little fool, for the game dated as far back as the time when there was a horse ferry to Brooklyn at least.

"About this entry on my list—'man with pup'—I was doubtful whether he ought to go down among the peddlers or the beggars, so I've left him standing alone. He came up with a fat, blinking, funny looking little pup in his hands, and asked me if I didn't want to buy a Newfoundland dog. I said that I didn't; that I never cared much for Newfoundlands, and thought St. Bernards were over so much nicer. 'Why,' said he, 'that's what this pup is. My poor head is so bad ever since I had the fever that I can't remember names; but now you mentions it, it comes back to me that that's the name; he's a St. Bernard.' I saw the fellow was a fraud, and just to draw him out I said: 'Oh, how nice. That is the sort of dog that takes such good care of sheep in Scotland, isn't it?' And he said it was, the very kind. I told him I was sorry, but I had no sheep, and thought I would wait until I had them before buying a dog.—New York Sun."

CURIOUS FACTS ABOUT WILLS.

Delay of Men of Property—Legal Expressions—A Simple Will.

The numerous instances on record of the trouble and litigation which have arisen from the doubtful expression and intention of testators, omissions, loss of the document, their destruction by vermin and otherwise, would fill an interesting volume. The delay, too, of men of property in making their wills till they become mentally incapable, or death prevents their doing so, as if it were executing a "death warrant" instead of settling a simple business transaction, is to be regretted.

Among numerous celebrated cases may be mentioned that of the great real property lawyer, the late Lord St. Leonards, whose will could not be found, and was supposed to have been buried hidden about his person. Other eminent lawyers have failed to appoint executors, omitted the date or some important clause or word which has called for the intervention of the court and often resulted in depriving persons of what the testator intended them to have, to the enriching of others, thus in some instances going to prove that the "man who is his own lawyer has a fool for a client." A man will seldom bestow the same thought and care on his own affairs that he will on those of other people.

For a long time it was customary to begin the document, "In the name of God, amen, I, A. B., being of sound mind and body," and so on, the intention evidently being to prevent questions arising as to the state of the testator's mind, undue influence, etc., but it is obvious that this mere statement, unsupported by evidence, could scarcely "hold law." Then, again, men formerly gave back their souls to their Maker. I once came across the probate of a will of a seafaring man, which ran: "First, I humbly bequeath my soul to God, my Maker, beseeching his gracious acceptance and forgiveness of all my sins; my body I give to the earth or sea, as it shall please him to order. My worldly affairs I dispose of as follows."

Most lawyers, while properly resenting interference with their province, "red tape," by "amateurs," often reap a rich harvest from the usual bungling of such meddlers. I remember a case where a party had his will prepared, and a codicil afterward indorsed in proper legal form. Requiring a second codicil, he thought it an easy matter to add it himself and thus save expense. He wrote it all right, taking the previous one for a guide, and called in two "credible" persons, who affixed their names as "witnesses" to its due "execution." But the testator had unfortunately omitted to sign it, and it doubtless formed a nice point of law for the court to decide as to whether, being written by the testator himself, combined, of course, with the witnesses' signatures and testimony, it constituted "execution" of the codicil.

The term "Cut off with a shilling" has become the subject of a stage play, and it bears a well known relation to wills. I question, however, whether there are many authentic instances of its having been actually employed in writing, being, perhaps, more significant of a father's threat to an offending son. I did, however, come across a genuine case in the improved will of a father, written by himself in a memorandum book, in which he said (inter alia): "I give to my son John one shilling, sterling, money of Great Britain."

The writer once prepared officially the will of a tradesman, of which no one but he and myself knew the contents. Imagine, therefore, my surprise when he told me soon after that he had been informed that his will had been seen and that the contents were common talk. I assured him that it was a mistake, but he stated that it must be true, as his informant had told him some of its provisions. It transpired subsequently that the testator had made a previous will which he had destroyed, so far as tearing it up was concerned, but it had been carelessly thrown in the ash pit and some workmen had been mean enough to put it together and had posted it up in a workshop near by. It was ultimately recovered.

I was intimately acquainted with a lady, of whose father it was said, that the family solicitor, with the concurrence of the widow, had procured "execution" after death, and it is said that previous to the "signing," which was done by the lawyer holding the dead man's hand, a spider was placed in the deceased's mouth, which is supposed to have constituted "life in the body!"

Some men in making the most simple wills giving their all to the wife, wishing to be sufficiently explicit and comprehensive, have given her "everything I possess in this world."

It frequently happens that persons buy blanks of wills and fill them up to save legal expense, but it is a very unwise proceeding, and it is not generally understood that wills not submitted for probate within a reasonable time after the death of the testator renders the executors liable to a penalty, which is, however, seldom enforced.

As I am speaking of documents I may mention the case of a lease exemplifying "biter bit," where a landlord prepared for a tenant the lease of farm himself, and wishing to retain all rights of sporting omitted all mention of such, the result being that those rights, not being properly excepted or reserved, became unquestionably and exclusively the tenant's.—Detroit Free Press.

The Bald Heads of Japan.

The noble army of bald heads is increasing in northern Japan. The women of the hairiest of all human races, the Anios, are fast marrying Japanese husbands, or sharing their harems, and the result, as seen in the half breeds, is a brood that manifests untimely baldness, not only in the cuticle of body and limbs, but of face and skull. Bald pates will soon be as common in Yezo, it is feared, as in American audiences. The Anios have for centuries been famous for having more hair and less brains than any other human beings, nor do they approach a Bostonian status of more brains and less hair.—Home Journal.

Inherited Diseases.

In the realm of disease the facts of inheritance are most numerous and are daily accumulating. Here, alas, they become terrible, fateful and overwhelming. No fact of nature is more pregnant with awful meaning than the fact of the inheritance of disease. It meets the physician on his daily rounds, paralyzing his art and filling him with dismay. The legend of the ancient Greeks pictures the Furies as pursuing families from generation to generation, rendering them desolate. The Furies still ply their work of terror and death, but they are not now clothed in the garb of superstition, but appear in the more intelligible but no less awful form of hereditary disease.

Modern science, which has illuminated so many dark corners of nature, has shed a new light on the ominous words of the Scriptures, "The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation." Instances of hereditary disease abound. Fifty per cent. of cases of consumption, that fearful destroyer of families, of cancer and scrofula, run in families through inheritance. Insanity is hereditary in a marked degree, but, fortunately, like many other hereditary diseases, tends to wear itself out, the stock becoming extinct. A distinguished scientist truly says: "No organ or texture of the body is exempt from the chance of being the subject of hereditary disease." Probably more chronic diseases, which permanently modify the structure and functions of the body, are more or less liable to be inherited. The important and far-reaching practical deductions from such facts—affecting so powerfully the happiness of individuals and families and the collective welfare of the nation—are obvious to reflecting minds, and the best means for preventing or curing these diseases is a subject of intense interest to all. Fortunately nature has provided a remedy, which experience has attested as infallible, and the remedy is the world-famous Swift's Specific, a pure vegetable compound—nature's antidote for all blood poisons. To the afflicted it is a blessing of inestimable value. An interesting treatise on "Blood and Skin Diseases" will be mailed free by addressing

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, a the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTIONS.

He Is Approved Over There.

The London (England) Globe says: "As a rule the presidential contest has very little interest for the Old World. On the present occasion, however, an issue is involved which very closely concerns Europe, more particularly Great Britain. Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, and although his party managers have considerably planed down his platform, he is universally recognized in the states as pledged to initiate a new departure in fiscal policy. Nor can there be any doubt that he would act up to this understanding were he elected. And on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy."

John Dockerty of Saco received yesterday from Hon. W. H. Clifford a dispatch informing him of his appointment as United States mail agent upon the Portland and Portsmouth route of the Portland & Ogdensburgh railroad. The Biddeford Journal says: "The appointment is not generally known, nor was it know except to a few intimate friends that Dockerty was an applicant for the position. The route is seventy miles week, with a week's lay off." If we mistake not this is the same place that was given some time ago as a sop to ward five of Dover. A young man named Gorman was appointed, but it was soon found to be too poor a place for him, and he quit. Within the past year and a half no less than seven different men have tried it, and given it up. But it was considered to be good enough for the ward five democracy of Dover, and they could take it or nothing. The result is, it has been nothing, and they are expected by the bosses to vote the Cleveland ticket and hold their tongues. We shall see whether they will do it.—Dover Democrat.

Smart Business Woman.

A female book agent, good looking and young, and hailing from St. Louis, has been arrested in Wilkesbarre, Pa., on a charge of bigamy. It is alleged that she has married at least twelve men in as many different states. Her mode of operations has been, on arriving in town and finding some fool, with more money than brains, ready to make love to her, to insist upon getting married; then, after borrowing from her new husband two or three hundred dollars to send to her mother, skip out of town by the next train. About a month ago she married W. H. Evans of Hazelton, Pa., got $350 of him, and left. Evans arrived in Wilksbarre on the 11th inst., looking for his charming but erratic bride, and met Albert Thomas, a western man and another one of her husbands, from whom she got $250 before vanishing from his sight. Her real name is said to be Lorina Hart; she is an expert forger, and is wanted on two charges of forgery.

C. H. Nudd & Co., who operate brokers' offices in many New England cities, with headquarters in Concord, having been notified by the chief of police of Concord to discontinue the business there say flatly that they will not do it until compelled by course of law, and they are ready to meet the issue at any time. They say they are conducting a legitimate broker's business, and nothing in the line of a "bucket shop."

The Franconia Iron company of New Hampshire has passed into new hands. A new railroad is to be built, and the mines worked.

Mr. T. M. Joy of Newmarket has been employed by the Newmarket Manufacturing company as paymaster for twenty-five years, and has never missed a pay day. During three years of this time he has paid every two weeks, and weekly for the past ten months. He has now made arrangements to take a much needed rest for the remainder of the summer. He would seem to be entitled to a short vacation.

Capt. Henry B. Twombly of Kennebunkport died very suddenly on the 9th inst. At the commencement of the civil war Capt. Twombly was in command of a fine ship, which was taken and burned by the rebel cruiser Alabama, and he and his crew were for some time held as prisoners of war aboard that vessel. Later Capt. Twombly was an acting ensign in the navy, and at one time had command of a gunboat in southern waters. He has had but little to do with maritime affairs since the war.

Nicknames Among the Nobility.

Some of the members of the Barrymore family were known by names rather appropriate to their character. Lord Barrymore, eldest of the family of Barry, ran a short career, and bore the nickname of "Hellgate." His brother, the Hon. Henry Barry, was clubfooted, and dubbed "Cripplegate," while the Hon. and Rev. Augustus Barry, even less reputable than the two others, went by the name of "Newgate," owing to his frequent incarcerations. The sister's ready and copious use of oaths obtained for her the sobriquet of "Billingsgate,"—"Records of Noble Families."

A Fruitless Search.

Chicago Philanthropist—What's the matter, my poor man?

Chicago Burglar (tearfully)—I was in that job the other night where a good citizen got killed. It was an accident, and I feel so bad over it I want to give myself up and explain how it happened.

"Well, why don't you do it?"

"I can't find any of the police or detectives. They're all off workin' on clews."—Omaha World.

An English Judge's Decision.

The demoralizing influence of an income tax is thus recognized by the English bench: Mr. Justice Stephen recently said in a case before him that "the standard of public morals was so low with respect to income tax returns that the admission of a false return should not invalidate a man's claim to be believed on oath in relation to private transactions."—New York Sun.

Gasoline Fuel for Motors.

The use of gasoline as a fuel for small motors is taken advantage of in a recent invention of a small engine to be attached to bicycles and tricycles. With this a speed of ten miles an hour can be attained on level ground. Sufficient fuel can be carried for a run of twenty-five miles, and the weight of the whole plant with tanks filled, is but 185 pounds.—Chicago Times.

Italy's Picturesque Costumes.

Tourists all complain that there are no more striking costumes left in Italy, and that the people here even in the back rural districts strive to imitate Parisian or English fashions. I am told that the peasant dress as a picturesque costume has disappeared except in the south of Italy.—T. C. Crawford in New York World.

A Feast of Blood.

Along the upper Nile a wing of the Barri tribe bleed their cattle monthly and cook the blood with their flour and meal. They esteem this a luxury and the dish is eaten with great relish.

I would rather be Henry Bergh with a theory of mercy put to practice than the noblest poet ever born who never did anything but sing.—"Amber" in Chicago Journal.

Bringing the Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor: A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

Mrs. B. F. WILSON,
Derry Depot, N. H.

Mrs. Orrin Webber, Bedford, N. H., a cripple and on crutches 14 years with terrible ulcers on her limbs; soundly cured.——Geo. H. Stevens, North Lyndeboro, N. H., cured of terrible burning and itching humor which covered the entire body.——Mrs. Wm. E. Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.——Oliver Peirce, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.——C. L. Buffum, North Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.——Isaac Butrick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of discharging ears and deafness.——Mrs. A. L. Colby, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.——Mrs. L. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs; cured.——Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.——Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st., Manchester, N. H., blindness cured.——Dr. Levi B. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the Doctor did not see him.——Thomas Tuke, Levi Burt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.——Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 3 years with others.——Son of W. B. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.——G. Ambrose, No. Londonderry, N. H., cured of cancer.——C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.——C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

The Dover Democrat of the 11th inst. says: "E. T. Cotton of Farmington was in town this forenoon to see Architect Brown. Mr. Cotton took possession of the Webster house, Portsmouth, yesterday. He intends putting on another story, and adding about forty rooms."

Mrs. Eunice Joy, of Sanford, York county, whose son, Albert Joy, is now serving a life sentence in the Massachusetts state prison for murder committed twelve or fourteen years ago, was on the 11th inst. taken to the Maine insane asylum by the town treasurer of Sanford. She has been mildly insane ever since her son's conviction, but recently became violent. She always believed her son innocent, although the evidence was conclusive against him, and her insanity is due to her maternal love.

Mr. Charles H. Tucker, the confectioner, has sold his mare "Fanny" to Mr. Daniel McIntire.

Mark M. Washburn, of West Kennebunk, Me., about thirty-eight years old, a section boss of the western division of the Boston & Maine railroad, left home for work on the morning of the 11th inst.; he was found a few minutes later suffering from hemorrhage of the lungs, and died before he reached home. He leaves a wife and one child, well cared for.

About three hundred persons, adults and children, went on the picnic of the First Parish of Dover on the 11th inst. They went by train to Camp Ellis, Old Orchard beach, and arrived home about half past seven o'clock in the evening, having had a fine day and a fine time.

The Methodist society and Sunday school of Dover held their annual picnic on the 10th inst., at York beach. There was a very large party, and they left Dover at eight o'clock in the morning for this city, where they took the York beach train, arriving at their destination without mishap. Gov. Sawyer's cottage and grounds, and Mr. John Bracewell's, were opened to the picnickers, most of whom also visited the Nubble light-station during the day. The excursion was a very successful affair.

A little boy named Clinton Smith fell overboard at the Spring market on Wednesday, the 11th inst., and would have been drowned had it not been for the mate of a vessel lying near at hand, who jumped over after him and pulled him out.

To Save Life

Frequently requires prompt action, an hour's delay waiting for the doctor may be attended with serious consequences, especially in cases of Croup, Pneumonia, and other throat and lung troubles. Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

ENGINEERS' VERDICT.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 10th.

The board of engineers of the city of Portsmouth having met on the eighth day of July and subsequent days to investigate the cause of the fires which occured in the Webster house in this city on the of July sixth, and having visitamined the premises upon res were and heard the evicommitted to them, find, that two ry fires were in progress at the house, in said Portsmouth, on ing of said July sixth, one in a the third story of said house, other in the attic of said house, fires had not in any way any ction with each other. In witness we do hereunto set our hands the year above written:

ert A. Marden, George A. Jackson. Willard M. Gray,, Willard J. Sampson, Charles L. Hoyt, George W. Green, Engineers of the City of Portsmouth,

A true copy of finding:

Attest, SAMUEL R. GARDNER, clerk.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

J. Philbrick was granted leave to open shutterly street to repair drain.

Committee on fire department were instructed to erect a suitable building for the hook and ladder truck in the court house yard, at an expense not exceeding $1000.

Committee on fire department were instructed to examine Miller avenue and its neighborhood, and report as to a suitable location for a reservoir.

Bills to the amount of $3000 were ordered to be paid.

BASE BALL.

A despatch of the 11th from Nashua says: "At a meeting of the base ball association this evening it was voted to disband the club, it being deemed inadvisable to continue during the hot season." Nashua has a fine ball park and has had a good club, but has always been a poor-paying city for the clubs.

The Lowells, of the New England League, played the Dovers on the 11th inst. at Dover. The score was even, six to six, at the end of the seventh inning, but in the eighth the Lowells made four runs, and the Dovers none. In the ninth Dover made two runs, but this was not enough, and the game ended with Lowell two runs ahead—ten to eight. The game was a fine one all through.

A fine game was played Thursday afternoon on the South street grounds between the Dover and Portsmouth clubs, and was won by the home club, six to four. The following is the score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Portsmouth	3	0	0	0	1	0	0	2	0—6
Dover	1	0	2	0	1	0	0	0	0—4

Earned runs, Portsmouth 1, Dover 1. Base on balls, Portsmouth 1, Dover 2. Struck out, Portsmouth 1, Dover 5. Stolen bases, Portsmouth 12, Dover 6. Two base hit, Canavan. Hit by pitched ball, Rudderham. Illegal delivery, Willis. Double play, Murray and Madigan. Left on bases, Portsmouth 8, Dover 4. Passed ball, Canavan 3. Time of game, two hours. Umpire, Mahoney.

PERSONAL.

Hon. Frank Jones arrived home from Washington, D. C., on Thursday.

Charles G. Conner, Esq., of Exeter, clerk of the supreme court of Rockingham county, was in this city on Thursday.

Mr. Everett Hammond of Eliot was in this city on the 12th inst., for the second time since he was seriously injured several months ago by being thrown from a team.

Dr. J. L. M. Willis of Eliot, and wife, started on a short vacation trip to Concord this (Friday) morning. Dr. Brigham of Salmon Falls will attend to Dr. Willis' patients in the upper part of the town during his absence, and Dr. Sherburne of this city will care for those in the lower part.

Mr. Frank Clark, the Water street fisherman who has been laid up by rheumatism caused by exposure in the early part of last winter, he has so far recovered as to be able to be out of doors, but he is still in a crippled condition.

City Missionary D. W. Waldron of Boston, and his daughter, were on July 12th reported to be both dangerously ill with typhoid fever. Mr. Waldron is well known to philanthropists in this city and vicinity from his activity in the matter of giving the poor children of Boston an outing on the Fresh Air fund.

Mr. George O. Goldsmith of Arlington, Mass., and Miss Mildred Andrews of Dover, are guests of Mr. O. J. Goldsmith and wife of Cabot street.

J. Lewis Harris, New England agent for the Northern Pacific railroad, is sojourning in this city.

MARITIME NOTES

The northwester which came on butt end foremost about 1:30 o'clock Thursday morning, the 12th inst., did no harm worth mentioning in this city, so far as reported. At the Shoals the blow was the heaviest summer gale known in many years. The schooner Gertie Freeman of this port, Capt. Johnson, was driven from her anchorage in Star island roads, and went ashore in Cedar island cove; it was expected she would be got off without much difficulty as soon as the weather should become fair. A number of yachts at anchor in the roads dragged close to the breakwater or to Cedar island, but none grounded. One whale boat is reported to have foundered. The steamers Oceanic and Pinafore, at the Appledore landing, were knocked around at a lively rate, and the big boat parted her mooring lines as fast as they could be put out; both finally run over to Star island, and made a comfortable berth at the wharf there. The Oceanic was unable to make her landing at Appledore on Thursday forenoon—the first time that such an occurance ever took place. The report from the Gertie Freeman, Thursday afternoon, was that the only apparent harm she had suffered was the loss of part of her shoe; the sea of Thursday did not reach her.

The weather was so rough on Thursday that Mr. Charles H. Johnson did not venture out with his cunner traps, but he captured ten dozen of those fish from the head of one of the wharves.

Capt. William M. Randall, of Elvin Newton's company at Lunging island, Isles of Shoals, came in on Thursday, and reported that the island was deserted near being washed away during the blow of the previous night.

THE BIG SHOW!

4-Paw's All Feature Show Combined with the "Wild West."

Adam Forepaugh's name is a household word in America, and the mere announcement of his coming is sufficient to excite public interest to the point of enthusiasm. This season, moreover, there are peculiar reasons why the people of this city, where, as hitherto announced, the Forepaugh and "Wild West" combined shows exhibit on Friday, July 27th, should await the advent of this famous organization with interest.

The veteran showman has this year added to the attractions of his huge circus and hippodrome the great "Wild West" exhibition, headed by the noted scout and dead shot, Dr. Wm. F. Carver. This is a complete show in itself, and when it is understood that every one of the two hundred Indians, scouts and cowboys who help to portray the vivid scenes of border life are genuine "children of the prairie," some idea of the time, energy and money expended to perfect so vast an amusement enterprise as the Forepaugh show can be obtained. The Sioux Indians with the Forepaugh "Wild West" are from Red Cloud's band—the bravest, and most barbarous of the western tribes. Several of the Indians with the show are said to have been in the Custer fight—a fact which gives to their dramatically realistic reproduction of "Custer's Last Rally" a new and strange interest.

No rifle shot of the ability of Dr. Carver has ever been seen here, while Adam Forepaugh, Jr.'s, sensational specialties, the daring little trapeze pony, the rope-walking "Blondin" horse, the great herd of performing elephants, and the young animal trainer's thrilling thirty-horse bareback act will draw thousands of people for whom the conventional circus performance would have no attraction. To lovers of the circus, pure and simple, however, there are numberless and varied attractions, and the hippodrome races will prove more exciting than those of the ordinary race track.

All the great features of this great show will be seen in the street paagnt, which takes place at ten A. M., on the day of the exhibition in this city.

The boys of the United States training ship Portsmouth were ashore again on Thursday. They seem to be an unusually fine company of young men.

Mr. Barron Hubley, mate of the schooner Active, was badly injured on Thursday afternoon by being struck in the face by the winch handle, the pawl failing to hold. Dr. Parsons attended him, and pronounced him not dangerously hurt.

Messrs Charles and Paschal Langton of Kittery returned from Canada on Thursday, the 12th inst., with 210 lambs for Brackett, the south end butcher of this city.

A party of forty-three poor children from Boston, who had been passing two weeks at Rosemary Cottage in Eliot, left for Boston on Wednesday forenoon of this week, and the same number of others arrived from Boston on the afternoon of that day for a two weeks stay. These children are from various missionary stations in Boston, and are all sent out under supervision of Mr. D. W. Waldron, Boston's city missionary.

The Union Rebeka Degree Lodge of this city went on a picnic to York beach on Thursday, the 12th, in barges.

The tenants of the building on the corner of Ladd and High streets, Mr. Edwin W. Berry, baker, and Frank L. notified to vacate by the owners of the property, who propose to put up a large business block there.

The sewer traps on both sides of High street, between Hanover and Congress streets, were choked by rubbish during the heavy shower on the morning of the 12th inst.; in consequence the sidewalks were covered several inches deep with water and mud.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

HABIT OF EATING CANDY.

Its Extension in England and in Europe. American Caramels.

Not only throughout the east, where indulgence in sweets has been a popular custom from time immemorial, but in western and northern lands as well, has the appetite for goodies assumed formidable proportions. Vast quantities of bonbons are disposed of annually on the continents of Europe and America, chiefly by the fair sex, although German, Italian and Spanish men are great eaters of "pralines," chocolates a la creme, sugared almonds and crystallized fruits.

As New Year "etrennes" and birthday offerings bonbons are more in vogue than ever abroad and have become fashionable on this side of the channel within the past decade, no gentleman of Latin or Teutonic origin, being permitted to escort ladies to a theatre or concert, would upon any account fail to provide himself with an elegant bag or decorative packet of "douceurs" for their reflection during the performance, and gorgeous "sacs de sucreries" constitute no insignificant item in the budget of a Parisian "golden youth."

In this country the habit of nibbling chocolate creams and sucking caramels, formerly confined to those who, as the good old toast says, "double our joys and halve our sorrows," has acquired a considerable hold upon Englishmen of the upper and middle classes. It came in when after drinking of port, burgundy and claret went out of fashion.

The well to do Briton of the present day, as a rule, is a champagne drinker, and the consumption of sweets, pronounced by old world connoisseurs of "the wine when it is red" to be fatal to anything like just appreciation of the flavor and bouquet of Oporto and Bordeaux vintages, is not held to effect the taste for those of Rheims and Epernay. He who restricts his prandial potations to "sparkling" may, therefore, indulge in lollipops and cigarettes to his heart's content, without fear of being denounced as an outward barbarian, "which," as Macbeth remarked upon a memorable occasion, "was not so before." Consequently men of good social position, whose fathers would have shuddered at the mere sight of a stick of barley sugar or a slab of taffee, may be seen any day at desert time devoting an animated and persevering attention to chunks of nougat and Rabat Lakoum "fondants" of a dozen different stages and colors, and candied "mandarins" or "Tangerines."

In a less luxurious stratum of society the demand for "butter scotch" and cakes of chocolate has become so eager that railway stations and other places of public resort positively bristle with mechanical appliances for conveying these "lollies" to the fortunate possessor of one particular denomination of her majesty's bronze currency. Sweets, in a word, are become a power in the state, and rule "the camp, the court, the grove." Even judges own their dulcet sway; soldiers suck almond rock while doing "sentry-go;" the policeman on his beat has a bull's eye in his mouth as well as in his belt, and the British tar chews an American caramel instead of the quid of "pigtail" that used to distend his swarthy cheek in the good old days of England's "wooden walls."—London Telegraph.

Eggs of the Ostrich.

The egg of the ostrich is equal in weight and nutrition to about a dozen hen's eggs, and one often is found that will weigh four pounds. The flavor is similar to that of the ordinary hen's egg, and an omelette made of them could not be detected. The Indian mode of cooking the egg is peculiar. The tip is broken open, a part of the white poured off, herbs stirred in with the remainder and the shell is placed in live coals, where it is kept until the contents are cooked hard. One egg contains sufficient nourishment for two or three hearty men. The Indians bring quantities of them to Puenta Arenas, where they are used by the citizens and are sold to the stewards of passing ships for food or to the passengers to take home for curiosities. There is great risk in purchasing them, however, as the shells are so thick as to prevent a test of their condition. A foul egg will sink in water like a good egg of the ordinary hen, and when it is broken the stench is sufficient to destroy the peace of a whole ship's company.—Patagonia Cor. Philadelphia Times.

Illiteracy Said to Be Increasing.

Statistics and school reports give us the startling fact that illiteracy, instead of decreasing, is actually increasing in the United States. The superintendent of the schools of New York state reports that population is increasing faster than the increase of school attendance. The number of children of school age in that state is 1,763,115; but the total enrollment of pupils is only 625,610. This is a bad showing, indeed. Compulsory education has not worked successfully with us in any part of the country, a few of the cities excepted. Some remedy must be devised or national degeneracy must inevitably ensue. Advocates of manual education urge that when children are taught to do as well as read, they will be more anxious for schooling. It stands to common sense that if we wish the people to love the schools, we must make it advantageous for them to do so. It is disastrous to create a public sentiment that looks on schooling as an unpleasant requirement of the state.—Globe-Democrat.

Colored Industrial School.

The Colored Reformatory Industrial school, of Nashville, Tenn., is nearly completed, and will be opened on April 1. It is being erected by an organization whose ambitious name is "The Universal Congregational Methodist church of the United States of America," and which has for its object the betterment of the colored race spiritually and morally. It hopes to attain this object by having connected with each church a temperance hall, a home factory, or an institution of learning. The Nashville institution will open with about 100 young colored people of both sexes.—New York Tribune.

A well known old Philadelphia gossip was counting on her fingers the other day some of the fashionable people whose marriages were the result of runaway matches, and in not a single instance had they turned out well.—Philadelphia Times.

Earnestness in Public Speaking.

I think the great thing in a speech is earnestness of purpose and especially of delivery. I would not advise the slightest attention to gesticulation, for that will take care of itself with an earnest speaker, and some of the most earnest and effective seem to dispense with it altogether. The manner is everything in public speaking. You may hear two speakers, one stirring you to the depths, the other drowned in your own yawning, and yet had you read them in your evening newspaper, they would have been equally good or equally commonplace.—John D. Long in The Writer.

Mormon Thrift and Economy.

The city of Salt Lake is practically without debt. Its bonds, to the amount of $200,000, to aid in the construction of a canal, over twenty miles long, to bring an adequate supply of fresh water from Utah lake, have already been largely redeemed, though the term of the loan has but half expired.

A people who have by patient endeavor and community converted a sterile region into a garden spot, by irrigation, naturally become imbued with notions of thrift and economy—public as well as private. This natural tendency is encouraged by an eminently practical religion. The emblem adopted by the founders of Utah is the beehive. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints seeks to make its followers honest, industrious and economical.—Delegate John T. Caine's Letter.

A Friend in Need.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing coughs and diseases of the lungs and throat? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

The convention of republican clubs was formally opened at Saratoga, N. Y., July 11th.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do!—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, 1st Division New York Appraiser's Office.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

Ploughing the Waves.

A storm at sea means inevitable seasickness for ocean travellers. The vibration of a steamer's screw, even, is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparable tranquilizer of sea-sick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveller, tourist or invalid should be without in "crossing the briny," or making a tedious land journey. No unmedicated stimulant of commerce is comparable for efficacy to the great invigorant. Emigrants to the west pronounce it a reliable preventive of malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and miasma-tainted vapors give rise. It renders brackish water drinkable and harmless, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney troubles and rheumatism.

Lieut. Col. Leslie Smith, commanding the post at Fort McGinnis, Montana, who has been an army officer for thirty years, has just made application through the territorial authorities for his naturalization papers, as he wishes to come a citizen of the United States. This is said to be the only case known in the United States army where an officer is not a citizen.

From Rev. H. P. Torsey, D. D., LL. D., late President Maine Wesleyan Seminary and Female College, Kent's Hill, Me.: "Dr. F. W. Bertie Hetherington of Somerville, Mass., ten years old, suffered terrible wounds in the face by being bitten by an Irish setter. The dog was chewing a bone, and the little boy went up to him and patted him on the head. The brute was shot.

Fortity the system, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, against the diseases peculiar to hot weather. This medicine induces a healthy action of the stomach, liver and kidneys, causing them to prevent the accumulation of the poisons which produce disease.

The Paris Gaulois says that Germany is about to compel the French landlords of Strasburg to sell their property.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. WILD HORSES OUT WEST.

Description of a Terrible Contest Between a Jack and Two Enraged Stallions.

Some horses, of course, are almost incurably vicious, and must be conquered by main force. One pleasing brute on my ranch will at times rush at a man open mouthed like a wolf, and it is a regular trick of the range stallions. In a great many—indeed, in most—localities, there are wild horses to be found, which, although invariably of domestic descent, being either themselves runaways from some ranch or Indian outfit, or else claiming such for their sires and dams, yet are quite as wild as the antelope on whose domain they have intruded.

Ranchmen run in these wild horses whenever possible, and they are but little more difficut to break than the so called "tame" animals. But the wild stallions are, whenever possible, shot; both because of their propensity for driving off the ranch mares, and because their incurable viciousness makes them always unsafe companions for other horses still more than for men. A wild stallion fears no beast except the grizzly, and will not always flinch from an encounter with it; yet it is a curious fact that a jack will almost always kill one in a fair fight. The particulars of a fight of this sort were related to me by a cattle man who was engaged in bringing out blooded stock from the east. Among the animals under his charge were two great stallions, one gray and one black, and a fine jackass, not much over half the size of either of the former. The animals were kept in separate pens, but one day both horses got into the same inclosure, next to the jack pen, and began to fight as only enraged stallions can, striking like boxers with their fore feet and biting with their teeth.

The gray was getting the best of it; but while clinched with his antagonist in one tussle they rolled against the jack pen, breaking it in. No sooner was the jack at liberty than, with ears laid back and mouth wide open, he made straight for the two horses, who had for the moment separated. The gray turned to meet him, rearing on his hind legs and striking at him with his fore feet; but the jack slipped in, and in a minute grasped his antagonist by the throat with his wide open jaws, and then held on like a bull dog, all four feet planted stiffly in the soil. The stallion made tremendous efforts to shake him off; he would try to whirl round and kick him, but for that the jack was too short; then he would rise up, lifting the jack off the ground, and strike at him with his fore feet; but all that he gained by this was to skin his foe's front legs without making him loose his hold. Twice they fell, and twice the stallion rose, by main strength dragging the jack with him; but all in vain. Meanwhile the black horse attacked both the combatants with perfect impartiality, striking and kicking them with his hoofs, while his teeth, as they slipped off the tough hides, met with a snap like that of a bear trap. Undoubtedly the jack would have killed at least one of the horses had not the men come up, and with no small difficulty separated the maddened brutes.—Theodore Roosevelt in The Century.

Features of Zulu Architecture.

A curious feature of these people is, that every specimen of architecture, whether a building or a fence, is circular in form; it seems impossible for a Zulu to mark out a straight line, and as opposed to the fact that a European could, if necessary, build a round house, it would be perfectly impossible for a Zulu to build a square one if his life depended upon it. Nay, more, you cannot make a Zulu understand the structure of a modern house; their minds cannot grasp the details of a square, straight walled building surmounted by a roof, and as for the idea of two or more floors, one above the other, they simply declined to believe it, especially as most of the houses at the diamond fields were at that time on the Bungalow principle.

They could conceive the possibility of the Capitol at Washington, but could not credit its size, as their cleverest builders said no such building could support its own weight. The only material used in their houses being posts, sticks and reeds to thatch it with, commonly called "wattle and daub," and the use of bricks, stone and mortar being beyond their comprehension, they simply discredited the stories told by the white men.—Wilf, P. Pond in Drake's Magazine.

Prison Life in Libby.

At night the six large lofts presented strange war pictures, over which a single tallow candle wept copious and greasy tears, that ran down over the petrified loaf of corn bread, Borden's condensed milk can, or bottle in which it was set, and where it struggled on until "taps," when the guards, with unconscious irony, shouted: "Lights!" at which signal it usually disappeared amid a shower of boots and such other missiles as were at hand. The sleepers covered the six floors, lying in ranks, head to head and foot to foot, like prostrate lines of battle. For the general good, and to preserve something like military precision, these ranks (especially when cold weather compelled them to lie close for better warmth) were subdivided into convenient squads, under charge of a "captain," who was invested with authority to see that every man lay "spoon fashion."

No consideration of personal convenience was permitted to interfere with the general comfort of the "squad." Thus, when the hard floor could no longer be endured on the right side—especially by the thin men—the captain gave the command, "Attention, Squad Number Four! Prepare to spoon! One—two—spoon!" And the whole squad flopped over on the left side.—The Century.

The White Dragon of Canton.

The water population is noisy, and all night long din comes from the river, and on holiday and festival nights their fire crackers and tom toms make things hideous. All the Cantonese live in special terror of the great white dragon, who once appeared in the river and devoured unwary men. At the time of the summer solstice the dragon festival is celebrated, and the terrible beast is propitiated with tons of boiled rice and gallons of samshu, or rice brandy, poured into the river, with an accompaniment of crackers, bombs and songs that would take the ears off any people but the Cantonese.—"Ruhamah" in Chicago Times.

Stephenson's Idea of Rapid Transit.

When Stephenson, the inventor of the locomotive engine, started out, he thought that an engine could not be run except by an expert machinist, one who understood the machine scientifically, and, at the same time, was a practical engineer, and could, if necessary, make little repairs on the road. He took his men from the machine shops. They worked all right, but were terribly aristocratic; worked with kid gloves on, and would not associate with common workmen. They could not be induced to wipe an engine or do any work but just the running of it. Pretty soon it seemed as if they owned the road.

Then Stephenson called his board of directors and said this would not do. He said: "Let us train our own men. After a fireman had served for a few years he knows how to handle an engine. Let us put them on as engineers, and after they know that trade they will be useless for anything else; they cannot make their living any other way." And it is a fact. Outside of his engine this kind of practical engineer is the most helpless creature on earth. Stephenson's idea was carried out. But the legislature got weary. Parliament thought that it was not safe to intrust that class of men with the running of engines and with the lives of their passengers. A committee was appointed and an investigation ordered. Stephenson, of course, was one of the witnesses before the committee. In his testimony he said: "Gentlemen, the matter is simply this: The public demands rapid transit. If I put a man on an engine who knows all its workings he will refuse to work it hard enough to make the necessary time. He will not run the risks. We have to put on men who do not know the engine as thoroughly. They do not know the risks they run, and they will make the time required."—Chicago Times.

Methods of "Jereed" Playing.

Sides are chosen by the leaders and lines marked out about a spear's throw apart. This distance varies with the size and strength of the players, thirty yards being a fair average. Each player has a blunt wooden spear about the shape of a billiard cue, only not so small in proportion at the smaller end. It is shaped in such a way that when balanced on the finger and then grasped it will not be held at the middle, but at a point a little nearer the larger end. A jereed player must possess skill in two ways—he must be able to hurl this spear far and true, and also to catch a spear, when thrown at him, as it goes by.

This sounds more difficult than it really is. The player dodges as the spear approaches, so that it will shoot past his side—the right side, if possible—and then, as it passes him, he sweeps it in with his hand and brings it down to the side, reversing it so as to throw it back again, all in a moment. The object of the game is for one side to drive the other side back and occupy its line. But it is not so rough a game as this purpose would seem to imply. Not half so many accidents occur as in baseball, and it is not nearly so rough as football, since the object of the game can be attained very easily and quickly by throwing the spear over the head of your opponent; for then he has to run back and pick up his spear, and that not only weakens the enemies' line, but gives them, for the time, one less spear thrower.—St. Nicholas.

The Singer's Quavering Voice.

Many singers, especially young singers, fall into the habit of using the "tremolo" or "vibrato." The former is, as the word implies, a trembling of the voice, and may be dismissed as simply vulgar and offensive. The "vibrato" stands on a different footing. It is impossible to pass a sweeping condemnation upon it, seeing that it is adopted by nearly the whole Italian school—that school to which we are accustomed to look for the proper production of the voice. Where it does not arise from an unsteadiness due to straining the open tones in large theatres and music halls it would appear upon analysis to be an exaggeration of the ordinary vibration which is essential to every well produced note.

It enables the singer to obtain much greater power, a desideratum in opera singing and in the large concert halls, and, if kept within bounds, is not open to objection. But some singers use it to such an exaggerated extent that it is sometimes difficult to tell on what note the singer intends to dwell. The voice is swayed backward and forward instead of resting on the note, and this exaggeration produces a most unpleasant sensation on a sensitive ear. There is one of our leading sopranos at the present day who will make a nervous person with a sensitive ear fidget on his chair from the irritation her singing causes; and yet her singing is always spoken of with enthusiasm by the entire press.—Longman's Magazine.

A Source of Pneumonia.

Let a person, especially over 60 years of age, after a brisk walk enter a church "vestry" which perhaps has not been aired for nearly a week, the walls clammy with the frozen perspiration of the last crowded service, and then sit down where some chilling draft will play upon him the whole evening, there is great danger of bad results. No man in five hundred has the skill to properly heat and ventilate a public hall or church.

To ride in a cold, damp, poorly ventilated horse car is also a constant source of danger, especially to elderly people. Some writer affirms that every time people sit with their backs to a window they look into their own coffins. This being the case, we are compelled to look often and long into those dreaded receptacles as we ride to our suburban homes.

For a person who has been hurrying about the streets till in a perspiration to get into a winter horse car and ride three or four miles is to tempt pneumonia. Think of frail persons in this condition sitting down where the cold currents of air dance a reel of death up and down their spinal columns for nearly an hour. —Boston Journal.

Inherited Diseases.

In the realm of disease the facts of inheritance are most numerous and are daily accumulating. Here, alas, they become terrible, fateful and overwhelming. No fact of nature is more pregnant with awful meaning than the fact of the inheritance of disease. It meets the physician on his daily rounds, paralyzing his art and filling him with dismay. The legend of the ancient Greeks pictures the Furies as pursuing families from generation to generation, rendering them desolate. The Furies still ply their work of terror and death, but they are not now clothed in the garb of superstition, but appear in the more intelligible but no less awful form of hereditary disease.

Modern science, which has illuminated so many dark corners of nature, has shed a new light on the ominous words of the Scriptures, "The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation." Instances of hereditary disease abound. Fifty per cent. of cases of consumption, that fearful destroyer of families, of cancer and scrofula, run in families through inheritance. Insanity is hereditary in a marked degree, but, fortunately, like many other hereditary diseases, tends to wear itself out, the stock becoming extinct. A distinguished scientist truly says: "No organ or texture of the body is exempt from the chance of being the subject of hereditary disease." Probably more chronic disease, which permanently modify the structure and functions of the body, are more or less liable to be inherited. The important and far-reaching practical deductions from such facts—affecting so powerfully the happiness of individuals and families and the collective welfare of the nation—are obvious to reflecting minds, and the best means for preventing or curing these diseases is a subject of intense interest to all. Fortunately nature has provided a remedy, which experience has attested as infallible, and the remedy is the world-famous Swift's Specific, a pure vegetable compound—nature's antidote for all blood poisons. To the afflicted it is a blessing of inestimable value. An interesting treatise on "Blood and Skin Diseases" will be mailed free by addressing

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, a the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Democratic Consistency.

The democrats favor free trade because they say protection enhances the price of the poor man's shirt. The markets of the world should freely compete in this country. Goods should come here free of duty, no matter where made. We should be allowed to purchase at the lowest possible prices, and if our manufacturers cannot thrive in consequence of foreign competition, let them at once become producers of bread and beer, while others furnish the clothing, boots and shoes, etc., we now make. This fallacy is indulged in because the foreign manufacturer owns newspapers in New York, and pays liberally to the democratic fund to have his doctrines disseminated. Mr. Cleveland is warmly endorsed in England as a free trade exemplar, and John Bull will head the subscription to the democratic campaign fund with a round number of pounds sterling, "don't you know." This is why the democratic party opposes protection as wrong in principle!

The democracy have long been under a second morigage to the whiskey ring. his power sends its samples and its demands to the White House. Its brands d its wishes are fully recognized by and in committees. This element seeks to be "protected." The large producers regulate prices, control supply and fix the amount of sales. They extend the fraternal right hand to the brewers, and hit them with the left. They will permit no small side shows. They compel the Department of Justice to follow up the moonshiners, and order Randall and Holman to observe a discreet silence as to the expense. In brief, they have their demands, their purposes and political projects, just as the free traders do. Between these two elements the democracy lives, moves and has its being. Remove these sources of income, and there would not be left of the once proud party sufficient numbers of men who could obtain free passes to St. Louis to hold a democratic national convention.

It is these elements that ask the mechanic and artisan to vote for English goods in our markets, admitted without duty; that ask our fishermen to lay up their vessels, and buy the fish they consume of the Nova Scotians; that tell the small whiskey buyer that he must purchase only of the big concerns at "trust" prices, which means at rates which the ring fixes regardless of cost, demand or supply; in fine, it is this which conducts the campaign, runs the newspapers, pays for the flags, will hire the bands, recompense the speakers, reward the political writers and manage all the details of the campaign of the democracy. It is this fact which so disgusts alike the prominent democrats who successively decline as chairman of the campaign committee, one after another, to soil their hands in the disbursement of democratic money coming from such sources to debauch the democracy, once loyal to a fixed set of principles, and now compelled to straddle for votes. It is this, too, which causes the rank and file, the coming young men, sons of democrats, to halt in the march toward the polls and, with a cheer such as only those who vote for principle can give, enroll their names under the banner of Harrison and their country.

The Catholic Church and the Public Schools.

The non-Catholic citizens of Boston seem to have at last become thoroughly aroused over the supervision and control exercised over the public schools of the city by the Catholic priesthood, the culmination of which was reached a few days ago in the dismissal of a most excellent teacher, Mr. Travis, because he taught facts concerning the sale of indulgences by the church of Rome which though true to history were prohibited by the Roman Catholic censors from being taught. Concerning the manner in which the Catholic priesthood of Boston have interfered with what is none of their business, the Transcript says:

"For some years now the textbooks which are used in our schools have been submitted to the examination of Catholic priests here, and until they are mutilated and modified to suit these gentlemen they cannot be used. The only history of England permitted in our grammar schools is Stone's, a very dry, tedious little book—hardly more than a chronology—written many years ago, a book which would be surpeceded were there freedom of choice. A few years ago the school committee authorized the supplemental use in the schools of Dickens' Child's History of England, and this entertaining and harmless little book, a great improvement on the other, was used for a time, but the priestly expugators found something in it—we know not what—distasteful to them, and at their dictation its use has been abandoned. There is another book, Miss Thompson's 'History of England,' one of several volumes known as 'Freeman's Historical Series,' which was introduced into the schools some years ago as a most valuable aid to pupils in English history; but the inquisitors objected to this also, and it has for that reason been withdrawn. Not long ago a school history of England was prepared by a master in our public schools, and efforts were made by his publishers to introduce it into the Boston schools. It was, as usual, handed to the Boston Inquisitors for thir opinion. It came back from them with twenty or thirty alterations. The publishers were, of course, anxious to have the work adopted, and applied to the author to accede to the expurgatorial demands. This he did, and the book, as altered, was again submitted to the priests, who again returned it with a demand for further alterations, which would have made such contortions of history that no self-respecting writer could submit to them; and as this writer refused to do so, his book was kept out of our schools. Well-known standard histories, books which are accepted as ornaments to literature and as authorities, are not permitted to be used in the schools of this birthplace of freedom, and the histories of Macaulay, of Green, and of Knight are as absolutely tabooed as if they were as ribald as Rabelais, or as licentious as Burton's 'Arabian Nights.' Swinton's 'Outlines of History' we have just seen excluded because it contained some trite but unpalatable facts. Even lecturers in the schools are inquisitorially watched by the priests, who look over the notes which the pupils are required to take, and write such comments on the historical facts stated there as 'This is false,' and sometimes prepare answers for the pupils to make at examinations. This sort of interference is continual and increasing. The priests have more and more proxies in the school board, and are growing bolder in that direction."

A mass meeting of citizens to protest against any further priestly interference with the public schools, and demand that the truths of history and science shall be taught in those schools, regardless of what church or creed may be opposed thereto, was held in Faneuil hall on an overflow meeting of at least 1500 persons met in Tremont Temple. Nearly all the prominent clergymen of Boston were present; powerful speeches in favor of keeping the public schools free from the control of priestcraft of any kind were made, and working committees were appointed to initiate such measures as will make the citizens' protest felt.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor: A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

Mrs. B. F. WILSON,
Derry Depot, N. H.

Mrs. Orrin Webber, Bedford, N. H., a cripple and on crutches 14 years with terrible ulcers on her limbs; soundly cured.—Geo. H. Stevens, North Lyndeboro, N. H., cured of terrible burning and itching humor which covered the entire body.—Mrs. Wm. E. Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.—Oliver Peirce, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.—C. L. Buffum, North Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.—Isaac Buttrick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of discharging ears and deafness.—Mrs. A. L. Colby, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.—Mrs. L. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs; cured.—Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.—Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st., Manchester, N. H., blindness cured.—Dr. Levi B. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the Doctor did not see him.—Thomas Tuke, Levi Burt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.—Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 9 years with others.—Son of W. B. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.—G. Ambrose, No. Londonderry, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

Gen. Boulanger, the French political quack, and M. Floquet, prime minister of France, fought a duel with swords at Paris on the 13th, and Boulanger was seriously wounded in the throat.

Hugh M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, the murderer of Preller at St. Louis, Mo., has been granted a respite for four weeks.

To Save Life

Frequently requires prompt action. An hour's delay waiting for the doctor may be attended with serious consequences, especially in cases of Croup, Pneumonia, and other throat and lung troubles. Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Warmer, fair weather, northwesterly winds.

PERSONAL.

Miss Agnes C. Ross of New York is visiting at Mr. W. Freeman's, State street.

Mr. Ed. S. Fay is at Windsor, Vt., for a week's stay. On his return he will bring with him some horses for his own driving.

Mr. John W. Stott of Hanover street is passing his summer vacation at Seavey's creek, Rye.

Capt. Samuel Harding, a well known resident of this city and shipmaster out of this port in the days of Portsmouth's maritime prominence, is passing the summer in this vicinity, making this city his headquarters.

The following-named parties from this city were booked at the Fairmount house, Union Bluff, York, on the 12th inst.: Mr. John L. Randall and wife, Master Bertie L. Randall, Miss Susie L. Randall, Mrs. Mark Mahoney, Mrs. F. P. Muchemore and son, Miss Mamie E. Stavers, Annie Estelle Smart, Ida A. Urch, Mrs. A. K. Brown, Mrs. Albert R. Junkins, Mr. Charles H. Besselievre and wife.

Mr. C. H. Morss, superintendent of schools, and Mr. John Pickard, principal of the high school of this city, were on the 12th inst. elected vice presidents of the American Institute of Instruction.

Col. D. J. Vaughan of Cambridge, Mass., was in this city on Thursday.

Capt. I. H. Washburne, U. S. M. C., retired, accompanied by his oldest son, started on Monday morning of this week in a two-horse carriage for Scarborough beach, Me., where they will pass the rest of the warm season. Mrs. Washburne and two younger children went down by rail, and probably got there first.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Appleton Brown, who are at present sketching at their old home in Newburyport, will later in the season go to the Appledore, Isles of Shoals, as they did last year.

Mr. Ross Turner has opened his picturesque little studio at the Isles of Shoals. He will remain there until September.

BASE BALL.

It is said that the first news the Nashua base ball club and their manager received of the disbardment of the team on the evening of the 11th inst. was when they read the Manchester Union on the morning of the 12th. The Nashua Telegraph of the 12th said: "The players this morning are feeling very blue over the turn in affairs, but will remain here and play a game with the Milfords or some other club Saturday on the co-operative plan. Some of them are in very needy circumstances, and it is hoped a good crowd will be present Saturday. If the club meets with any luck then, they may continue to play for a while at least, and try and keep the schedule dates."

MARITIME NOTES

Sherman Newton came in from Lunging island, Shoals, on Thursday, with a lame side, having received a strain while hauling a seine. He reported about a dozen Georgesmen baited with alewives at the island this week, up to that day.

The schooner Georgia Berry, Ginn master, of Rockland, from Perth Amboy for this port with coal, sprang a leak on the morning of the 12th, and arrived at Vineyard Haven that night with about two feet of water in her hold. The pumps were kept constantly at work, but could not free the vessel. She was beached on the canal flat on the east side of the harbor, and divers will repair her.

The Times of Friday evening says: "The largest dory ever build at Salisbury Point is now awaiting shipment at the shop of Mr. Stephen Lowell, the veteran boat builder. She is owned by a New York gentleman, for the use of his son at Kittery the present season. The dimensions are, length, thirty feet; width, six feet; depth, twenty-eight inches. She will be rigged as a three master."

The schooner Gertie Freeman is reported to have come off the shore at Cedar island on Thursday night, having received only slight injury.

Mr. Benjamin M. Bailey, the veteran caulker of Water street, has placed a new wherry of the Eliot pattern on the river.

George W. T. Brown, colored, has gone to Brentwood once more for drunkenness, this time on a sentence of sixty days and $6.90 costs, imposed in the police court on the 12th inst.

Officer Stott is acting in place of Assistant Marshal Peverly, during the summer vacation of the latter.

The question of the nomination of a candidate for the mayoralty is being now discused in democratic circles. The liberal portion of the party seem to be generally in favor of the renomination of Mayor Hodgdon, according to usage. But the fiat has not yet gone forth.

The printers of Portsmouth, and some of their associates, expect soon to make a fishing excursion in the yacht William H. Russell, when Capt. Browne is ready.

The new coal shed of O. F. Philbrick & Co., on Water street, is assuming an elevated position.

The death claims paid by the Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York during the week ending July 5th amounted to $137,-230.26, on which the net premiums paid amounted to $42,372.53; matured endowment paid during the same week, $55,041.81. This company has paid during the year 1888 thirty-seven death claims on which the dividends more than doubled the insurance, the original policies amounting to $103,000, and the payments to $231,667.75.

The democratic committee of ward one are discussing the propriety of soon calling the members together to make nominations for ward officers to be supported at the coming municipal election. But as a former member of the committee remarked to them, "What is the use of your meeting when everything is already fixed, just as was the nomination of Grover Cleveland at the national convention, and the price of every man is already set down?"

The Providence, (R. I.) Journal, although it announces that it will support the free-trade democratic platform, yet says: "It is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the chances for Harrison's election are decided favorable."

Rev. O. D. Kimball, formerly pastor of the Baptist church in Leominster, Mass., and now of the West Newton Baptist church, has left the latter place after putting a letter of resignation in the hands of the church officers. He admits that he was guilty of gross immorality with five members of his church in Leominster, who were some time ago expelled from that church for making the charges.

Alvin Hunnewell of Norridgewock, Me., is held for trial on a charge of poisoning his wife with "rough on rats." Hunnewell's son, aged eighteen years, and a young man named Chase, also partook of the poisoned food. All will recover.

There was a small riot at Chicago on the evening of the 11th inst., in which a Burlington engine was attacked by a crowd composed of strikers. The strikers are trying to boycott the Burlington cars at Kansas City.

A THOUGHT.

Down where the shores of To-morrow's Land
Are washed by the River of Time,
A Daydream fair reared into the air
A castle of bright sublime;
And working he sang this rhyme;
"There are none who weep, there is naught of sorrow
In this, the joyous Land of To-morrow."

Higher and higher the castle tall
Uplifted its battlements strong,
And gleaming bright, he placed on the height
The Star of Hope; then long
And loud he sang his song:
"There are none who weep, there is naught of sorrow
In this, the joyous Land of To-morrow."

Ah! But a whirlwind of Fate all dark,
Came over that region so blest.
The gleaming star fell down from afar
Till shattered, his Hope lay pressed.
Down, down on the Daydream's breast.
But, did no one weep nor feel in sorrow
A dream lay dead in the Land of To-morrow.
—Florence Converse in New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Unpractical Military Fashion.

Among the curious and unpractical fashions in equipment of the soldier is this: In the cavalry generally it may be said that the man is possessed of two weapons—a sword which is most useful when he is mounted and a carbine which is valuable when he is on foot. Fashion has so ordered it that the sword is attached to his person and remains with him when he is dismounted at the great risk of tripping him up, whereas the firearm is attached to his horse, so that if parted from that animal, for however short a time, he is incapable of defending himself, because the sword is of little use to him when off his steed. In an ideal army such anomalies as this would certainly be remedied.—The Fortnightly Review.

A Patent Medicine Man's Success.

Fall River, Mass., points proudly to the fact that the late Perry Davis, "the pain killer," was a carpenter in that city forty years ago or more. When he found his panacea for all ills he left his bench and took to peddling medicine in a basket. His neighbors told him he was foolish to desert his trade in such a manner, but Davis never doubted his ability to make a fortune with his "pain killer." He went to Providence, R. I., and became proprietor of what was afterward the largest patent medicine establishment in the world. He died some years ago, leaving a large estate to his heirs.—Chicago Herald.

Discomfort Expressed.

A demure, quaint little maiden, daughter of one of our prominent young physicians, is unfortunate in having that irritating illness, chickenpox. One evening, while restless, and a loving mamma endeavored to soothe the unquiet nerves, she looked up and said, "Mamma, the chickens are picking the hen dreadfully." Could the most dreadfully composed sentence be more expressive of discomfort?—Boston Journal.

Womanhood in Zululand.

The girls, although not handsome, are decidedly not homely, and are, structurally, magnificent models of female grace and beauty; but it is very transient, and by the time an American girl is approaching full perfection the Zulu is old, flabby and shapeless, girls of 20 years looking like women on the verge of 50. In youth the Zulu woman is a sylph, in age she is an old hag.—Wilf. P. Pond in Drake's Magazine.

The Instinctive Love of Dress.

The instinctive love or ornament is as strong in the savage as in the most civilized votary of fashion. Yellow ochre and tattoo marks, feathers and beads, are his delight. So strong are these tastes that Darwin describes a South American savage as willing to work hard for a fortnight to earn money required to purchase "chica" to paint himself red.—Longman's Magazine.

Progress of the Sparrow.

In 1850 the English sparrow in America occupied the area of a single tree or tree box. Now he disports himself over an area of 885,000 square miles in the United States and 150,000 in Canada.—Boston Budget.

Endurance of Woman.

It is a well known fact that a woman can swim in cold water very much longer than a man can, and the Swiss say that a man will freeze to death in almost half the time it takes a woman to succumb.—The Argonaut.

Electric Light Device.

The latest device in the electric light line is said to be a shade which intensifies the light at least 25 per cent.—New York Tribune.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, sores breaking out on them in various places. My little boy, three years old, has been a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. I was advised to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we have all taken it. The result is that all have been cured of the scrofula, my little boy being entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

A Collection of Crowns.

The next room (to the throne room of the Kremlin palace) contains probably the finest collection of jewels in the world, even more valuable than those of the holy synod, but not so rare and curious. Here is an assemblage of crowns, most of them coming from the palaces where the thrones were stolen, and some time worn by royal heads. The crowns of Poland, Kazan, Georgia, Astrakhan, Persia and others are more splendid, being covered with some of the largest and most precious stones ever known—"crowns upon crowns, oceans of pearls, rivers of diamonds," as one writer has expressed it. Beyond them are the ancient crowns of the czars, the double one for Peter the Great and his half witted brother being the most curious, and it sits before a double throne, with a place behind the drapery where their sister Sophia used to sit and prompt them what to do and say on occasions of ceremony.

The costliest crown in the entire collection was made by the order of Peter the Great for the Swedish peasant girl who became his wife and the Empress Catherine I, the number of diamonds in it being 2,536, all of them large, flawless stones of the first water, with the largest and finest ruby in the world as a crest. The crown of Ivan the Terrible has some of the rarest stones, very large and perfect turquoises and sapphires of great purity and value. In this room is a large casket of solid gold, which contains the code of the Czar Alexis.—W. E. Curtis in Chicago News.

Cooks Must Have Brains.

Every little while some public critic announces as a strange fact that some chef in a noted hotel gets more pay than a college president, or that the cook of some Vanderbilt or another is better paid than a congressman. Well, why not? Can a man be a good cook and at the same time a brainless ignoramus, not knowing the chemical substance and value of his concoctions? Without for a moment undervaluing scholarship, it may also be suggested that a college professor may be a man of vast acquirement, with little idividual power of his own, while a noted chef must possess inventive resources and a highly developed taste.

Really, the physical good that such a man might do the community by heading a large caravansary might quite balance the good mentally bestowed by any one professor. Doubtless, too, the value in health accruing to one rich family from a good cook might quite balance the good done to the community by any one average congressman. We should not underrate talents that make physical health if we want a good basis for mentality.—Boston Record.

Multiplication of the Arts.

Attention has already been called to the fact that among the lowest forms of life there exists a marvelous rate of reproduction. As life advances, and plants and animals are developed, the powers of reproduction are curtailed, until man, in the highest civilization, and in the highest culture of that civilization, is reached, when the rule of reproduction is at a minimum. In this state of culture the transfer of the struggle for existence from man to the works of his creation is completed. With this transfer there occurs another of wonderful nature. The marvelous powers of reproduction are transferred from the body of man to the soul of man, and he multiplies his intellectual creations at an amazing rate. Arts are multiplied to secure the joys of life, institutions are multiplied to secure justice, linguistics are multiplied to secure mental communication, and multiplied truths are discovered, so that the body of science is expanding toward the infinite and toward the infinitesimal.—Science.

A Momentous Subject.

A question agitating some of the quasi-scientific journals just now is, "Where do sea birds obtain fresh water to slake their thirst?" and the accepted answer is by catching raindrops as they fall. This seems a curious question and answer, and they naturally suggest the query, "Where do salt water fishes obtain fresh water to slake their thirst?" We never hear of the fishes standing erect on their tails, converting their mouths into funnels to catch the rain, although they may possibly do so sometimes as a special treat. Fishes are proverbially thirsty, and yet they apparently have to put up with salt water to drink. Oysters certainly must do so or go without; and probably the sea birds do the same, catching the drops of rain at suitable times as a change.—Chicago News.

True Agents in Minnesota.

In Minnesota a state law compels all agents for trees and nursery stock to have in their possession a certificate setting forth the name, occupation and residence of their principals, and a statement as to where the stock is grown, together with a bond in the sum of $2,000 to save harmless any citizen of the state who shall be defrauded by any false or fraudulent representations in any manner. Any agent refusing to comply as above is liable to fine and imprisonment.—Chicago Times.

Interesting Tapestries.

Two interesting tapestries, the "Marchande de Poissons" and the "Marchande de Legumes," signed Franz van der Borcht, have just been received at the Gobelins museum, to which they were bequeathed by M. His de Butenval. The curiosities of the Gobelins have also been enriched by the present of a pair of Chinese tapestries, depicting celestial sheep, rams, hares and "roosters." The donor is M. Colin de Plancy, by whom these works were brought from China.—Chicago Herald.

Dakota's Big County.

The Griggs County (D. T.) Courier calls attention to the fact that Griggs county contains room enough to seat the entire population of the globe in arm chairs within its limits, allowing each person a space of thirteen square feet. The county has an area of 720 square miles, or over 20,000,000,000 square feet, and the world's population is about 1,500,000,000. The actual population of the county is 3,000 and some blizzards.—Detroit Free Press.

A newspaper printed in Gaelic, the only one of the kind in the country, has been started in Brooklyn.

The Vaquero's Favorite Trick.

The tail twist is a favorite trick and it takes a strong wrist and nice horsemanship. The vaquero urges his pony to the flank of the running bull, and reaching down grasps the tail. A touch of the bridle rein alters the pony's course, the bull's hind legs sweep off the ground and he flops upon his side after making a complete roll over of the tumble if the grip has been a good one. To vault from the saddle to the back of the bull is another joke of the vaquero, and he enjoys the mad plunging of his victim until he sees a good chance to spring off on one side and run to his waiting pony.—"W. B." in Globe-Democrat.

Growth of the Telegraph.

When the first electric telegraph was established, according to the British postmaster general, the speed of transmission was from four to five words a minute on the five needle instruments. In 1849 the average rate for a number of newspaper messages was seventeen words a minute. The present pace of the electric telegraph between London and Dublin, where the Wheatstone automatic instrument is employed, reaches 462 words a minute; and thus what was regarded as miraculous sixty years ago has multiplied a hundredfold in one-half century.—Boston Budget.

A Friend in Need.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing coughs and diseases of the lungs and throat? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

The gross public debt of the Dominion on June 30th last was $8,134,221 more than at the end of the previous year.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

For three weeks I was suffering from a severe cold in my head, accompanied by a pain in the temples. I tried some of the many catarrh remedies without any relief. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me. After only six applications of the Balm every trace of my cold was removed.—Henry C. Clark, 1st Division New York Appraiser's Office.

I was troubled with catarrh in my head to an annoying extent for three years. After using one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm I was entirely cured.—Wm. J. Cline, Victor, N. Y.

In some places the shores of Wolfe island and the mainland in Wilson's bay, New York, are covered with potato bugs to a depth of several inches.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who was a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

The town of Berbera, in Somaliland, Europe, has been burned. Forty persons, mostly children, invalids and cripples perished.

To most children, the bare suggestion of a dose of castor oil is nauseating. When physic is necessary for the little ones, use Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take. Try them.

George W. Stoddart, the actor, died July 9th. He leaves one daughter, the wife of Neil Burgess.

Impurities of the blood often cause great annoyance at this season; Hood's sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and cures all such affections.

Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a billious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

Twenty-six handsome summer cottages have been erected in Kennebunkport since last season, and are now all occupied.

Adamson's Botanic Balsam is regularly prescribed by many physicians of the best standing, and is recommended by professors of medical colleges to their students, as invaluable for all diseases of the throat and lungs.

In New York, July 12th, Richard Carter, a stevedore, sixty-two years old, shot his wife twice in the breast and side, inflicting serious wounds, and then shot himself fatally in the head. The couple were married six months ago, Mrs. Carter being at that time a widow. The tragedy was caused by Mrs. Carter refusing to live with her husband, as she had learned that he had another wif. Carter is said to have had four wives, and it is not believed that Carter was his real name.

It Is Not Best

To always believe everything that a person tells you, but when you hear that the best blood purifier is Sulphur Bitters, you can believe it, for they cured me of a severe case of blood poisoning.—Rev. A. Fairchild, New York City.

It is noted that the famous White Lady of the house of Hohenzollern has failed to appear and give warning of the deaths of the two emperors lately. It is suggested that a new ghost had better be secured, unless the White Lady make some explanation for he neglect of duty.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

The Florida orange crop is expected to reach 2,000,000 boxes this season.

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

The oldest person in Alfred, Me., is Thatcher Friend, who was born in that town Dec. 22d, 1797, and is consequently ninety years and six months of age. He was living at Scarboro in 1825, the time of Gen. Lafayette's visit to Maine, and distinctly remembers seeing him at that place while enroute to Portland, which is one of the pleasantest recollections of his early life. REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOYE, Ph.D.

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. The Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. H. A. MOTT, Ph. D.

"The Royal Baking Powder is purest in quality and highest in strength of any baking powder of which I have knowledge. WM. MCMURTRIE, Ph.D.

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE.—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, besides affording the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a comparatively high degree of strength, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions, in a sealed envelope. Lumber Regions of Canada.

These foresters were a lot of rough men, not large, but muscular and well knit. The most of them were of the poorer class—either young unmarried men or men who, having no land to cultivate, must keep their families by their wages; in the summer season they worked for the fishing merchants in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the winter they passed at these lumber shanties, and during the spring freshets they helped to "drive" the logs they had cut and hauled.

The voyageur here also generally holds his place in the front rank, explores and reports the quality and quantity of timber in certain "limits" or lots, frequently fills the position of "boss," or at the lowest wields nothing inferior to the ax; in short, his skill and judgment in woodcraft naturally makes him one of the most valuable hands. And such is his love of the woods that in old age he will sometimes spend the winter at a camp doing odd jobs. Many of the voyageurs, again, hold their freedom above any wages; in the fall they load their canoes with provisions and go off in pairs for the winter to compete with the Indians as hunters and trappers in the remotest wilderness.—C. H. Farnham in Harper's Magazine.

Literary Morality in England.

Mr. E. V. Seebohm seems to have a curious notion of literary morality. He knows that a story by Mrs. Burnett, called "Little Lord Fontleroy," has attracted general attention; he seizes upon it, dramatizes it, advertises it, uses for his play the title of Mrs. Burnett's story, trades on the reputation of it, and then, when the authoress informs him that it is her story, that she has invented it, and that she herself has dramatized it, and is anxious to produce it on the stage, Mr. Seebohm tells her that she has no grievance. Why? Because, says Mr. Seebohm, the play is mine, not yours; because I have widely departed from the original, and because, if it does succeed, I don't mind giving you a bit! Mr. Seebohm impudently declares that no man could have behaved more honorably. That could hardly be shared by the public, who consider that, be the law what it may, the authoress of a charming story has been very unfairly and shabbily treated.—London Truth.

Happier Days for Papa.

The father of a family, becoming annoyed at the fault finding of his children over their food, exclaimed in a rage one day at dinner: "You children are intolerable; you turn up your nose at everything. When I was a boy I was often glad enough to get dry bread to eat." "Poor papa," said Rose, the pet of the family, "I am so glad you are having such nice times now living with mamma and us."—Boston Transcript.

Tea and Coffee Versus Nerves.

Tea and coffee I have practically given up. I found they made me nervous, fidgety, anxious, low spirited, and took some of my energy away. Tea made me tremble, gave me brilliant but false ideas, and confused both speech and writing. Coffee griped me, gave me colic and took my memory away for hours; so I have given both up. Since doing so I have lost my writer's cramp from which I suffered

A Very Peculiar Weakness.

I know quite a number of people who avoid the telephone as they would a small pox patient, and who really and honestly believe that they could neither talk through it or receive messages over it, though its use is as simple to them as to any one else under the sun. I used to know a man who swore that he could not talk to any one through a speaking tube, a contrivance which, as everybody probably knows, is the best possible conductor of the human voice. The same weakness of the nerves that influenced this man's case probably governs the telephobiacs in their prejudice against this invaluable mechanism.—Alfred Trumble in New York News.

An Odd Water System.

Calcutta, in its central parts, is supplied with water from many miles up the Hooghly. It is settled and filtered in large reservoirs, and seems, as it is pronounced to be, fairly pure water. Very careful people boil it; but the majority of the foreigners use it freely as it comes from the hydrants. It is carried into upper floors in goat skins. It looks queer to see coolies sprinkling the streets from skins slung over their shoulders. It is thus done throughout the esplanade. In the business streets coolies sprinkle from large movable hose; in outer parts from carts which are filled with water by women carriers.—Carter Harrison in Castor Oil in Boilers.

A writer in The American Machinist recommends the use of castor oil in boilers were alkaline water is used. He says that from two ounces to a pint of oil will prevent foaming all day. The oil is put in after the engine shall have started if foaming shall begin.—Chicago Times.

The Royal Irish Constabulary.

The men who compose it are almost exclusively Irish, for the most part the sons of Irish farmers or tradesmen, drawn from all parts of the country, irrespective of creed. Catholics, Protestants and Presbyterians are equally welcome to its ranks, but perhaps the proportion of the first named religion is about 73 per cent. of the total strength; they are all men who, before enrollment, must show that they possess a fair education, and whose character has been carefully inquired into; they enroll voluntarily and eagerly, and beyond the requirements of one month's notice are under no obligation to remain. As a rule they do remain for many years, marry Irish women, and when discharged settle in Ireland and possess the good will of the people.—Murray's Magazine.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have accordingly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, a the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and we can feel more sensibly than others the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

PORTSMOUTH HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

From the report of the United States senate committee on commerce, received through Hon. Wm. P. Frye of Maine, we learn that the river and harbor bill as it was passed by the senate contains the following items, with explanatory comments:

Portsmouth.—Improving harbor at Portsmouth, New Hampshire: Continuing improvement, fifteen thousand dollars. The project for improving this harbor was adopted in 1879 and involved an estimated expenditure of $150,000; the object being to check the violent tides in the harbor, and to give a navigable depth over the ledge known as Gangway rock, opposite the navy yard. It embraces three items—the building of a stone dike parallel with the main channel of the river between Great and Goat islands; the removal of Gangway rock to twenty feet low-water depth; and the removal of part of the ledge at the southwestern point of Badger's Island, which is a dangerous obstruction in the way of vessels coming down the harbor at ebb-tide. One hundred and seven thousand dollars have thus far been expended upon this work, and there remains to complete the project only the removal of the point of ledge projecting from Badger's island. It is estimated that $25,000 will be expended in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889.

Little Harbor.—Improving harbor of refuge at Little Harbor, New Hampshire: Continuing improvement on the enlarged plan, twenty-five thousand dollars. Little Harbor is a small harbor near the entrance to Portsmouth harbor, frequented by the coasters and fishing vessels, and only accessible at high water. Its inner anchorage ground has a depth of nine feet at mean low water, but the channel leading to it has, at places, only three feet. A project for its improvement was adopted in 1886, the object being to provide a harbor of refuge for vessels at times when they cannot reach Portsmouth harbor. It consisted in dredging a channel 100 feet wide and nine feet deep at mean low water for a distance of 3,000 feet to the small anchorage, which was to be slightly enlarged. This improvement, however, was deemed inadequate, and in October, 1886, a special survey was made, and the report thereon recommended an enlarged plan of improvement by constructing two small breakwaters at the mouth of the harbor and dredging the channel to twelve feet deep, at an estimated cost of $165,000. The necessity for a harbor of refuge at this point has long been urged, and the numerous wrecks which have occurred in the vicinity, which could have been avoided had Little Harbor been improved, bear witness that it is demanded in the interests of commerce as well as humanity.

GOT 'EM AGAIN.

The Newburyport Herald gives the following account of the appearance of the sea serpent in Ipswich bay last week:

"The sea serpent, after meandering in other waters for many years past, has at length appeared in Ipswich bay, and off Plum island at that—at least a strange fish was seen off the island on Wednesday by two reliable men of ward one, and a fish which seems to give color to the fact of the existence of the much discussed serpent of the sea. Captain Charles W. Thurlow has been a fisherman in the bay for forty years, and Samuel S. Short, Jr., has also fished in the same waters for many years past, so that both may be regarded as at least tolerably familiar with the fish which visit the bay, and qualified to detect the difference between a regular and an irregular visitant to these waters.

These men were fishing for mackerel off the Simpson cottage, on Wednesday, when their attention was attracted by a strange object off Long point, a distance of over two miles away. It looked like a portion of the side, or perhaps head, of some unusually large fish. The portion exposed was perhaps ten feet in length, and at first the men thought it the exposed side of a good sized whale. In a moment or two the object sank into the water and headed in the direction of the wherry. Then both men realized that they were about to be favored with a sight of some marine monster. The fish was passing through the water at a rapid rate of speed and was leaving behind a tremendous wake.

Mr. Short, anxious to get as full a view as possible, stood up on the thwart, and was well repaid. Inside of five minutes, he says, the distance from Long point to the wherry had been covered, and the strange fish went by at a rate of speed equal, the men estimate, from twelve to fifteen miles an hour. Mr. Short says the fish passed within twelve feet of the wherry, and that he had a fine view of his snakeship or whatever it was. The fish was within a foot of the surface of the water, and the water being quite clear facilitated the view. The stranger was a monster indeed; the body, which appeared to be of a brownish color, was perfectly smooth and round, as large as a good sized cask, free apparently from fins, and at least seventy-five feet long. The head could not be seen plainly, owing to the great force with which the marine monster was using it in forging ahead.

Captain Thurlow, who also took a look at the fish as it sped by, joins with his partner in the estimates as to length, declaring that seventy-five feet is a modest estimate. The fish, says the captain, 'went whizzing by at a tremendous speed, leaving a wake as high and as rough that made by a steamboat.' He says that in all his experience he never saw a fish in these waters so long and so powerful, and his partner says the same; both declare that it was not a whale, nor a monster shark, but a stranger, and the nearest approach to the sea serpent ever seen in this section of the bay. It is perhaps needless to add that Plum island for days to come will be the objective point of hundreds who desire to get a peep at the sea serpent."

Mr. John Rogers of Kittery, the well known florist, who has been seriously ill for a number of weeks, has so far improved as to be able to be out of doors. During Mr. Rogers' sickness the business has been efficiently conducted by his son, John Rogers, Jr., who seems to have kept things in order as well as the veteran florist himself could have done.

The Biddeford Times remarks; "The Times has no objection to a one-cent postage rate, but before that reform is inaugurated we should like to see a better service than is now afforded in some parts of the country. For instance, the postmaster at Lebanon Centre informs us that more than half the time the Weekly Times is not received there until the Tuesday following publication. Considering that the Times is mailed regularly on Thursdays, it does seem as though Tuesday was a little late for it to reach a York county post-office. We don't want to appear over-critical, but really five days between Biddeford and Lebanon is stretching things dangerously near the breaking point." Our Biddeford contemporary seems not to be aware that a "reform" administration is running things in this country, and that one of the most glaring instances of the reform is to be found in the manner in which the postal service has been steadily reformed backward ever since St. Cleveland ascended the throne.

On Thursday night of last week two hunters in the north woods, town of Ellington, Conn., found the body of a woman lying in their path. The body had evidently been there many weeks, and was entirely decomposed. The remains were identified as those of Mingie Piefe, twenty-eight years old, who disappeared last December during a blinding snow storm She lived with an uncle in Rockville, was cruelly treated, and probably ran away, wandered four miles to Ellington, and was lost in the woods and buried in the snow during the

How to Be a Good Nurse.

Six things, says a doctor writing on the subject, are necessary to a good nurse—strong, equal health, sound nerve, minute observatica, a retentive memory, habits of neatness and cleanliness, and a calm, collected mind. A nurse must never disregard her health, because it is essential to her own well being, and because, too, attendants on the sick should always be cheerful and hopeful. Sound nerve is often a matter of training, but its root lies in unselfishness. Any one who, in an accident or operation, forgets self in the desire to aid others, will not be troubled by trembling or fainting. The faculties of observation and retentiveness of memory can be developed by having interest in the work strong enough to make the nurse careful and patient in her observations.

A calm mind is generally the result of organization. If a nurse has arranged her day's work beforehand, if she keeps punctually to this arrangement, and if everything needful is neatly disposed, she is not likely to be discovered in bustle and confusion at any time. The nurse should, furthermore, be mindful that she is under the doctor, and should respect and obey his directions, even if she differs in opinion from him. It is extremely important that those who are sick and suffering should be treated with unfailing gentleness and patience; nothing can ever excuse a nurse for losing her temper with her patient. No duty is too little or trifling for her attention, and no work that is for the good of the patient can be degrading. It is further a good rule never to approach a case fasting; but always to have a good meal before going on duty.—Popular Science Monthly.

Stilling the Troubled Waters.

In the north of Scotland the Kilda fishermen obtain a sort of calm, which they call tioum, by casting into the sea the oily livers of the fish they have caught. At Gibraltar and other parts of the Spanish border the fishermen are accustomed to pour a little oil on the sea in order to still its motion, that they may be able to see the oysters lying at its bottom, which, it seems, are very large and luscious. Another observation worth attention has been made by the seal catchers. When seals are devouring a very oily fish, which they always do under water, the waves above are observed to be remarkably smooth, and by this sign the fishermen know where to look for them.

This property of oil is known particularly to divers, who make use of it in order to have a more distinct view of the bottom of the sea. The Bermudians, when they would strike fish, which they could not see if the surface of the water were ruffled by the wind, pour on the waves a little oil to smooth them. The Indians of the Pacific ocean use cocoanut oil to render the water transparent when fishing for pearl oysters and other shells. Again, the divers in the Mediterranean, who when under water in their business need light which the rippling of the surface interrupts, let a small quantity of oil now and then out of their mouths, which, rising to the surface, smooths it and permits the light to come down to them.—Georges Cloue in Chicago Inter Ocean.

Hard Road to Travel.

On the road from Jerusalem to Jericho the Dead Sea and Jordan, the almost forgotten song, "Jordan is a Hard Road to Travel," was recalled and sung with a heartiness born of the realization that we were traversing one of the worst roads of a country possessing the worst roads in the world. It was indeed a hard road, but we reached its end.—Cor. Detroit Free Press.

Curious Experience in Barbados.

Lying beyond St. Andrews, a long drive from Bridgetown, and occupying the eastern face of the northern end of the island, are a series of remarkably steep cliffs, that climb out of the sea to a perpendicular height of hundreds of feet. To their bases come along Atlantic swells that have met no hindrance to their will for 3,000 miles, and these attack this rocky barrier with a fierceness that gives to the coast some of the most magnificent sea effects that I have ever watched. Even North Irish or Hebridean cliff surges were but baby play beside them. Striking with a boom, they mounted almost to the summit with a green, glassy rush that reminded me of Niagara just above the fall; then combing into spray, lashed out greedy fangs of foam at the looker on, and retreated with a roar like near and heavy thunder.

They followed in quick succession, each seeming to climb a little higher than the last, until one's senses were quite upset by enormous force, and we experienced a curious illusion of motion. Land and wave were waltzing to the music of the sea. An infernal one, two, three, one, two, three movement began; solid rock lost its anchorage, and the world went round and round until giddiness came and the steadiest head dragged the rest away. There was a wild look in my companion's eyes, and she was half hysterical when the earth regained its senses a little away from the orchestra's reach.—Dr. William F. Hutchinson in American Magazine.

Woodcraft of the Cuban.

The woodcraft of our vaquero, Jose, had many extraordinary illustrations. Striking his machete into a beautiful tree he brought it forth ejaculating most dramatically: "Mira! la sangre de la Doncella!" ("See! the blood of the virgin!") The blade was dripping with blood red sap of a red wood known as carne de doncella or virgin flesh. Again when we had become thirsty and could find no water, Jose knew a back door out of this dilemma. "Here is Aaron's rod," said he. "I will give you water." With this he struck a large vine twice, severing a piece as big as one's arm from the parra cimarona or wild grape, and from the mouth of the hanging tube we drank our fill of winy, refreshing sap.

So, too, his seductive calls of the wild pigeons, of which we found four varieties, were astounding. He would first with his hands make sharp, loud clappings, grading these down to sounds as low as the soft flapping of wings. This would be followed by a vocal call so like that of the wild pigeon that one seemed nestling there above our heads. To these would come low, half doubting answers from all about us, and finally the scurrying and rustling of the deluded birds above.—Edgar L. Wakeman in Philadelphia Times.

I would rather be Henry Bergh with a theory of mercy put to practice than the noblest poet ever born who never did anything but sing.—"Amber" in Chicago Journal.

Mrs. Emma L. Lawson, aged twenty-four years, dropped dead on the door-steps of her house in Cambridge, Mass., July 12th. She was married just two weeks before her death.

Queen Natalie of Servia has had her son, the crown prince, taken from her, and has been ordered to leave Germany.

LADY—How do you manage to keep everything so clean and sweet?
SISTER—After much experimenting, we have decided that PYLE'S PEARLINE has no equal for all cleansing purposes. It is effective, economical, and perfectly harmless; we use it for everything, from the finest linens to the bare floors.
LADY—I always use PEARLINE at home, but I am particular and want everything as clean as possible.
SISTER—We have to be doubly particular—you know "cleanliness is next akin to godliness"—and we find that PEARLINE is the best thing with which to maintain perfect cleanliness.
PEARLINE is sold everywhere. Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Anbin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

REPUBLICAN MEETING.

There will be a special meeting of the Republican club at eight o'clock this (Monday) evening, at the headquarters on Congress street. Let every republican be present, as business of importance will come up. PER ORDER.

EASTERN YACHT CLUB'S FLEET AT THE SHOALS.

The fleet of the Eastern Yacht club started Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock from Marblehead harbor on the annual pleasure cruise to the eastward, the fleet being by far the largest and finest one which the club has ever assembled for this purpose. The yachts to the number of fifteen (one other, the Mets, keeping outside the islands and going on to Portland) arrived in Star island roads, off the Oceanic, between three and four o'clock Saturday afternoon, with the exception of the champion sloop Volunteer, which ran in three or four miles ahead of all the others, and was lying at anchor with all sails snugly furled before her nearest competitor arrived.

The yachts presented a beautiful sight as they came in under all sail before a fair wind past White island, and rounding the northwest point of Star island, came to anchor in the roads for the night. The names of the yachts are as follows: Volunteer, Iroquois, Ambassadress, Nokomis, Sylvie, Gitana, Clytie, Vixen, Adrienne, Papoose, Rebecca, Wanderer, Babboon, Norma and Mystery. As soon as the fleet came to anchor the yachtsmen, as in previous years, thronged the Oceanic, making that house their headquarters for the night. In the evening the lights of the yachts shone over the harbor, making the scene one of brilliancy and beauty.

Sunday morning the fleet got under weigh again, and with a bright sun, smooth sea and moderate breeze continued their voyage toward Bar Harbor.

FOR CHAIRMAN, FRANK JONES.

Congressman William L. Scott of Pennsylvania, the millionaire coal baron who pays his workmen the poorest wages of any in the coal mining district, says he is not to be chairman of the executive committee of the democratic national committee, which will have the management of the campaign for Cleveland and reform; he says that rather than take the chairmanship he would give his check for $100,000 to the committee. He told an interviewer on the 14th that Frank Jones of Portsmouth would be the man, and that his selection had been virtually decided upon.

A PUBLIC FUNCTIONARY RETIRES.

People who have had business with the city treasurer, and who have had the pleasure of exercising that inalienable right of the American citizen, to pay municipal taxes, will miss the presence of the genial and accommodating ex-treasurer, our neighbor Samuel P. Treadwell. Mr. Treadwell has for several years been engaged at the public crib. We will not tire our readers by stating for how many years. He has received and paid out we will not attempt to figure how many millions. But he declines further service. We regret to have him go. True, he is a democrat; but he is not to be blamed for that; he was born so. He had been constant in attendance in season and out, at his office. He has evinced a commendable alacrity in the receipt of tithes. He has been liberal with the public money when ordered to disburse. In fine, we may say "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Mr. Treadwell, fortunately for the public, is succeeded by a competent as well as gentlemanly officer, Mr. John J. Laskey. The people of Portsmouth regretted very much when Mr. Laskey was obliged by reason of his health to leave the post-office. If the excellent manner in which [illegible] as a type of the coming service, we shall be abundantly satisfied with the new appointee. He is familiar with accounts, quick at figures, and always gentlemanly in the discharge of his duties. We wish him success. He will make a good officer, and our financial matters will be carefully protected in his hands.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club played the Dovers on the grounds of the latter, Saturday, and were beaten, eight to two. About 600 persons were present, and the score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Earned runs, Dover 6, Portsmouth 2; base hits, Dover 12, Portsmouth 6; errors, Dover 3, Portsmouth 8; stolen bases, Dover 3; base on balls, Dover 3; wild pitch, Willis; struck out, Dover 5, Portsmouth 3. Umpire, Mahoney. Time of game, 1 hour 45 minutes.

The Portsmouth club are to go into the New England league, arrangements having been made Saturday for them to do so. The league managers were very anxious for the club to go in, only requiring that the nine would agree to finish the season. The new arrangement will probably go into effect July 23d.

Demargis struck out fifteen of the Lowells on Thursday. This record, it is believed, has not been surpassed in the New England league this season.

Fred H. Haddock, formerly of this city who has been playing base ball this season with the club of Troy, N. Y., it is announced has been "sold" to the Kansas City club for $1000. The base ball cranks had better get some other word to take the place of "sold." It savors too much of the old slave auction block.

The Dover and Portsmouth clubs will play on the South street grounds this afternoon; play called at three o'clock.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Walter H. Vaughan, of Boston, arrived in this city on Saturday to pass several weeks.

Mr. Horace S. Hatch has rented the house of Mr. Calvin L. Hayes at Kittery, and with his family will occupy it for the rest of the summer, taking possession this week.

C. H. Morss, Miss S. E. Gray and Miss Mary Hills of this city were registered at the Ocean house, Newport, R. I., last week.

Mrs. DeNormandie of Boston Highlands, wife of Rev. James DeNormandie, is passing a week with friends in this city.

Rev. A. P. Peabody, D. D., of Cambridge, Mass., has been visiting friends in Buffalo, N. Y., where on Sunday, the 8th, he preached in the Unitarian church for Rev. Mr. Dillingham.

Mrs. W. H. Dickinson of New York, with two children and nurse, arrived on Friday at Rye on a visit to her father, Col. Jerome C. Butler.

Mr. George A. Hill of Kittery, second officer of the ocean steamship Ohio, left last Friday morning to join his ship in New York, after a brief stay at home.

Miss Minnie C. Burke, of East Boston, is the guest of her uncle, Mr. Tobias E. Burke of Deer street, this city.

Mr. Alpha Senter, of Boston, arrived in this city last Friday, for the first time since he removed to Boston seven years ago, and remained till Sunday afternoon, when he returned. Mr. Senter's mother, widow of Daniel Senter, came down from Boston with her son, and is passing a few days with the family of her sister, Mrs. B. F. Webster.

MARITIME NOTES

The fishing schooner Gertie Freeman, Johnson master, on Saturday afternoon arrived in from the Shoals, where she went ashore during the heavy blow of Wednesday night, the 11th. When the gale came on, the schooner's crew made all ready for slipping both anchors, took the bonnet off the jib and reefed the fore and main sails; as soon as it became evident that the schooner could not hold on, the anchors were slipped and an attempt made to beat out of the roads, but the gale was too heavy, so Capt. Johnson did the next best thing, beached the vessel in the softest place he could find. Her damages consisted in the loss of the shoe, and a small hole stove in her planking between two timbers; none of her timbers were broken. She goes on the marine railway at Kittery this morning for thorough repairs, and to be calked all over by Benjamin M. Bailey.

The schooner Mary Willey, Capt. Zach. Williams, arrived at this port on Saturday last from Bangor, to John H. Broughton with lumber, including the frame and other timbers for the building to be erected on High street by Mr. C. H. Mendum. The Mary Willey was about six miles off Owl's head when she took the gale of last Thursday morning, and Capt. Williams considered himself lucky to get off with no other damage than a twist in the end of the bowsprit, which will necessitate a new stick being put in.

The steamer Undine, Capt. Duncan, went to South Newmarket early Sunday morning, and came down about 9:30 o'clock with a party of fifty gentlemen on board, bound on a trip outside the harbor.

The steamer Cachoco, Capt. Drew, took a large party of gentlemen from [illegible] leaving Dover at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. Most of the party were from Sawyer's Mills.

Wm. H. Goodwin's steam yacht Uncas was at Fernald's landing on Sunday, and left in the afternoon for Mr. Goodwin's place at Gerrish's island. The tug boats Ann and Clara Batemen were at the steamboat wharf, north end, on Sunday.

The steamer Minneola, with a large excursion party from Newburyport, made a trip to this port on Sunday, the 15th inst., and after a stop of a few hours steamed away toward home at an early hour.

The British barkentine Chinampas finished ballasting at Lyman's wharf, Saturday afternoon, and sailed that night.

It is stated that Mr. Scott of Pennsylvania having been drafted to serve as chairman of the democratic executive committee, has been excused on payment of a fine of $100,000. Mr. Jones was the next man who was thought would pay to be let off. Mr. Jones had better pay at once. If he accepted the position and undertook the discharge of the duties of the harrassing position it would land him on the other side of Jordan. Mr. Jones' present business requires all his time. If he should add to his work the arduous duties of director of the campaign fund, etc., he would soon find the strain would reduce him from his present state of health. We think Mr. Jones will not take the risk if he is allowed to follow his own convictions and heed the advice of his medicine men upon this question.

Mrs. Mary Eldredge, widow of Heman Eldredge, and mother of Hon. Marcellus Eldredge and H. Fisher Eldredge, died in Chatham, Mass., July 13th, from a dropsical affection with which she had for some months been suffering. It is pleasant to remember that the venerable and worthy lady lived to know of the dedication of Goodwin park, the gift of herself and her two sons to the city of Portsmouth for public use forever.

It was repored on Sunday that Mr. C. H. Hayes was seriously hurt the previous day by falling from a load of hay at his farm and having a hay fork penetrate his side. We heard no further particulars.

Notwithstanding the cool (and part of the time blustering) weather of the past ten days, the number of guests at the Oceanic exceeds the number there in previous seasons at this date.

The first hop of the season at the Wentworth, Newcastle, was given last Saturday evening.

Rev. Lee H. Fisher occupied the pulpit of the Unitarian church on Sunday, on exchange with Rev. Mr. Gooding.

The engine at the shoe factory broke down on Saturday morning, necessitating the temporary laying off of all the operatives, about two hundred in number, who use machinery driven by steam power.

The Warner house on Daniel street is receiving a coat of paint outside. Some slight repairs have been made to its outside recently.

The barge Seagull, drawn by four horses, and having on board a party of twenty persons bound from Dover for York beach, stopped in this city for about half an hour at ten o'clock Saturday night, and then went on its way.

A large party of ladies and gentlemen went from this city to Newcastle on Saturday evening, to take part in the first hop of the season at the Hotel Wentworth.

Mr. George Scott, one of the most portly business men of Market street, jumped overboard on Friday afternoon from one of the wharves at the north end, and rescued from drowning the five-years-old daughter of C. O. Keefe, who had gone down the third time before Mr. Scott arrived at the place. The child was insensible when taken from the water, and was only restored to consciousness after long endeavor.

Mr. Daniel A. Hill is putting a cupola on his house at Kittery Foreside.

The foundation of the new Public Library building at Kittery, opposite Dr. M. F. Wentworth's residence, is being put in by a gang of men under direction of Mr. Giddings of Exeter, the contractor. The walls of the building are to be of pressed brick, and the structure will be two stories high, with Mansard roof—three stories at the rear, the ground falling off so as to give opportunity for a well lighted basement story at the back.

The station building of the York Harbor & Beach railroad at Kittery Foreside ("navy yard station" is to be its name) is nearly completed; it is pretty much all roof, but is a very handsome structure for all that. The grading of the grounds contiguous to the station is a very great improvement to that neighborhood.

Mr. George O. Wilson of Kittery Foreside has put up over the entrance to his novelty store a big sign of white canvas, bearing the motto "Tippecanoe and Morton too," with a representation of a canoe to form part of the initial word.

Rev. James Lade, pastor of the Congregational church in Eliot, and wife, sailed from Boston on Saturday for England, where they will remain about six weeks.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Secure from Harm
There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.
With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.
It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.
Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.
Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary dealers on those who call for

GLYCEROLE!
A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.
Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.
It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.
Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, silty lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.
We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

THE VIRGIN HEART OF BEROE.

The wind blown dewy morn was fair
Upon a far Arcadian height;
The freshness of the fragrant air
Brought old visions, golden bright,
Of song filled eve and tranced night,
Of rhythmic dance on lawn, on lea,
And brimmed with floods of fond delight
The virgin heart of Beroe.

She quite forgot her daily care,
The flock with fleeces snowy white
That strayed along the hillside where
Sweet singing birds took spiral flight;
Below, her keenly, eager sight
Descried, with footsteps fleet and free,
One came who held his dearest right
The virgin heart of Beroe.

They met with smiles of rapture rare
And kisses such as lovers plight;
The hidden fauns who saw them there
Laughed softly at the comely wight,
Watching red lip with lip unite
In love's untiring ecstasy,
But stirred not, lest the sound affright
The virgin heart of Beroe.

ENVOI.

Oh, love, in pity hear my prayer!
As his of old in Arcady,
Be mine that prize beyond compare,
The virgin heart of Beroe.
—Clinton Scollard in Pittsburg Bulletin.

Marvelous Instance of Make Up.

One of the most marvelous instances of artistic make up ever seen upon the stage was that of the late Charlotte Cushman in "Meg Merrilies." To those in the audience she looked like an ordinary wrinkled old woman, but see her close to upon the stage and one could not but be surprised at the amount of labor and fine artistic powers displayed in bringing out the desired effect. In the work of making up her face, Miss Cushman would spend at least an hour. Close to, the touches of varying, and various coloring here and there would look broad and uneffective, while the remarkable lines running all about the face and neck were coarse and unmeaning. At the distance of a few feet, however, they all blended into one harmonious whole, and formed such a network of delicate wrinkles, out of which the deeply sunken eyes shown forth with a species of dying brilliancy, as to be a perfect picture of old age, and as startling to the beholder as it was highly effective in a dramatic point of view.—Boston Herald.

Live Diamonds of Manila.

Mr. Alexander R. Webb, United States consul at Manila, Philippine Islands, thinks the Manila fire fly far ahead of any lightning bug he ever saw in St. Louis. "The Manila lightning bug," he says, "is really a gem in his way. He gives a continuous, twinkling light that looks almost as large as a hazelnut and resembles an electric spark. There is a peculiar kind of tree here that grows in wet places, for which these bugs have a preference, and sometimes they almost cover them, so that the tree resembles a cone, dotted thickly with large electric sparks. The sight is a very beautiful one. I am told that sometimes ladies attend balls and receptions with numbers of these bugs on their heads, covered with a thin veil, and that they shine like diamonds in the dark corners of the room."—St. Louis Republican.

The Odd Little Leaf Ant.

One of the oddest little creatures in nature is the leaf ant of Nicaragua. It is from three-fourths of an inch to an inch in length, and shaped like a common ant. These little creatures, when at work, always carry a leaf, so that a squad of them looks like a little army with banners, and they file up one side of a path about a foot wide, and may be scores of feet long, while the ants that have thrown their load at the store house take the other side and have no banners at all. Everything moves along like clockwork. There are the commanding officers, the lieutenants and everything just like skilled soldiery. They are said to be remarkably skillful engineers.—Chicago Herald.

We Are Too Busy.

Amid the hurly-burly, I make bold to declare that the surest, quickest and most sensible way to cure a cold is to go to bed and stay there. All other methods are dubious, slow, and often even dangerous. But not one American in fifty will apply that best of remedies. We are too busy. We would rather risk losing our whole life than lose a single day. Therein we are fools.—Commercial Advertiser.

Eating Elephant's Flesh.

The lower class of the Burmese people are very fond of elephant's flesh, cutting it up in long strips and drying these in the sun in a somewhat similar fashion as the buccaneers of old preserved pieces of beef and fish. This dried meat is eaten without being cooked, and is much relished. It is sometimes pounded in a wooden mortar to be more easy of mastication for the aged.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

A French Flower Farm.

A French flower farm of about seventeen acres was planted with 45,000 tufts of violets and 140,000 roots of the white jasmine, with roses, pelargoniums, tuberoses and jonquils. A laboratory was erected for the manufacture of perfumes, and in the fourth year after planting lucrative results were obtained.—Boston Budget.

Lightning's Zigzag Course.

Professor W. Mattieu Williams offers as a better explanation than the old one of zigzag course of lightning, that, owing to variations of moisture, the conducting power of different portions of air is variable, and the electric discharge follows the course of least resistance.—Public Opinion.

The Ocean's Story.

The story of the deep sea is an expensive one. The cost of compiling and publishing the reports of the Challenger expedition is said to have already exceeded £200,000, the work being still unfinished.—Arkansaw Traveler.

A solution of common salt or sulphate of soda in water, making a strong brine, forms a good homemade fire extinguisher, and such solutions do not freeze easily.

The desire of more and more rises by a natural gradation to most, and after that to all.—L'Estrange.

The Life of Vegetables.

Vegetarians, indeed, will say that the universal adoption of their creed would do away with all the cruelty of the market and the kitchen. Would it? How do they know that it does not hurt a potato to be boiled, or an apple to be peeled? Animals and fishes and fowls are alive, they argue; but so are vegetables and fruits alive. That an orange makes no outcry when it is cut open is no proof that it does not feel pain. At any rate, in picking and eating it, we deliberately sacrifice its life, and that, too, without any necessity on our part in doing so. But the softest hearted of us never feel any compunctions of con-

Anglo-American Weddings.

It is very odd how ready the Englishmen are to exchange their titles for the dollars of American heiresses, and how slow the American gilded youths are to covet the hands of English noblewomen. The number of American women wedded on the other side can be reckoned only in four figures, while here in New York I do not know of a dozen native men of wealth who have foreign wives.—Brooklyn Eagle.

In Modern Jerusalem.

In modern Jerusalem, as in every other town under Turkish jurisdiction, Constantinople itself being a conspicuous example, are seen filthy, almost impassable streets, houses bespeaking poverty of the most squalid nature, faces giving unmistakable evidence of intense ignorance; all these impress the stranger as more certain signs of Mohammedan rule than the Star and Crescent.—Cor. Detroit Free Press.

A Household Remedy.—No family should be without some remedy for the cure of affections so universally prevalent as coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough and croup—some remedy, too, which can be relied on as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the article required.

A single scull race for a purse of $1000 between John Teemer, Albert Hamm and George Hosmer came off at Cayuga lake, Syracuse, N. Y., Thursday evening of last week, in the precence of 10,000 spectators, and was won by Teemer by three boat lengths.

I was troubled with catarrh for thirty years. Have suffered a great deal. My eyes, ears and throat were greatly affected. Mr. Kinney, the druggist, induced me to try Ely's Cream Balm and for the past two years have had very little trouble. I have lived in Webster, Mass., and Rockville, Conn. Very respectfully, J. W. Pratt, Monson, Mass.
I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity.—John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

It is claimed that Washington territory has gained 20,000 by imigration the past year.

Ladies Who Bloat.
What a great number there are; how uncomfortable it makes them; it is almost impossible for those afflicted to enjoy life. In my private practice I have always found Sulphur Bitters to be the best remedy. All who are thus troubled should use it.—Mrs. Dr. Childs, Boston.

A Scrofulous Taint.
"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

FAILURE OF CROPS is an unknown experience in Central and Northern Dakota and Minnesota. Maps and full particulars regarding lands, prices, etc., sent free. Address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on a small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—ought't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Athlophoros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.
"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued the use, and am now well."

THE SKY AND THE WOOD.

There is a rainbow in the sky,
Upon the arch where tempests trod,
'Twas written by the hand on high,
It is the autograph of God.

Where monarchs fell in thunder showers,
Spring drapes their forms in mourning moss,
And writes their epitaphs in flowers.

Drill of the Cadets.

In the closing exercises of the year, at West Point, there is war enough in the light and sea coast battery drill, but the event to the boys is said to be the cavalry drill and charge, the cadets vying with one another in the speed of their riding. In a recent drill one cadet leaped his horse over a seven foot hedge.—New York World.

Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a billious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

The Pall Mall Gazette publishes a letter from Berlin which says that the Dowager Empress Victoria is really a prisoner at Potsdam. It is said that she is kept in the palace there in order to induce her to surrender her late husband's papers.

Adamson's Botanic Balsam is regularly prescribed by many physicians of the best standing, and is recommended by professors of medical colleges to their students, as invaluable for all diseases of the throat and lungs.

"Can you help me a trifle, sir?" said the tramp; "I fought like a hero for the preservation of our noble Union." "Can't do it," was the reply; "I sympathized with the south all through the war." "Why, so did I," responded the tramp, heartily; "but what's a man going to do when he's drafted?"

It Is Not Best

To always believe everything that a person tells you, but when you hear that the best blood purifier is Sulphur Bitters, you can believe it, for they cured me of a severe case of blood poisoning.—Rev. A. Fairchild, New York City.

Asst. Engr. F. J. Schell is ordered from the naval academy to the Ranger.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headach, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

Paymaster R. B. Rodney is granted six months leave, with permission to leave the United States.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the success ful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. eeowjan30

Statistics Concerning Public Libraries.

Some library statistics show that the European country which possesses the largest number of public libraries is Austria. In Austria there are no fewer than 577 public libraries, containing 5,475,000—without reckoning maps and manuscripts—a total which comes out at 26 volumes per 100 of the population. France possesses 500 public libraries, containing 4,598,000 volumes and 135,000 manuscripts, or 12 volumes per 100 of the inhabitants, Italy ranking next with 493 libraries, 4,349,000 volumes and 850,000 manuscripts, or 16 volumes per 100. In Germany the public libraries number 398, containing 2,640,000 volumes and 58,000 manuscripts, or 11 volumes per 100 of the population. Great Britain possesses only 200 public libraries, according to these statistics, the volumes numbering 2,871,000 and the manuscripts 26,000. There are 145 libraries in Russia, with 952,000 volumes and 24,000 manuscripts, or a fraction over 1 volume to 100 persons.

It is noteworthy that in Bavaria alone the public libraries number 169, with 1,368,000 volumes and 24,000 manuscripts. Reviewing the principal libraries separately, it appears that the most considerable in Europe is the Bibliotheque Nationale, in Paris, with 2,078,000 volumes, while the British museum, with its millions of books, assumes the next place. Then comes the Munich Royal library, containing 800,000 volumes; the Berlin, Dresden and Vienna libraries taking rank as follows in the same order; 700,000, 500,000, and 420,000 volumes. The Oxford and Heidelberg universities each possess about 300,000 books. At the Vatican the manuscripts attain almost as large a total as the printed works. The latter number 30,000, while the manuscripts are returned at 25,000.—Home Journal.

English and American Kitchens.

A Philadelphia lady who has just returned from a long visit in London was recently discussing certain domestic points peculiar to England and comparing them with relative matters here. "We all know," she said, "as housekeepers, the worry we have if our kitchens are in the basement, though they have elevators and dumb waiters, stationary washtubs, hot and cold water, are carpeted and fitted with every conceivable convenience. In a London house the kitchens are always in the basement—no elevators, no washtubs, and by no means any 'frivolities' in the way of conveniences. But an English kitchen is a picture, nevertheless. The bright tins and coppers, the burnished dish covers ranged in sizes, the well stored cupboards, the many tables for every conceivable purpose, the range of the most perfect make and large size and the entire absence of the dirty part of the kitchen work, which is confined to the adjoining scullery, make a contrasting picture of aggravation to us, who, while we adore all these kitchen virtues, seldom arrive at them. Though our kitchens in Philadelphia be large and airy, our help, as a rule, are incapable of sustaining the dignity of an English cook, who is a person of dignity and respectability. We pay high wages, give great privileges and are not allowed to order our own dinners and, at any rate, are not expected to reorder the remains." —Philadelphia Press.

A Trick of Napoleon's Partisans.

Archbishop Whately, commenting upon the effects produced by rumors, mentions the great influence of one report which preceded Bonaparte's return from Elba.

When the return had been plotted, and just before it was executed, Napoleon's partisans went through France seeking land to purchase. When about to close the bargain for a field, they would ask to be shown the title.

If they found, as they generally did, that the field was land which had been confiscated at the Revolution, they broke off the negotiation at once. The title, they declared, was insecure; for the Bourbon government of Louis XVIII did not recognize the legality of the act of confiscation.

Their acts and words spread throughout France the rumor that the Bourbons meditated the resumption of all these lands—the chief part of France—to restore them to the former owners. The rumor, thus artfully started and spread abroad, caused thousands of peasant proprietors to welcome Napoleon's return, because thereby the downfall of the Bourbons would occur.—Youth's Companion.

Pity the Poor Woman.

A State street physician gives it as his opinion that four-fifths of the earnings of his profession are derived from women, though in this estimate he does not include the very large and prosperous class of specialists whose services are required by men only. It is a sad commentary upon the morals of the community the existence and prosperity of hundreds of such specialists for men, and the picture is less encouraging on the other side, where so many women with health impaired by foolish dressing, improper diet and violations of the laws of nature, maintain an army of medical practitioners. It is only among civilized peoples that women are less healthful than men. Let doctors and the common surmise tell why this is so. The fact remains that there may be seen on the streets of Chicago twenty strong, handsome men above the age of 30 to one woman. The woman who is able to retain her youthful comeliness beyond 30 is the exception. Good looking men of middle or even advanced age are as common as flagstones, while a handsome matron is almost a curiosity.—Chicago Herald.

Pastel Painting in England.

Pastel painting is once more finding patrons in England. The splendid portraits which Sanford Stevens lately exhibited in Brussels were enough to make fashionable people eager to revive the art. In Paris there is a society of pastel painters. One of the members, M. Lacaze, has discovered a process by which permanency is insured to the colors, and it has received the official approval of the society. Hitherto a fixing process has always diminished the beauty of the colors, and hence pastel painting, having to depend on the crayons alone, was restricted to countries where there are fewer atmospheric changes than in England.—Home Journal.

AT THE ONE NIGHT STANDS.

Actor W. J. Florence Gives Some of His Experiences at the Cheaper Theatres.

The one night stand is commonly made in a theatre owned and managed by some fairly successful bill poster or alderman or real estate speculator, who knows as much about a play house and the way it ought to be run as I know about the Sanskrit originals of Mr. Arnold's poems. A good many of these theatres are on upper floors above shops and offices. They are approached by flights of narrow and winding stairs, and I never go out of one without thanking my stars that there has been no fire or panic during the night. Queer things happen in these up stairs places once in a while. John McCullough was playing "Hamlet" in a theatre of this sort some years ago. Just beneath the stage was a furnace, attached to a bakery or something of that kind, I believe, and when the trap was opened for the grave digger to get in, a gush of hot air came up that was stifling. The curtain went up, and you can wager that the grave digger made lively time getting that pit ready for Ophelia. The sweat poured from the poor man in streams, and he piped his little song and whistled his little speech and got out of there with a jump. When the queen came to scatter flowers on Ophelia's coffin the hot air caught them up and wafted them into the flies, for they were made of tissue paper. The curtain cut off that scene with a roar from the audience.

In these cheaper theatres the manager does not attend to business, but lets the house "run itself," and whatever you need in the way of properties you must beg, borrow, or buy, for he cannot be looked to, or, at least, relied on, to furnish a sofa, a fire screen, or a pitcher of water. The only time that he is punctual is when the business man is counting up receipts. The "stage" in these theatres is usually small, the scenery bad, the picked up orchestra set your teeth on edge, the programmes are cheaply printed and full of errors; lighting, heating, ventilation and cleaning are subjects that the proprietor has not brought himself to consider, and you begin your night's work under most discouraging circumstances. You change your clothes in a perfect sty of a dressing room, with cold air whistling through partitions of unpainted boards; you wash in a battered tin basin; you "make up" with a light on only one side of your face, and there is no lock on your door. Then you go to your hotel—and there's another precious circumstance.

Hotel life in cities, as a rule, is not bad, especially if you have your pick of rooms and name your hours for meals, but you should see some of the hotels out west, and, worse still, down south. To all appearances they are comfortable and clean, and a glimpse of the dining room, with white cloths and porcelain and black waiters in place, is like a promise of merry sunshine; but wait until your dinner comes—hog, hominy, hog, water, hog, dry bread, then more hog. Everything swims in pork fat, and the cook throws in sand and cinders by way of seasoning. A troupe that struck a town in Georgia one day when the regular dinner was over could not get a blessed thing to eat but bacon—no eggs, vegetables, bread, butter, coffee, milk or tea—just fried bacon. The star of the troupe glared over the table and went away, followed by the rest, and bought some crackers in a grocery.

Then there are the hours. You get through your play at 11, go to your hotel, rise at 4 or 5 to catch a train for your next stand, get there at noon, have something to eat, skirmish around for properties, perhaps rehearse, eat your dinner, go to the theatre and act and often have to take your next train directly after the performance. But there—from these grumblings one might fancy an actor's life to be all shadow and no sunshine. I have not dwelt on the pleasures of the life because they are more apparent, and everybody knows them—the kindly appreciation of the public, the good words one has from press and people, the odd and interesting sights and adventures one meets in traveling, the information that even the dullest picks up when he knocks around the world for some years, the friends one makes and the intervals of ease and comfort that come when an actor has established his reputation and his play has become popular. An actor's life, like most men's lives, has more pleasure than pain it.—W. J. Florence in New York World.

Blacks of the West Indies.

On the road we met barefooted darkeys, plodding steadily along, who gladly returned our salutations, and turned to stare at us as long as we were in sight. They carried everything with which they were encumbered on their heads—cocoanuts, jugs, coffee pots, cups, bottles—all as securely balanced as if those articles were a part of the anatomy of their bearer.

The children, mere pickaninnies, toddled along with cans and calabashes of molasses, yams, bananas, oranges, or what not, as firmly fixed on their crania as if they had been wens. A Martinique boy will stow away as many personal effects on the top of his head as a Yankee boy will find room for in the pockets of his trowsers.

We saw one youngster with a large grass mat, several feet in diameter, which he wore as jauntily as a chip hat. From a distance he looked for all the world like an animated mushroom out for a stroll—an object, by the way, we should not have been at all surprised to fall in with during our travels in this land of sensitive plants, and ferns as tall as full grown cherry trees.—Down the Islands.

Not Ready for That.

A Mrs. Blank was spending the summer in the country, and was very anxious to catch a certain train. As that event seemed, from the leisurely gait of the horse, extremely uncertain, she urged the country driver to make the beast go faster. The coachman plied whip and reins with no apparent effect, while the lady alternately examined her watch and encouraged the driver. At last, however, her patience became completely exhausted, and, espying a place in the tough hide of the stolid brute where the harness had chafed, she cried out vehemently: "Hit him on the raw, Mr. Casseboom! Hit him on the raw!" "Ma'am," responded Mr. Casseboom, with unmoved gravity, "I'm a savin' the raw till we come to the hill."—Boston Courier.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

MATTERS IN YORK.

DOG CORNER, YORK, ME., July 16th.

Do I like sausage? No, gentle reader, don't be led away with that idea by my communication of last week. I merely suggested that, as a method of getting rid of the surplus—of dogs. The United States treasury suplus is a trouble—so are the dogs, minus the surplus.

The gigantic and soulless corporation, the Y. H. & B. R. R., have perpetrated and are continuing to perpetrate a gross wrong upon the people, and more especially upon the landlords of hotels and the guests thereof. The most people who start for "York Beach," understand it to be York Beach in reality, and therefore buy their ticket for York Beach station, which is located at Union Bluff. This soulless corporation get their sixty-five cents, and thereby pocket thousands of ten-cents which are not honorably theirs. P.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's August Excursions.

As a supplement to their seventeen July excursions, Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb announce six attractive tours for August, a month when the greatest number of vacation tourists are on the move. A party will leave Boston August 6th for a trip to New York, up the Hudson, and to Saratoga, Lake George, Lake Champlain, and Ausable Chasm. Three parties depart on the 14th—one for the Hudson river, Trenton falls, the Thousand islands, the St. Lawrence river, Montreal, Quebec, and Lake Memphremagog, and the two others for Manch Chunk, Watkins Glen, Niagara falls, and other points of interest; one section returning through Canada, and the other via Saratoga, Lake George, Lake Champlain, and Ausable Chasm. The Hudson, Niagara Falls, Saratoga, and the lakes are the features of a fifth tour, with the 15th as the date of departure; and an excursion to the Saguenay river is set down for August 21st. In addition to these tours, a party will leave Boston August 20th, for the second excursion to the Yellowstone National park, and another starts on the same date for a tour through Colorado. Descriptive circulars may be obtained of W. Raymond, 26 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston. When the same are to be sent by mail, applicants should designate whether the Yellowstone National Park circular, the Colorado tour, or the book of "six August trips" is desired.

THE MOON'S ECLIPSE.

A total eclipse of the moon will occur on Sunday night, July 22d, and the astronomers have figured out that the first contact will take place at 10h. 55m. P. M.; beginning of totality, 11h. 54m. P. M.; end of totality, 1h. 35.6m. A. M. on the 23d; last contact, 2h. 34.6. A. M. m. As the moon's path is low in the south, atmospheric conditions will not be wholly favorable to observation, even if the night is clear, but astronomers hope for opportunities for a search by means of photography for a lunar satellite; for investigation of the variations of actinic brightness occasioned by an eclipse; and for a study of the small stars near the moon and usually concealed by her light.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Naval Intelligence.

Asst. Surgeon Wm. Martin is ordered to duty at the naval rendezvous, San Francisco.

Asst. Surgeon Ernest W. Auxal is ordered from the naval rendezvous at San Francisco to the naval academy.

Capt. Albert Kautz is granted leave of absence for the rest of the year, with permission to remain abroad.

The U. S. S. Brooklyn was at Yokohama, Japan, June 8th, repairing boilers; expected to start for New York about the middle of July.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

There is talk of a million dollar hotel to be built in Omaha. It will be seven stories high, besides this story. The whole to be surmounted by a mortgage to be divided among the savings banks of the east.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

It costs $25,000 a year to keep in order Greystone, the Hudson river place of the late Mr. Tilden. The gentleman who yearns for the privilege of making this annual disbursement has not yet appeared as a purchaser of the estate.

LIKELY ENOUGH.

A Washington despatch of the 14th says:

It is understood here that Hon. Frank Jones of Portsmouth will be a member of the national democratic campaign committee, and will be one of the men to whom most deference in the way of deciding New England movements will be paid in New York this summer and fall. Mr. Jones has come to a great favorite with the president, to whom in disposition and nature he has been sometimes compared. Mr. Jones' familiarity with New Hampshire politics is regarded as something very clever here among the men who watch all sorts of politicians and bodies. His judgment is listened to attentively. Once let a man establish a reputation upon good political judgment, and he is ever welcome in Colonel Lamont's room. The colonel has become noted for his own judgments, and the best way, he has always held, to make them was to consult with several of his clearest-headed and cleverest friends. Mr. Jones is a man often called into consultation.

It is alleged that Secretary Whitney, who seems to have an almost inordinate desire to import British plans and British ideas to be used in the construction of the new American navy, has entered into negotiations through Commander Chadwick, United States naval attache at London, with an English draughtsman named Thom, and that an arrangement is likely to be made under which he will become the chief draughtsman in the bureau of steam engineering at Washington.

Farmington had a bad fire on theevening of July 13th, Stephen W. Nutter's house and livery stable being burned, with much of their contents, and two other stables injured; loss $6,000, with no insurance; cause of fire, upsetting a lantern.

A shoe factory and several other buildings in Avon, Mass., were burned July 14th; loss $60,000.

Your House on Fire.

Not the house of wood, or brick, or stone in which you live, but your bodily tenement may be in terrible danger from smouldering fire which you make no effort to quench. The great danger from impure blood is that it debilitates the system, and the digestive organs grow weak and inactive. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the best kidney and liver invigorators, with the best alteratives and tonics, all from the vegetable kingdom, carefully and understandingly prepared in a concentrated form. It purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, and tones up the system, giving the whole body vitality, and effectually guarding it against the attack of disease.

Claus Spreckles is reported to have squeezed the "sugar trust" by buying up all the raw sugar "in sight," thereby clearing about $2,000,000.

Heavy hail storms in Hungary have done much damage to crops, and killed many persons.

The city of Boston has by the courts been held liable for damage and detention to a schooner which got stuck in a narrow draw of one of the city bridges.

Spreckles, the great sugar operator, recently bought 50,000 tons of raw Manila sugar, on which it is said his profit by the advance in rates will be $40 a ton. He will be able to pass part of the summer at Bar Harbor if he wants to.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

THE NINE O'CLOCK BELL.

Mr. Editor! Will you tell an Old Boy who loves the sound of it, for its pleasant memories, what is the matter with the nine o'clock bell? I ask without fear of ridicule from the French settlement on the Merrimac; who else but foreigners would dare ridicule a native for his love for the customs of his forefathers? Seriously, something must be done about this old custom of ringing the Curfew. Some one has blundered in allowing it to be more honored in the breach than in the observance; often we now hear the remark, "Nine o'clock bell has not rung to-night," instead of as it used to be, "It's nine o'clock, the old North bell has rung." What beautiful memories to a boy of forty years ago, gather around the notes of the dear old bell. May its pleasant tones still and forever ring out each night at Curfew, to remind us all of youth, home and duty. OLD BOY.

MATRIMONIAL.

Miss Annie Toppan Spalding, of Newburyport, was married on the eleventh inst. to Mr. Nathaniel D. Chapin of Cleveland, Ohio. The bride is a niece of the late Hon. Christopher S. Toppan of this city. The bridegroom is a nephew of N. G. Chapin, Esq., ex-treasurer of the Eastern Railroad Co.

WILL CLOSE EARLY.

We, the undersigned, hereby agree to close our places of business on Tuesday and Thursday evenings of each week at 8:30 o'clock, during the months of July, August and September.

JOHN GRIFFIN, ALFRED STAVERS, C. E. SIMPSON, GEO. W. BUTLER, J. F. BERRY.

PERSONAL.

Prof. Charles A. Davis and wife, of Alma, Michigan, who have been passing a number of weeks in this city, have gone on a visit to Mrs. Davis' parents at Brunswick, Me.

Mr. Emil C. Pfeiffer is in this city on a visit to his father.

Mrs. William Powers of Maplewood, Mass., is visiting the family of Mr. John F. Johnson, Rye road.

Mr. Edwin R. Pearson of Broad street is at Mr. Nathaniel Simpson's, Greenland "bay side."

Mr. James Hawes is camping out at Ferrish's island.

The Biddeford Standard of the 14th inst. says: "Alonzo Wingate of Saco and Amesbury, Mass., last Monday, on a bicycle for Saco. He has not yet arrived and his friends are afraid he is held for toll at the toll bridge between Portsmouth and Kittery."

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth and Dover clubs played a game on the South street grounds Monday afternoon, the home club winning by the following score:

innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Earned runs, Portsmouth 2. Base on balls, Portsmouth 5. Base hits, Portsmouth 8, Dover 5. Two base hit, Ryan. Three base hit, McCaffrey. Home run, Daly. Stolen bases, Portsmouth 5, Dover 3. Hit by pitched ball, Leighton. Wild pitch, Scruton. Passed ball, Kittredge. Errors, Portsmouth 2, Dover 8. Time of game, one hour and forty minutes, Umpire, Mahoney.

Besides the game of ball, at the benefit of the home club at the South end grounds on Wednesday, there will be a fifty-yards dash; running the bases; and throwing the ball. The contests will be participated in by both clubs.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Georgia Berry, Ginn Master, from Perth Amboy with 368 tons coal to J. Albert Walker, arrived at this port on the 16th. She sprung a leak on the passage, and was beached at Vineyard Haven, where a diver effected temporary repairs.

Capt. Charles W. Drowne's yacht Wm. H. Russell will sail on the 22d, with a limited number of persons connected with the press, only. She will leave when the tide serves in the morning. It is wished that those intending to go will leave their names with the foremen of the different offices, so that suitable arrangements can be made.

Messrs. Henry Spinney and Thomas Moulton caught on the 15th inst., at the second Newcastle bridge, sixteen dozen smelts. The catch was somewhat unusual for the season, and the fish sold at twenty cents a pound.

The steam yacht Lucille, of Duxbury, Mass., and the yacht Frolic, of Boston, were in the lower harbor Sunday.

The fishing schooner Bonita ran on the rocks near Appledore shortly after midnight Sunday night, knocking off her shoe and staving a hole in her bow. It is supposed she would fill with the rise of the tide.

The schooner William H. Rowe, of New Bedford, Morgan master, bound from Bay View, Mass., to New York, with a cargo of paving stones, was abandoned in a sinking condition on the 12th inst. off Cape Cod, having been shattered in the sudden and heavy gale of Thursday morning, the 11th, off Pollock Rip lightship. The crew, consisting of five men all told, and three little boys, sons of the captain, whom he was taking to sea with him during their summer vacation, were gallantly rescued at great risk by the crew of the fishing schooner Mary C. Whorf, of Provincetown. The schooner F. H. Odiorne, of Dennis, Mass., Morgan master, from Bay View for New York with paving stones, was wrecked on the beach near Chatham, Mass., not many miles from where the William H. Rowe met with disaster, and in the same storm. The captains of the two vessels are brothers.

The schooner boat Jessie, Byers, brought in to Jos. H. Jameson on the 15th inst., 4500 lbs. of fish, mostly haddock.

All the available boats on the river were let on the 15th, and the livery stables were bare of teams at an early hour in the day.

Mr. "Natty" Yeaton of Durham, the old-fashioned boatman of the Piscataqua, came down on Monday, on his eleventh trip this season. With him came Mr. Richard Coe, who chartered from Lewis Holmes his boat Dart for twelve days excursioning on the river.

Mr. E. Percy Lawrence has rented the house on State street, near Chapal street, recently purchased by Mr. B. F. Mugridge.

It is reported that Mr. Henri Bates has purchased the upper part of the Waldron block, so called, on Congress street, formerly occupied by Dr. Goodall as a dental office.

Some excitement was caused on Pleasant street, opposite the Chronicle office, Monday afternoon, by the actions of a nice looking horse attached to a wagon in which were two ladies, who alighted with all speed as soon as the animal gave indications that something was wrong. Gentlemen near at hand unhitched the horse, which soon recovered from the fit.

The street commissioner is making some long needed improvements on Broad street.

At the meeting of the republican club on Monday evening it was voted to be the sense of the club that the various ward committees should at once proceed to arrange the details for a vigorous campaign for the ensuing city election.

Decidedly the handsomest sample of new potatoes we have seen this year, whether raised in this vicinity or in localities supposed to be much ahead of New Hampshire in regard to early crops, was sent in to us on Monday by Ex-Alderman Green of Water street. These tubers, which were brought up by Mr. Green the previous day from Mr. Joseph W. Berry's farm at Foss' beach, Rye, are fully as large as a good cook ever cares to see, very smooth, and mealy enough to satisfy the most exacting epicure. Mr. Berry has for some time been supplying the boarding houses in his vicinity with all the new potatoes they wanted.

A naval apprentice on the U. S. S. Portsmouth, lying at this navy yard, fell from the rigging Monday forenoon, and had an arm and one leg broken; internal injuries also are feared. He was taken to the yard hospital.

A new railroad bridge of iron is being built near Sawyer's lower mill, Dover, in place of the wooden one which has been there since the road was built. The abutments are being laid, and the whole will be completed in about a month.

The following are among the recent transfers of real estate in York county, as left for record in the office of the register of deeds: Kittery—George A. Williams of Kittery to Louise M. Libby of New York, land and buildings in Kittery for $1,400; Mary J. Williams to Katie L. Frisbee, land and buildings for $550; William H. Fernald of Kittery to Hartly W. Mason of York, real estate in Kittery for $1; Prescott M. Purington of Calais to William P. Kimball of Kittery, land and buildings in Kittery for $600; John Fernald (by exe'r) of Kittery to George S. Warson of Medford, Mass., real estate in Kittery for $1,100. Eliot—Nahum Plaisted of Ellenburgh, Washington territory, to Mary A. Swasy of Eliot, real estate in Eliot for $200; John Kelley of Portsmouth, N. H., to Samuel Cole of Eliot, land and buildings in Eliot for $100; Moses G. Farmer et ux. of Eliot, to Arthur W. Tufts et als., of Boston, trustees, land and buildings in Eliot for $1. York—Newbery H. Welch to Elizabeth A. Welch, real estate for $50. South Berwick—Lyman Tibbetts of Berwick to Napoleon Normandreau of South Berwick, real estate in South Berwick for $88; Joshua Blaisdell to Edwin H. Knight, wood growth on land for $300; William D. Carpenter to Justin Boston, real estate for $375; Samuel Knight to Edwin H. Knight, land and buildings for $1,000; Abner Oakes to Wilbert J. Boston, real estate for $350. Wells—Olive L. Tripp to William Maxwell, wood land for $1; Samuel Joy to Haven E. Lord, land and buildings for $450; John Goodwin of Wells to Sarah F. Parks of Dover, N. H., land and buildings in Wells for $2,200.

The Red Adam and Eve.

Intimately associated with Manitou's Landing, Gate and Wigwam, in the legend of creation, stands one more of these natural curiosities of Mackinac island. It is known as "Lover's Leap," and has been the subject of more romancing than any other of the island celebrities. The prettiest modern conception is that which represents an Indian girl watching here for the return of her lover from the war-path. His comrades appear without him, saying that he was slain. His faithful maiden sings her death song here upon this pinnacle, and leaps into the lake to overtake her lover in the land of spirits.

But the ancient legend of creation has the most natural and complete explanation ever given of the origin of Lover's Leap. The red Adam was driven from the island by an evil minded angel, who was enamored of the red Eve, and she, having denounced the angel as "devil," with whom she could not be compelled to remain longer than to express her hate of him, "fled like wind as it wantons down from far Waugoshanee," and leaped from the cliff. Her banished mate, who was paddling sorrowfully along the shore and saw her fall, urged his canoe forward and saved her life; and Manitou restored them to the island and banished the angel from heaven. He fell to the under world of bad spirits, and there became a great leader and the father of the white race of beings called men, who, filled with the hatred of their father toward the red Eve, have never ceased to work for the ruin of her descendants. This remarkable legend of creation has made "the Island" a holy land to me, and shows more plausibly than anything I have ever found, a relationship between the North American Indians and the ancient inhabitants of the eastern hemisphere; while Lover's Leap stands as prehistoric evidence that love is as old as the human heart.—Charles Ellis in American Magazine.

The brick schooners Clara B. Kennard, Hattie Lewis, Lillie, and Estella, and sloop Samoset, arrived from Boston on the 15th. Also two coal schooners with cargoes for Dover, and the Atalanta from Rockland with lime to John H. Broughton. Among the arrivals on the 16th were the G. W. Raitt, from Boston, two coal schooners for Dover, and the C. B. Church, with 1328 tons coal to J. Albert Walker.

HOOD'S

COMPOUND EXTRACT

SARSAPARILLA

TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Peculiar To Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence repeased in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which is addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

HUNT'S REMEDY

RELIEVES the Kidneys;
REVIVES the Liver;
SOLD UNIVERSALLY.

Among the various organs of our system, none perform a more essential part than the Liver and Kidneys, and so many people are afflicted with diseases of these organs, causing the Blood to become impure, that it is our first duty to assist them in their work. This is done in a thorough manner by Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, which is purely Vegetable, and is worthy of a fair trial.

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists.

LIGHT OF OTHER DAYS.

The Tallow Candles of Our Fathers. Candles Molded and "Dipped."

"There's a letter in the candle, Katy."

"Who it is coming to?"

She gives the candle a light shake and the letter drops next to Katy.

"There's a shroud in the candle tonight, Ellen."

"Oh, don't say so. Yes; it is there sure enough! Poor Jim!"

"There will be divine worship next Sabbath evening in the school house at Four Corners, Deo volente, at early candlelight."

The above literature belongs to an age that is past, but the old boys and girls of today can easily recall the dialogue and announcement as part of the household conversation of thirty or forty years ago, when the candle was not only the light of the family but its oracle as well. This was before the age of petroleum and in the infancy of gas, when "boughten" candles of tallow or sperm were used for company, and the tallow dip was the every day luminary.

Candle making was one of the industrial branches of housekeeping in those days. A cake of tallow, made from fat rendered in the house, and a ball of wicking, purchased at the general dry goods store, furnished capital for the investment. Then a set of molds, bought of a tin peddler—such as Jim Fisk used to sell from his wagon—and the work began. The youngsters of the family were usually chosen for this. They liked it. It was easier than churning, and they had considerable pride in pulling handsome candles, and there was just enough peril in the undertaking to make it interesting. If the tallow was not just right, or the molds not prepared well, or the candles not properly cooled, they "acted." Sometimes, indeed, they seemed possessed. This was when the six long wicks pulled out, leaving the tallow in the molds to be melted out and run over again. But if all went right, and six elegant candles were pulled, there was joy in the household. The nearer they came to the "boughten" article in appearance and worth, the prouder the domestic candle maker.

There was also a test in the burning. They must not "sputter" nor "gutter." A certain amount of beeswax would prevent this. They must not burn extravagantly or to one side, nor be greasy to the touch. And they must have preservative qualities and "keep" well. There was economy in those days in burning candles, which extended to the way in which they were snuffed. A family of any pretensions always had several sets of snuffers. A silver tray and snuffers was usually an heirloom. A brass set, kept in a high state of polish, was used in the parlor every night, the silver ones being kept sacred to company. Usually a rickety snuffer without any tray did duty in the kitchen. In many homes the fingers did all the snuffing. They became so hardened to it that no matter how hot a pinch they took, there was no bad effect.

We can afford now to smile at the economy of light in those days, when we had to light one candle to see if the other was burning. Two candles meant company, three a crowd, six an illumination. All the corners of the room were in shadows in those good old days, when spooks and goblins were within easy reach. After all there was the glow of the fireplace, with its fitful shadows. We have lost that with the lesser light. The odds and ends of candles were set up to burn on the altar of the kitchen, and on Saturday nights to light the hired hand or the bound boy to bed. Other nights they went to bed in the dark.

The tallow dip was an attenuated object that tormented the family like a poor relation. A lot of wicks were strung together on a rod, the tallow was melted and served in a tub of water. Into this the wicks were dipped every little while, then hung across the tub till they cooled sufficiently to receive another "dip." When finished they look like the skeletons of candles eaten by rats. They flared and guttered and made horrible shadows, but were accepted as light.

Lessons in candle deportment were given in those days. It may seem an easy thing to snuff a candle; so it is—to snuff it out. But to snuff it gracefully and easily, using only one hand, and not obscuring the light a moment, is a work of art. Blowing the candle out was also deprecated by the old timers. It was either snuffed out or extinguished by a metal night cap, which is usually fast to the handle of the bedroom candlestick.

The ease with which a candle went out when a door was opened or a draught struck it was almost phenomenal. And it was equally hard to relight it. Do you remember taking up a coal in the tongs and blowing until you resembled a heavenly cherub trying to coax the smoking wick back to a blaze? It was a common experience.—Detroit Free Press.

Abraham Lincoln's Last Laugh.

Mr. George Van Duzer, of this city, has presented to the Grand lodge library a portion of the collar worn by Abraham Lincoln at the time of his assassination. Mr. Van Duzer was present at Ford's theatre on that fatal night, and relates the following incident:

The army under Gen. Lee having surrendered to Gen. Grant a few days previously, Secretary Stanton, on the 13th of April, 1865, telegraphed to Governor John A. Dix to stop the draft, as it was considered that the war was virtually over.

At Ford's theatre, Washington, on the evening of April 14, 1865, the play of "Our American Cousin" was being enacted. In the scene just before the fatal shot of the assassin, a garden settee was standing on the stage opposite the president's box. Mary Meredith (one of the characters of the play), followed by Lord Dundreary (with her shawl thrown over his arm), came upon the stage, and the lady took a seat upon the settee. Glancing over first one shoulder and then the other, she exclaimed:

"My lord, will you please be so kind as to throw that shawl over my shoulders? There appears to be such a draft here."

Lord Dundreary immediately replied: "You are mistaken, Miss Mary, there is no draft. The draft is all over."

The president instantly saw the point and laughed very heartily, as did the entire audience, who arose and cheered. In a few moments more the assassin had done his work and a nation was in tears.—New York Asylum.

Italy's Picturesque Costumes.

Tourists all complain that there are no more striking costumes left in Italy, and that the people here even in the back rural districts strive to imitate Parisian or English fashions. I am told that the peasant dress as a picturesque costume has disappeared except in the south of Italy.—T. C. Crawford in New York World.

A Feast of Blood.

Along the upper Nile a wing of the Barri tribe bleed their cattle monthly and cook the blood with their flour and meal. They esteem this a luxury and the dish is eaten with great relish.

A Household Remedy.—No family should be without some remedy for the cure of affections so universally prevalent as coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough and croup—some remedy, too, which can be relied on as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the article required.

Pratt, Monson, Mass.

I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity.—John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

A despatch from Cape Town, South Africa, says that the Debeers mine, in Kimberly, where a fire occured Wednesday night of last week, has been explored by a party of searchers. Twenty-four whites and 200 natives were found to have burned to death. The cause of the fire is unknown.

He is very temperate in eating and drinking.

Emancipation is progressing rapidly in some parts of Brazil. In the province of San Paulo the slaves are being set free at the rate of five or six hundred a day, and the legislature has passed a bill forbidding the use of the prison for the custody of runaway slaves. Thousands of runaways have returned to work on being assured that they would be paid wages and not deprived of their liberty. Important liberations are taking place in other provinces, but much less numerous than those of San Poulo.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

On a Mental Drunk.

There is another kind of intemperance raging in our midst which injures and eventually kills many people, who die of respectable, though painful, diseases, on respectable beds. There are men and women who never use alcoholic stimulants, who are on a certain mental tension, a mental drunk, from year's end to year's end, and who are being worn out by such mental condition quite as rapidly as the person who drinks too much whisky. They go off prematurely. Their demise is sometimes attributed to a dispensation of providence. They have tempers they cannot control, or nerves which go into a twitter at the least cause for excitement, or brains always on the run trying to think and do a dozen things at once.—New York Star.

Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a billious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

At Chica, Ill, July 14th, Fred Nelson, a drummer, fired five shots into his body and then tried to hang himself. The docters say he will live.

Adamson's Botanic Balsam is regularly prescribed by many physicians of the best standing, and is recommended by professors of medical colleges to their students, as invaluable for all diseases of the throat and lungs.

It Is Not Best

To always believe everything that a person tells you, but when you hear that the best blood purifier is Sulphur Bitters, you can believe it, for they cured me of a severe case of blood poisoning.—Rev. A. Fairchild, New York City.

Three mechanics of Elibabeth, N. J., while on a fishing trip in Staten island sound, Saturday night, were run down by a vessel, and drowned.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

Three young men of a fishing party were drowned near Baltimore, July 15th, by the capsizing of a boat.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

Three young men and three young women were drowned in the river at Fort Smith, Ark., July 15th, by the swamping of a boat in which they were returning from a dance.

A Great Surprise

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. eeowlJan89

COQUETTES OF THE NATIONS.

Thomas Stevens Gives the Results of His Observations During His Trip.

The average English girl takes life too seriously to ever soar to the altitude of the American girl as a "natural born coquette." She couldn't carry coquetry to the length that the American girl does, and do it with the same impunity, even were she equally skilful, which she is not. The soil she flourishes in is hardly so suitable for the favorable development of the art; nevertheless, there is no doubt that she does the very best she can under the circumstances.

The same thing may be said of the French girl. If she had as much freedom, as the American girl, the French girl would be more apt to peep over her fan at a dude in a theatre than the former. Shut up and chaperoned as closely as the French girl is, the American girl would have to be equally demure and unseen—as much of a nonentity. The first taste of real freedom the French girl gets is after she is married. It is then that she makes her debut in the world of flirtation. All her pent up propensities for coquetry are then let loose, and she quickly shows the world "what might have been" had she enjoyed the same freedom as a girl that is accorded to her as a married woman.

The Germans don't flirt much. Fraulein has greater opportunities than mademoiselle has, but there isn't much chic and sparkle about fraulein. She flirts, of course, but she does it in a mild, matter of fact fashion. There is a vast difference between coquetry in Germany and America; as much as there is between lager beer and champagne. Fraulein is a methodical, businesslike mortal; her qualifications to fill the position of wife and mother are admirable, but as a coquette she falls far behind any of the others mentioned thus far. Honest as the day is long, and practical throughout, whatever inclination she may ever have possessed for flirtation is offered up as a willing sacrifice upon the altar of her marriage.

There is a good deal of coquetry among the Hungarians, and in the lower Danubian provinces of Slavonia and Crotia the maidens seem almost to the manner born.

One would scarcely think there was any such thing as coquetry among Turkish women, considering the arbitrary social conditions under which they live. As a matter of fact, however, there is a good deal of flirtation going on in a surreptitious manner. The Moslem lady, coquettisly inclined, has to be very careful; any Bluebeard detecting the least impropriety might cause her ruin, and even nowadays her death, if the other party was a Giaour. The Turkish lady runs very great risks, and flirts under most decided difficulties. The extent of her flirtation with a Frank would be the stealthy removal of her yashmak, to let him see her face, when meeting her at some unfrequented spot. If a very bold coquette this risky performance would be supplemented by a smile.

The same difficulties have to be overcome and the same dangers braved by the ladies of Persia. They, too, cover up their faces when in public, and they, too, would get into serious trouble if detected flirting with a Ferenghi. The Persian lady would actually be in danger of her life. And yet, when walking in the suburbs of Teheran, I have seen the veils quickly raised on some lonely street, and have time and again been the recipient of forbidden smiles. These venturesome coquettes were literally smiling at the risk of having their throats cut! It was all pure flirtation, too; no more significance in it than in the sheep's eyes the American lady at the theatre made at the two dudes—not a bit.

The only country where I positively escaped anything in the shape of flirtations was in Afghanistan. In that fanatical country the women are practically invisible. I used to sometimes catch glimpses of female heads, closely veiled, peeping cautiously at me around the chimneys of their flat roofed houses; but a single glance in that direction and the heads would dodge back out of sight as quickly as though dodging a bullet.

In India coquetry is confined chiefly to the Nautch girls. They understand the art to perfection, and when performing before a "sahib" sometimes afford him more pleasure by their coquetry, directed at himself, than by the dancing itself.

The Chinese, as a general thing, are horribly matter of fact and realistic. But there are coquettes even among the Heathen Chinee. I had quite a flirtation directed at me by a not unhandsome golden lily one day up in the province of Duang-tsi. She was all the more interesting because I had up till then seen little disposition among her countrywomen to flirt. She was at a roadside tea hittim, where I halted for refreshments. The golden lily, her tiny feet bandaged prettily with red and blue ribbon, came and sat beside me, and helped herself to tea and peanuts, sunflower seed cakes and sweetmeats, and smiled and chattered like a Celestial parrot. I stayed there about half an hour, during which time the golden lily had chattered and giggled incessantly, and when I finally moseyed off she waggled her hand goodby and "chin-chinned" till I was out of sight and hearing.—Thomas Stevens in New York Mail and Express.

Work Among the London Poor.

The number of London city missionaries is now 488, and every missionary visits once a month about 650 families, or 2,900 persons. Their work is to pioneer a path among the most wretched and debased of our fellow creatures, in which the pastor may in due time follow. Among the special duties of these missionaries are to attend the deathbed of those who are dying uncared for, to distribute tracts, to see that the children attend a school and to see that no family is without the Word of God. The society has now appointed special missionaires to visit soldiers, sailors, bakers, actors, coachmen, grooms, cabmen, omnibus men and canal boatmen, and to look after the spiritual needs of the Germans, French, Italians, Swedes, Spaniards, Jews and Orientals, and, indeed, all foreigners resident in London. Twenty-five missionaries have exclusively been commissioned to visit coffee shops and public houses. From the summary of the work of the society for the year it appears that more than 3,000,000 calls have been made, 4,500,000 tracts distributed and 1,075 drunkards reclaimed. —London Times.

The Aztecs of Cortez's Time.

The Aztecs of the time of Cortez were in many respects a superior people. They cultivated the ground. They had a king and a form of government, laws, courts, and tribunals, immense and costly public buildings. Their king and the chieftains lived in all the glittering splendor of eastern monarchs. Their wealth in gold when the Spaniards first entered the country was almost fabulous. Their dresses were made dazzling with wrought gold and beautifully colored feather work and plumage of birds. They were worshipers of the sun, and their practices of superstition were most cruel and horrible. Every city of note contained a Teocallis, or tower of sacrifice. The towers at Cholula and Tenochitlan each covered nearly an acre of ground, and were several stories in height. On these towers the sacred fire was ever kept burning. On an open battlement or unenclosed area on the top of each tower, in plain view of the whole city round about, stood the idols or gods, and also the sacrificial stone. Scores of priests and executioners at certain seasons of the year assembled on this open area, and the broad, winding outside stairways were crowded with thousands of human victims awaiting their turn.

These enormous sacrifices made it necessary for the Aztecs to remain at perpetual war with neighboring tribes, as the prisoners taken in battle supplied the victims, and when they fell short of what was needed for sacrifice, the number lacking had to be drawn from their own ranks. The manner of sacrifice was so horrible that war was hailed with a sense of relief and joy by every Aztec. Torture of victims was not practiced by them, except as a sacred duty. They did not have their war dances and gloat over sufferings at the stake as do the roving tribes of our own day.—New York Post.

Panthers in California.

Panthers are very abundant on the McCloud river, and very destructive to stock, especially to pigs; and from the experience we have had with them here, I should say that in this region at least they very seldom climb trees. They are perfectly well able to, but they can jump into a tree so much quicker and easier than they can climb into it, that they very seldom if ever resort to climbing. I think they would consider it slow work.

The hunters here assert very positively, and stick to it, that panthers can jump to the limb of a tree twenty or thirty feet from the ground, and as all the trees about here have limbs nearer the ground than that, it is obvious that our panthers would have very little occasion to resort to the slow process of climbing. But in other parts of the country, where the trees grow to a greater height without branches, there is hardly a doubt, I think, that panthers climb up the trunks of the trees when necessity for it occurs. But even then I fancy that they jump the first twenty feet or more up the trees. They must certainly be able to climb trees whenever they want to, for their claws and limbs are much stronger compared with the weight of their bodies than is the case with our common house cat, which climbs trees easily enough.—Forest and Stream.

How They Decided It.

There were once twelve Normans who traveled together, not one of whom had ever seen the sea. One day they came to a field spread with bleaching linen and concluded it must be the blue water. "Brothers," said they, "we must swim across." Removing their garments and making bundles of them, which they bore on their heads, they took hold of each other's hands and commenced wading through. First they counted their party. "You and I are one, he and the other two, and so on," said they, but no one could enumerate more than eleven this way. Thinking that one of their party had dropped out and would join them later they crossed the sea of linen and again proceeded to the enumeration. They were still unable to find more than eleven, though each one tried, "You and I are one," etc. Finally one of them said, "Brothers, I have it. We will take twelve clods of dirt, and each one stick his nose in his own clod. If there are twelve noses each clod will be used." This plan succeeded, and they found themselves twelve in numbe.—F. S. Bassett in Globe-Democrat.

The Argentine Republic's Progress.

The wonderful Argentine Republic is setting up to rival the United States, and bids fair to succeed. During 1887 it built 5,000 miles of railroad, as one item of progress. Its immigration bids fair this year to reach 200,000, or one-third as many as will land in our territory. They have 3,000 public schools, with 220,000 pupils. The larger cities are lighted with electricity, and well supplied with telephones and telegraphs. During last year 4,000 vessels entered the ports. There is also a "surplus of the revenue." This will never do, for the Argentiners will be appointing commissioners to look after our affairs in due time, as we proposed in Garfield's day to look after the welfare of South American states.—Globe-Democrat.

With Men as with Trees.

It is with men as with trees: if you lop off their finest branches, into which they were pouring their young life juice, the wounds will be healed over by some rough boss, some odd excrescence, and what might have been a grand tree expanding into liberal shade is but a whimsical misshapen trunk. Many an irritating fault, many an unlovely oddity, has come of a hard sorrow, which has crushed and maimed the nature just when it was expanding into plenteous beauty; and the trivial, erring life which we visit with our harsh blame, may be but as the unsteady motion of a man whose best limb is withered.—George Eliot.

What Paris People Drink.

During the past year the following dead animals were fished out of the Seine within the city walls: 2,021 dogs, 977 cats, 2,257 rats, 507 chickens and ducks, 3,006 kilos of butchers' refuse, 210 rabbits or hares, 10 sheep, 2 colts, 71 pigs, 42 geese and turkeys, 10 calves and goats, 3 monkeys, 1 snake, 2 squirrels, 3 porcupines, 1 parrot, 609 assorted birds, 8 foxes, 130 pigeons and partridges, 3 hedgehogs, 8 peacocks and 1 seal.—Medical Record.

FOR PRESIDENT,

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, a the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

A Sensible Council.

The grand council of the Independent Labor party of the United States met at Detroit, Mich., July 16th, to decide upon their policy for the coming campaign. After discussing the platforms of the republican and democratic parties, it was voted unanimously to indorse Harrison and Morton as the candidates of the party for president and vice president of the United States. Resolutions were adopted declaring that the labor party does not approve of President Cleveland's vetoes of pension bills; that the interests of workingmen can be best served by a protective tariff, and that every soldier ought to vote for Harrison, who served his country on the battlefield, instead of Cleveland, who sent a hired substitute.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's August Excursions.

As a supplement to their seventeen July excursions, Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb announce six attractive tours for August, a month when the greatest number of vacation tourists are on the move. A party will leave Boston August 6th for a trip to New York, up the Hudson, and to Saratoga, Lake George, Lake Champlain, and Ausable Chasm. Three parties depart on the 14th—one for the Hudson river, Trenton falls, the Thousand islands, the St. Lawrence river, Montreal, Quebec, and Lake Memphremagog, and the two others for Mauch Chunk, Watkins Glen, Niagara falls, and other points of interest; one section returning through Canada, and the other via Saratoga, Lake George, Lake Champlain, and Ausable Chasm. The Hudson, Niagara Falls, Saratoga, and the lakes are the features of a fifth tour, with the 15th as the date of departure; and an excursion to the Saguenay river is set down for August 21st. In addition to these tours, a party will leave Boston August 20th, for the second excursion to the Yellowstone National Park. Applications should be made early, and should designate whether the Yellowstone National Park circuit, or the Colorado tour, or the book of "six August trips" is desired.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, July 16th.

Sunday seemed more like a holiday than a day of rest. How long will this state of things exist? no rest for those people who like the quiet of Sabbaths.

A large number of our citizens passed the 4th in Portsmouth, and were much pleased with the richness and grandeur of the procession; also the Soldiers' Monument, of which we hope soon for a better view than on that day. The pleasures of the 4th, '88, will ever be a bright spot in our memory.

Every room at the De Lancey place and Union house are engaged. At Boar's Head there is more company than usual. Many city people enquire for board in private families, where they can be more quiet than at public houses.

The strong wind of Thursday did great damage to trees with early fruit, and on account of the gale many farmers did not get in their hay until evening that day.

The republicans could not raise their flag, on account of broken poles; unless the committee set new poles soon the ladies will look after them, and see that the work is speedily done.

Subscriptions for the celebration come in liberally, the event having been postponed until August 15th.

On July 2d, as Mrs. J. Gilman Brown attempted to unhitch a calf the animal made a spring, throwing her to the ground and stepping on her left side. It was at first thought that one of her arms was broken; this proved not to be the case, but it was severely bruised, discolored and very painful. She is now quite comfortable.

The Congregational church has recently been painted. All the churches in town are in good order, and we hope in the not-too-far-distant future to see a good hall. The men are slow; doubtless the work will not be finished until cold weather.

Who does not love long summer days?

Bright scenery where'er we gaze;
Oh, what a lovely land is ours.

Patrick Kelley, a sailor on the National line steamer Erin, is held in New York for murdering two shipmates, John Parry and John Chapman, on the voyage from London. Kelley was the only Irish sailor in the ship, and he had been so teased and tormented by the others, who were all Londoners, that he was driven to the verge of insanity.

The offices of the county clerk in the city hall at Detroit, Mich., were wrecked by a terrific explosion July 16th. Over a thousand persons were in the building at the time, and many were injured, but none fatally. It is not known whether the explosion was caused by a leak in the gas, or by thieves who hoped to rob the treasurer's safe during the confusion.

Chasles Krause, a Milwaukee bartender, killed himself last week because Pauline Scheib would not marry him.

Dr. Goddard, a harvard graduate, is to join the staff of an Egyptian exploring expedition the coming season.

At Mount Ayr, Iowa, July 13th, A. M. Bruce was murdered by highwaymen, and robbed of $2,000.

Halifax, N. S., is excited over the elopement of Rev. J. R. Hutchinson, aged twenty-eight years, a Baptist missionary who returned from India a year ago to complete his theological studies, and Miss Gertie Smith, aged twenty-one, a beauty and society belle. Mr. Hutchinson left a wife and family in Nova Scotia, and arrived in Boston with Miss Smith on the 16th inst.

Two boys and five girls, aged from twelve to fourteen years, and calling themselves "the Flatiron gang," have been arrested in Philadelphia for numerous house robberies. The captain of the gang was Emma Boyd, aged thirteen years.

In consequence of the bill passed by the Illinois legislature looking to the extirpation of alien landlordism in that state, Mr. Scully, who is the largest holder of that class, offers his holdings for sale. He owns 4000 acres in Sangamon county, 15,000 in Logan and 1000 in McLean and other counties, where he has for years carried on a system of rack-rents similar to those in Ireland.

George Matzinger, the Austrian anarchist who made the Chicago Haymarket bomb, died in the insane asylum at Jefferson, Ill., a few days ago. He became insane just before the Haymarket tragedy and fancied every man he saw was an executioner.

Mr. Wentworth and wife of Newtonville, Mass., are supposed to have been drowned in Sunapee lake, July 13th, as they are missing, and a boat in which they went out has been found empty.

Cora Beard, a young woman on whose account a dry goods clerk in Manchester fatally shot himself last January, has been arrested in Lowell, Mass., where she has recently been employed in a store, for stealing money, and in her house a number of stolen articles were found.

The house has decided to put wool on the free list, only three democrats, all northern men, voting against it. Wool is a northern product. Rice and sugar, which are raised solely in the south, will continue to be heavily protected. The south is in the saddle again, unquestionably.

[illegible] saw, no tarantulas, no wasps, no poisonous enemy of man but one, and that one was the chigger. I think I know more about the chigger than any other man in America. One day I felt a slight pain in the second toe of my right foot. I thought it was an ingrowing nail. The pain was at the right corner of the nail and I paid little attention to it. In a day or two the toe had swelled to double its size and I became alarmed. I took all sorts of medical advice, and finally I became convinced that I had accumulated a chigger.

The chigger is an insect about as big as the point of a pin, which works its way under the skin, usually near a toe nail. As soon as it finds a lodgment it lays a countless number of eggs, each of which turns out a new chigger, which bores farther in and lays more eggs, all in a a few hours. Each of these new chiggers repeats the family programme and lays thousands of eggs, so that if the sufferer is not very careful he can easily lose a toe, a foot, or even a leg. The multiplication of the chigger is something almost incredible, and when it once has found a secure location the pain is like nothing except a continual spasm of toothache. It was three months before I could get the chigger out of my foot, and four months before I could wear a shoe. Talk about wasps, or spiders, or snakes! I would readily back the chigger to do more real execution in a given time than any other enemy which man has yet been able to find in the whole line of animated nature.—Col. Pat Donan.

A Race of Dwarfs.

One of the most striking things to be met with in the earlier pages of Emin Pasha's journal is a reference to a report which is brought to him between Lado and Dufile, on the Upper Nile, that a race of dwarfs inhabit mountain caves to the west of Beden. They were said to be only forty inches high, of a brown color and of great agility, to eat white ants and roots, and to shoot with very small arrows, which are poisoned and very difficult to extract. The pigmies he was inclined to regard as the remainder of a dwarf population which ages ago spread itself over central Africa.

Four years later he himself comes upon some specimens of the Akka, a pigmy people, divided into numerous small tribes, who lead a nomadic life in the Monbuttu country. One of these Akka "had a reddish, but rather dark skin (probably dirt), was very prognathous, rather swag bellied, but exceedingly nimble. His height was 3 feet 6 inches. His whole body was covered by thick stiff hair, almost like felt, which was especially thick on the breast. A girl 14 years of age measured 3 feet 7-8 inch in height! These people are said to be very expert hunters, but also very vindictive, so that the neighboring tribes are glad to let them have all they want for maintenance in return for skins and feathers, the products of the chase, which they prosecute with bows and arrows alone.—Chambers' Journal.

Whatever we get in this world we not only have got to ask for, but to insist upon; giving away things is not a human weakness.—Uncle Esek.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Aldermen, adjourned meeting, Monday evening, July 16th, Mayor Hodgdon in the chair:

Drinking trough for horses at the Creek was ordered to be raised one foot.

A committee of stockholders of the Portsmouth Horse Railroad appeared before the board in regard to the location of tracks in certain streets, in accordance with their petition previously presented. The action of the board was favorable, and the committee announced that work would be commenced at once.

In reply to a communication asking information as to why certain improvements on Water street, some time ago ordered by the board, had not been commenced, Ald. Conlon stated that the street commissioner had been so busily engaged in other and imperatively-needed work that he had not been able to get at the Water street improvements, which however will shortly be begun.

Committee on streets were authorized to lay a crosswalk on Dennett and Myrtle streets immediately.

Committee on laying out and widening streets and repairing drains were instructed to report at the next meeting of the board on the abatement of the nuisance at Puddle Dock.

Adjourned.

"RAIN-IN-THE-FACE."

The Noted Sioux Chief Now with the 4-Paw Combination.

The presence of the redoubtable Sioux chief, "Rain-in-the-Face," in the "Wild West" and Forepaugh establishment, lends additional interest to a number of the thrilling incidents illustrated by the contingent of scouts, cowboys, cavalrymen and Indians. Especially significant is his appearance in the mimic representation of Custer's memorable conflict with the Sioux Indians, on the Little Big Horn river, Montana, June 26, '76. In that terrible fray "Rain-in-the-Face" shared with "Sitting Bull" and "Chief Gaul" the command of the Sioux warriors, and it is admitted by all the Indians who participated in the bloody battle that he did the most desperate fighting of any Indian engaged therein. "Rain-in-the-Face" has long since renounced the arts of war, and for ten years has led a quiet, exemplary life. He lives near Standing Rock agency, Dakota, and is there looked upon as a genus wizard by his red brethren. It was only after long parleys and vexatious delays that Mr. Forepaugh's agents were enabled to secure his engagement for the present tour, the other members of his tribe being loath to have him leave. Up to March 1st of this year, "Rain-in-the Face" had never been east of Fargo, Dakota. It will be in order for him to write his impressions of the "Pale Faces of the East," on his return home next winter.

AT IT AGAIN.

The Haverhill, Mass., Bulletin of the 16th inst. said:

Reuben A. Rand, formerly of Portsmouth, who has lived in this city some time, was arrested and brought to the police station last night, he having threatened and abused his wife and her mother, and they deeming themselves unsafe from his crazy actions. It took four officers to bring him to the station, and no sooner was he placed in a cell than he tore a strip from his blanket and attempted to hang himself, being cut down only when black in the face.

It will be remembered that he attempted to hang himself—or rather, attempted suicide, for he did hang himself—in the police station in this city some months ago, but was cut down by Officer Hobbs, captain of the night watch, before life was extinct. He has been adjudged insane on the testimony of Doctors Coggswell and Clarke of Haverhill, and been conveyed to the Danvers asylum.

BASE BALL.

The Boston Herald of the 17th said: "The Portsmouth club has made an application for admission to the New England league, and a special meeting of the league has been called for this (Tuesday) evening at the Parker house in this city, to consider the application."

The directors of the Portsmouth association held a meeting at the Rockingham house on Monday evening, the 16th, and decided to join the New England league. Manager Leonard and Secretary Pickering were empowered to represent the association at the meeting of the New England directors in Boston on the 17th. The club will give a guarantee to play the season out.

The Portsmouth club went to Dover on Tuesday, the 17th, and defeated the Dovers by a score of eleven to five.

On the south end grounds, this afternoon at four o'clock, the Lowells of the New England league will play a game with the Portsmouths for the benefit of the home club, and the field and grand stand should be thronged with spectators. Besides the game of ball, there will be a base-running match and a match of ball-throwing, in which members of both clubs will take part. See advertisement for prices. The Portsmouth band will furnish music.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Daniel P. Clark and wife, both formerly of Portsmouth, now of Charlestown, Mass., are passing a season in this city.

Miss Nellie Merrick of Great Falls is visiting Miss Edith Wendell of Pleasant street, this city.

The daughters of Mr. Alva Manson of Warsaw, N. Y., are visiting their grandfather, Mr. Oliver Manson, on Union street, for the season.

Mrs. Dinsmore, wife of Dr. Dinsmore of Keene, is visiting in this city, her former home.

Mrs. Alden, wife of Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Alden, and Mrs. E. B. West and daughter, are passing a week at the Ocean house, Newport, R. I.

Ex-Gov. Cheney, who is at his cottage at Straw's point, Rye, for the season, was in town on Tuesday. Mrs. Fish, daughter of the governor, is also at Straw's point.

Hon. John M. Mitchell of Concord was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. C. B. Loeser, clerk of the Kearsarge house, has arrived home from a long trip to the west, with health much improved.

Mrs. Wm. B. Trask of Erie, Pa., who has been visiting Mr. William P. Walker and wife of this city, has gone to Appledore, accompanied by Miss Nellie P. Walker.

Mr. Francis Raynes, of Raynes' Neck, York, was in this city on Tuesday.

City Missionary D. W. Waldron and daughter, of Boston, who have been very ill with typhoid fever, were reported on Tuesday to be slightly better.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson, niece of President Buchanan, and the admired mistress of the White House during her uncle's incumbency, has engaged rooms for the season after Aug. 1st at Rye beach.

Mrs. Wm. C. Randall left this city on Tuesday for an extended visit to her former home in the British provinces.

The lighthouse steamer Iris, with Comdr. O. A. Batcheller, U. S. N., inspector of the first lighthouse district, on board, arrived at the navy yard on Tuesday, took on board the old Gangway rock buoy—no longer needed, there being now twenty-two feet of water over the rock—and sailed for Portland the same day.

The receiving ship Constitution, which has been ornamenting the wharf at this navy yard for some years, is to be docked and examined, and after receiving whatever repairs are needed, will be towed to Annapolis, Md.

The boy who fell from the rigging of the training ship Portsmouth at the navy yard on Monday, was on Tuesday reported to be doing well, his injuries proving much less serious than at first reported.

The schooner Abbie C. Stubbs, Pendleton master, arrived at this port on the 17th from Baltimore with 614 tons coal to J. Albert Walker.

Mr. M. J. Ryan of Water street has a South American parrot of very handsome plumage, which was brought from Washington when quite a young bird, about a year ago. It whistles like a landsman and talks like a sailor, but is very sparing in the use of expletives.

Sergeant Wenzell, U. S. A., was in this city on Tuesday from Fort McClary making up his supplies. The sergeant keeps the government property at the fort in as good order as it is possible for a garrison of one man to do.

The farmers in the suburban towns are now very busy haymaking, the weather being very propitious for their operations. But the dry weather is not very promising for the crops in general.

It is reported that two hundred men will be at once required to work upon the horse railroad.

A large party from Fitchburg, Mass., came to Hampton beach on Tuesday for a fortnight's stay.

A democratic ex-alderman of this city, who recently served on the board, announces that he intends to vote for Harrison; but that if the Cleveland democracy wish to purchase his vote, perhaps they may obtain it at $1200.

The Spiritualist society of this city, who have suspended their meetings during the summer months, will reopen their hall in the autumn or early winter.

Paymaster George A. Lyon, U. S. A., occupied the house of Chief Engr. Macomb on Middle street on Monday.

The pigeons which have been accustomed to congregate on the projections of the front of Congress block under the eaves, are to be evicted, workmen having on Tuesday commenced to fence the birds out with wire netting. Their absence will give pleasure to the tenants of the block, and passers-by.

The roadbed of the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad has been put in excellent condition. The friends of the Concord road have been doing some good work on the line of the B., C. & M. R. R., in convincing those who favored the lease to the Lowell road that it will be for their interest to oppose the lease if held by the Boston & Maine. A gentleman from the northern part of the state reports that there is quite a change of sentiment in this respect within the past year.

An excursion party from Concord, filling eight cars of a special train, went to York beach over the Y. H. & B. R. R. on Tuesday, and arrived back in this city on their return at about quarter before seven o'clock in the evening. They had a band with them.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

CONSUMPTIVE

Have you Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Indigestion? Use PARKER'S GINGER TONIC without delay. It has cured many of the worst cases and is the best remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs, and diseases arising from impure blood and exhaustion. The feeble and sick, struggling against disease, and slowly drifting to the grave, will in many cases recover their health by the timely use of Parker's Ginger Tonic, but delay is dangerous. Take it in time. It is invaluable for all pains and disorders of stomach and bowels. 50c. at druggists.

The New Excelsior.

The shades of night were falling fast
As through this city swiftly passed
A man who cried in ringing tones—
"If ye would ease your pains and moans Take Pulque!"
"Was a wreck," the man proclaimed;
"Asthmal wight—my system malmed
By patent nostrums, dearly bought,
Because they did avail me naught—
O Pulque!"

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Nevernal travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing, called Oil Grease, has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; so the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do maintain that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

THE GERMAN RAILROADS.

Owned or Controlled by the Government. Military Spirit of the Management.

The railways of Germany are, for the most part, owned by the state. Such as are not owned out and out are controlled by the government in such a manner as to practically attain the main object of ownership. The government looks upon the railways primarily as a means of bringing money into the treasury; lastly, as a convenience to the people. As you travel in Germany you notice that all the officials about railway stations not only dress like soldiers, but have much of the gruffness and precision characteristic of that class; and the very porters, who carry your luggage, remind you of the barrack room, and you are not surprised to find the station master strutting about with much of the swagger and consequence of the parade ground.

Follow the railway management higher up and you find that the military spirit pervades every department. When a railway is projected the first question relates to its value in the time of war, the second to its usefulness to the people. The war office must first approve before the civil branch of government can take a step. Thus you will see on the map of Germany many railways leading nowhere, so far as commerce is concerned, and somewhere, only in the event of a war. Lines are radiated from important centers to every point of the frontier, without reference to whether the traffic is sufficient to make such a road a paying investment. So also you find a railway running parallel with a frontier line, purely as a military precaution. A circular railway has just been completed around Berlin, so far from the center as to run most of the way through a desert of sand. There is scarcely any travel on the road, but the government maintains it so as to have it handy in case of a siege.

The political power which the government exercises through owning the railways is very great. In the first place it comes in contact with manufacturers of almost every variety of machinery goods, for it has nearly 30,000 miles in operation; it has thousands of locomotives, freight cars and passenger cars to build; it has stations and bridges to construct; clothing, lamps and instruments of various kind to furnish. The government railway officials favor manufactures favorable to the government, and correspondingly injure the trade of those in opposition. Then at thousands of railway stations are restaurants, the food for which is supplied from the neighborhood—and here is another chance for the government to influence votes in its favor. Then then is an immense amount of money spent yearly in advertising the new time tables in the local newspapers along the lines of road. This money, of course, can only go to such papers as the railway officials deem suitable—and do you suppose that a German official will look with favor upon a newspaper that ventures to criticise any government measures?

Then the railway officials can withhold the building of a railway in this neighborhood if they prefer some other; they can make rates of freight different from one point to another without reference to the mileage; they can depress the trade of one place and make trade brisk in another if they choose; and sometimes they may be tempted to do so to show people how much safer it is to vote for government representatives in parliament than for Liberals. Of course the government does not intend to do this, but it is done by government officials and the government does not care to look too closely into the matter.

Finally comes the great army of railway employes, laborers, porters, signal men, conductors, engineers, mechanics, masons, carpenters, officials of all kinds, particularly the large number who are expecting situations.—London Cor. New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Indian Not Revengeful.

People make false estimates of the Indian's character. The Indian is not revengeful, but in war he will take all the advantages he can over his enemy. So will a white man. There is no such thing as treachery in the Indian's character. He will, as I say, take advantage of the white man, but so will the white man take advantage of any man.

I have 125 Indians in my camp; how do I civilize them? I have them under control, and they are disciplined as strictly as any body of soldiers. There is no trouble in managing Indians, if you know how to do it. I never have any trouble with them because I obey the first principle of business; I treat them squarely. I never make a promise to them that I do not keep, and I am treated well in return. I would rather loan money to an Indian than to a white man—I think the chances of the Indian returning it are much better.—W. F. Cody in The Epoch.

Firecrackers from China.

Firecrackers come from China, where the country people manufacture them as a pastime, as the Germans do toys. They are imported in boxes similar to tea chests, the hieroglyphics on them representing advertisements of different firms, and they are used as ballast for the ships that bring them over. An idea may be obtained of the utter impossibility of competition when one is informed that it costs but two cents to make a pack of firecrackers there. The Chinese were acquainted, as we all know, with the use of gunpowder long before its introduction into Europe in the Thirteenth century, and the peasants have been for so many generations adept in the art of making firecrackers that it has become, we might say, second nature.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Eat Freely of Lemons.

An experienced and highly respected physician gave me a valuable hint the other day which others may find as useful as I did. "I am convinced," said he, "not only from practical personal experience, but on theoretically scientific grounds also, that a safeguard against much prevalent summer illness lies in the free use of lemon juice. Citric acid helps to supply the place of the fluids which are unduly dissipated through the pores of the skin in hot weather. Eat plenty of lemons and you can stand the heat infinitely better than those who do not make use of the fruit with which nature has supplied tropical countries."—The Epoch.

A Literary Curiosity.

A bookseller at Lyons named Roux is issuing a literary curiosity. It is a volume entirely of silk, to be published in twenty-five parts, of which fifteen have already appeared, at the price of $3 per number. The text is woven in the silk. As each number consists of only two leaves, the whole volume, containing the Roman Catholic mass and a number of prayers, will have only fifty leaves, round the Gothic text of which every leaf has a specially designed mediæval border. Both text and border are woven in black silk on a white surface, and the effect is said to be "very artistic."—Chicago Herald.

Wholesale Trade in Fireworks.

The center of the wholesale trade in fireworks in New York city is about Park place. Here the progress of the art may be noted; how it has risen from the humble Chinese firecracker, still and always the staple of the trade, up through various grades of giant crackers, torpedoes, Roman candles, pin wheels, flying serpents, rockets, fountains, geysers, mines, star showers, saucissons, fire flowers and floating animals and monstrosities, up to the triumph of pyrotechnic ingenuity and extravagance—those great set pieces, representing cataracts, portraits, mottoes, allegorical personages, etc., from 100 to 300 feet long, and from ten to fifty feet high, and costing each from $100 to $1,000, warranted to illuminate the darkest night for miles around, dazzle the eyes of any number of beholders and consume more money in five minutes than any other contrivance known to man.—New York Tribune.

A Household Remedy.—No family should be without some remedy for the cure of affections so universally prevalent as coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough and croup—some remedy, too, which can be relied on as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the article required.

Gov. Ames of Massachusetts is rapidly recovering his health.

I was troubled with catarrh for thirty years. Have suffered a great deal. My eyes, ears and throat were greatly affected. Mr. Kinney, the druggist, induced me to try Ely's Cream Balm and for the past two years have had very little trouble. I have lived in Webster, Mass., and Rockville, Conn. Very respectfully, J. W. Pratt, Monson, Mass.

I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity. — John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

Hon. Samcul J. Randall was in the 16th reported to be improving.

Ladies Who Bloat.

What a great number there are; how uncomfortable it makes them; it is almost impossible for those afflicted to enjoy life. In my private practice I have always found Sulphur Bitters to be the best remedy. All who are thus troubled should use it.—Mrs. Dr. Childs, Boston.

The republican nation committee have elected Matthew S. Quay as chairman, and J. Sloat Fassett as secretary.

Whether from swampy land or stagnant pool, or from the deadly gases of city sewers, malarial poisons are the same. Ayer's Ague Cure, taken according to directions, is a warranted specific for malarial disorders.

The doctors' report of Gen Sheridan's condition show that he is a very sick man, and are not at all reassuring.

Get rid of that tired feelling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health.

Charles Doane, who while drunk knoked under the wheels of a train a flagman who attempted to stop him at Wickford, R. I., July 6th, has been arrested for manslaughter.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

A battery of eight gas tanks in Ludlow, Ky., exploded July 14th injuring fifteen men, four of them fatally.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous bo your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

A Sensible Man

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung troubles than any other medicine. The proprietor has authorized any druggist to give you a sample bottle free to convince you of the merit of this great remedy. Large bottles 50c and $1.

Competition of Railway Dust.

The railway companies are gradually getting rid of the thing known as "the deadly car stove." Now let them relieve passengers of railway dust. They have no contrivance which actually does that now. Do you know what the railway dust which torments you so is composed of? Under a good glass it is shown to be composed of a large proportion of fragments of iron of a magnetic character, looking like old nails; of fused particles of burned iron, like clinkers covered with spikes and daggers with long tails; pieces of glass and coal and angular bits of metal.—Pioneer Press.

Pickles, Sour and Sweet.

An observant gentleman tells The Groceryman of this city, that the northern girls eat sour pickles as though they loved them, while a southern belle required them made into sweet pickles, and will not eat the tiny, sharp little pickles our northerners so like. "Sweets to the sweet," however, is the motto of both; for The Record will wager a sour ball to a kiss verse that the girls in Dixie love caramels as well as do the girls that bloom with the roses on the northern side of Mason and Dixon's line.—Philadelphia Record.

Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a bilious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

The Stain-Cromwell case in Maine will probably go over for another term.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

As old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the secret of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. A MILLION DOLLAR MANTLE.

The Red and Yellow Royal Cloak of the Kamehameha Dynasty.

"I don't care; I wouldn't wear it."

"But see what it cost. You don't mean to say you wouldn't wear a cloak that cost a million dollars!" said the stout man in a satirical tone that indicated that the woman he addressed was his wife.

The pair had stopped before the royal feather cloak from the Sandwich Islands that is spread out fan shaped in a case in the National museum. This cloak is computed to have cost in labor $1,000,000. The native name for it is mams. In the days when a Hawaiian beau or belle wanted little clothing, but wanted that gorgeously colored, this cloak or mantle would have been considered of more value, æsthetically and intrinsically, than a ship load of Worth costumes, and its happy possessor might truly be said to be in high feather. Since the natives have adopted wide trousers, lawn tennis shirts and four-in-hand ties, its value lies chiefly in the traditions that surround it. The mantle, which is semi-circular, is four feet long or deep, and it is 11 1-2 feet wide at the bottom and 28 inches at the top where it goes around the neck. The entire outer surface is made of feathers of fine texture, giving the whole the appearance of plush. The prevailing colors are red and yellow or orange. The body is decorated with large figures, crescent shaped, of either red or yellow feathers. The upper and lateral borders are corded and decorated with alternate tufts of red, black and yellow feathers.

A legend on a label states that this feather cloak formerly belonged to Kehuarkalani, one of the highest chiefs of the Sandwich Islands. After the abolition of idolatry in 1819 that chief rebelled against the reigning king and attempted to re-establish the ancient religions. A sanguinary battle was fought, and Kehuarkalani was slain, and this cloak, which he then had on, fell into the hands of the conquerors and thus became the property of King Kamehameha, by whom it was presented to Capt. J. H. Aulick, U. S. N., in 1841. The cloak is now the property of Capt. Aulick's grandson, Richmond Ogston Aulick, who deposited it in the National museum. The great value of the cloak is due to the long time required to secure the feathers that compose it and to manufacture the cloak.

The foundation is a net work of olona, or native hemp, and to it are attached by fine thread of the same material the feathers of birds found only in the Hawaiian Islands, and very rare there. Recent writers have declared that the bird is now extinct. The feathers are woven in so as to lap each other and lie flat, forming a smooth, plush like surface. The inner surface is without lining and shows the olona net work and the quill ends of the feathers. The cord of the upper margin is prolonged so as to serve as a fastening at the throat. The yellow feathers are obtained from the Oo or Uho, and, as stated, are of great value, as the bird is rare, very shy and difficult to capture, and it has but a very small tuft of these feathers upon each shoulder. The black feathers are from the head and back of the same bird—its general plumage being a glossy black. The Oo is caught alive by means of bird lime; the yellow feathers are then plucked and the bird released. The red feathers are from the body and neck of the Drepanis Coccinea, the most abundant bird of the Sandwich Islands.

The Hawaiian Spectator, a newspaper published in 1839, refers to this, or a similar mantle, as follows: "Kawkeauli has the mams, or feather war cloak of his father, Te-Meha-Meha. It was not completed until his reign, having occupied eight preceding ones in its fabrication. A piece of nankeen, valued at $1.50, was formerly the price of five of the yellow feathers. By this estimate the value of the cloak would equal that of the purest diamonds in several of the European regalia, and, including the price of the feathers, not less than a million dollars' worth of labor was expended upon it at the present rate of computing wages."

A bunch of the yellow feathers called hulu was received by the king from his subjects in payment of a poll tax, and it required many years to collect the material and manufacture one of these mantles. Until recent years these mantles were the royal robes of state and considered the principal treasures of the crown; but European clothing has entirely superseded them and they are not now manufactured. A beautiful headdress for women, called leis, was made of these feathers.

Another authority states that two yellow feathers only are obtained from each Oo, and these are found under the wings. When the much prized feathers are plucked the bird is set at liberty. The price of the feathers, according to this authority, was $1.50 for three, and the time occupied in making the cloak was estimated from fifty to one hundred years.—Washington Star.

English Worship of Royalty.

It is only natural that there should be great competition among the London hotel keepers for the royalists who visit the metropolis during the season. No one knows better than the landlord of one of these fashionable hotels what fearful snobs the well-to-do English man and woman of the middle class are. They would black the boots of a king every morning, and pay handsomely for the privilege. The king of Sweden is stopping at the Grand hotel, and, whether he is in or out, there is always a crowd of snobs hanging about the door. They gloat over the coroneted carriages which drive up to the door and worship the very calves of the footman who opens the doors and carry the bouquets. It is a sickening sight.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Difference Between Orators.

The orator secures but a poor success who makes people exclaim, "What a fine speech!" but he is entirely successful who persuades them to his thinking. That is what Fenelon meant in his "Dialogues of the Dead" when he represents Demosthenes as saying to Cicero, "Thou madest people say, 'How well he speaks!' but I made them say, 'Let us march against Philip!'" That an orator will create no impression who does

IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Recruits Earn as Much Money as Men at Any Manual Labor.

"It is a mistake to think that men who enlist in the United States army are not paid as well as citizens in the ordinary walks of life," said a veteran who has served under Uncle Sam for nearly a score of years. "I think they are better paid. If I didn't I wouldn't be in the army today."

When asked to give a few details the old warrior replied:

"Take the place of a private. When he enlists it is for five years. The first two years he gets $18 a month. The third year he gets $14, the fourth year $15, and when his term expires he is receiving $16. Now, if he re-enlists within thirty days his wages will be increased $2 a month, making a private's pay, after he has been in the army five years, $18 a month, or $216 a year. That amount, however, is clear profit. Everything in the line of clothes and rations that is necessary the government furnishes.

"Now," asked the old soldier, "where is the man who works for $2 a day who is better off than a private in Uncle Sam's police force?"

The question seemed difficult and the reporter gave it up.

"That's not all, though," resumed the military man, who evidently was proud of his vocation. "If a man after enlistment and assignment to a post is found out to be skillful at any trade, so much the better; he can make it pay. If he is a shoemaker he can find plenty of employment and compensation. If he is a barber he can always find subjects for his razor. If he is a tailor he can reap a harvest. Tailors are usually in demand, and consequently in luck. In the last post in the west at which I was stationed the regimental tailor—an enlisted private—had practically nothing else to do but work at his trade, except, perhaps, occasionally do guard duty. What do you think he saved during his five years' service?"

The newspaper man couldn't guess.

"Between $4,500 and $5,000," was the reply. "Of course this man was careful in his habits; he didn't drink and he didn't play poker. But his case may be cited to show what a man can accumulate while serving his country in the modest capacity of an army private."

"What are the highest wages paid by the government to an enlisted soldier?" was asked.

"The hospital steward is the highest paid man in the regiment. He gets $45 a month—$540 a year and all his expenses paid. A corporal gets $2 more than a private, or $15 a month for the first two years and $1 more each subsequent year, with $20 for his second enlistment. A sergeant gets $2 more than a corporal, and in five years receives $1,020."

"Have you found that most of the men in the army are foreigners?" inquired the reporter.

"That is often stated," was the answer, "but it is not the truth. My experience, which has been quite extensive, has shown me that native Americans form the majority of our men. There are, of course, many Irishmen and Germans who enlist, but they are in the minority."

"Who make the best soldiers?"

"Well, probably the Germans make the best soldiers on post duty. They are usually well up in the manual. On a campaign—say out west against the Indians—where we have to make long marches over sandy or rocky country with our accouterments on our backs, fifty rounds of ammunition in our belts, the sun pouring down its heat from above, with no water except the few pints in our canteens—in marches where we have to do thirty and thirty-five miles a day under such disagreeable circumstances—the German is apt to flag. He can't stand it as well as the tough, hardy, native American. The American makes the best all around soldier. He's hard to beat."

"Are there many desertions?"

"The proportion of desertions is quite small in this country. The service is voluntary, and the discipline is not unnecessarily severe. Besides, it is hard for a man to desert without being recaptured. Very frequently deserters surrender themselves. After a few months of freedom they discover that, after all, soldiering compares favorably with manual labor as a private citizen."

"How about soldiers marrying?"

"The government doesn't want married men. An enlisted man must get permission from the commandant of his company before he can become a Benedict. At military posts there are generally one or two men in a company, sometimes more, who are married. If their wives do the laundry work of the company they are paid for it. Otherwise a married soldier gets no more rations than if he were a single man."—Baltimore Herald.

Cowardice of the Suicide.

Rarely do we have a suicide from noble motives, though a suicide himself, as a rule, takes the ground that somehow he is a hero. Here again is a delusion amounting almost to insanity, and yet falling short of it. What to the destroyer of his own life seems a pathetic sacrifice looks to the world more like a freak of vanity, self pity or chagrin. The wretched murderer, in the inevitable manifesto which he issues before his act, assumes that he himself is the one that is chiefly to be pitied, whereas, in most cases, he forfeits all claim to sympathy by a base desertion of duty, and all the goes out to the victim of his cowardice.

As cowardice in some one of its myriad forms is almost the sole motive to suicide, this crime is essentially contemptible, and, therefore, any secret impulse to take refuge in it should be sternly rejected by the true man or woman. Life often looks forbidding and dark, but only a craven will surrender, even if no other heart will bleed but his own. And what aggravated cowardice than is which, rather than oppose trouble, slinks away just when the need is the greatest! This is to desert in the face of the enemy—a crime justly held to be the most heinous a soldier can commit.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Paine's Celery Compound

WEAK NERVES

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is a Nerve Tonic which never fails. Containing Celery and Coca, those wonderful nerve stimulants, it speedily cures all nervous disorders.

RHEUMATISM

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND purifies the blood. It drives out the lactic acid, which causes Rheumatism, and restores the blood-making organs to a healthy condition. It is the true remedy for Rheumatism.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND quickly restores the liver and kidneys to perfect health. This curative power, combined with its nerve tonics, makes it the best remedy for all kidney complaints.

DYSPEPSIA

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND strengthens the stomach, and quiets the nerves of the digestive organs. This is why it cures even the worst cases of Dyspepsia.

CONSTIPATION

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's August Excursions.

As a supplement to their seventeen July excursions, Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb announce six attractive tours for August, a month when the greatest number of vacation tourists are on the move. A party will leave Boston August 6th for a trip to New York, up the Hudson, and to Saratoga, Lake George, Lake Champlain, and Ausable Chasm. Three parties depart on the 14th—one for the Hudson river, Trenton falls, the Thousand islands, the St. Lawrence river, Montreal, Quebec, and Lake Memphremagog, and the two others for Mauch Chunk, Watkins Glen, Niagara falls, and other points of interest; one section returning through Canada, and the other via Saratoga, Lake George, Lake Champlain, and Ausable Chasm. The Hudson, Niagara Falls, Saratoga, and the lakes are the features of a fifth tour, with the 15th as the date of departure; and an excursion to the Saguenay river is set down for August 21st. In addition to these tours, a party will leave Boston August 20th, for the second excursion to the Yellowstone National park, and another starts on the same date for a tour through Colorado. Descriptive circulars may be obtained of W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston. When the same are to be sent by mail, applicants should designate whether the Yellowstone National Park circular, the Colorado tour, or the book of "six August trips" is desired.

Give Them a Short Shrift.

The anarchist murderers of Chicago are rampant yet, it seems, and a number of those most prominently known in connection with the Haymarket massacre, outside of those hung, have just been arrested on a charge of conspiracy to murder with dynamite the judges, jurors, witnesses and others instrumental in bringing the Haymarket assassins to justice. If the hope entertained due to these foreign ruffians, the better it will be. Large quantities of dynamite were found in possession of those arrested. It is said that there are 5000 armed anarchists in Chicago; if so, there should be 5000 executions there, right away.

RAILROAD RUMORS.

This is the season when all sorts of schemes for railway contracts and changes are discussed.

One of the recent stories is that the New York & New England and the Boston & Albany roads are to be united, and trains in consequence will run between Boston and New York in five hours.

It is a fixed fact that General Manager Kendrick of the Old Colony has aroused the Shore line from its bad habit of long delays (which were doubtless connived at if not caused by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, whose interests were to send passengers to Springfield or Hartford instead of by way of the Shore line to Boston,) and trains on that line will now run through in six hours. The Shore line is the best all-rail line between Portsmouth and New York for persons leaving here at 7:30 A. M., as a close connection is made by leaving the Providence station at ten o'clock A. M. Trains under the new management reach New York in six hours, and are always on time.

Another recent narrative is that the Boston & Maine expects to be defeated in the matter of the lease of the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad; that Mr. Benton has gone to Europe, and the fight against the Concord road will not be very hearty. That the court will hold the lease invalid, and the B., C. & M. will pass to the control of the directors. Then it will appear that certain elements in the Concord road will deem it better to squeeze the B., C. & M. R. R. than to lease it. The Boston & Maine will make connection via the Portland & Ogdensburg road (leased to the Maine Central) with Lake Champlain, build the Lake Shore road, and take its chances for the northern business. Some of the B., C. & M. R. R. syndicate will be relieved of their carryings, while the lambs of the flock will be permitted to gambol until the fleece comes off.

These however are only rumors, in which the quidnuncs delight to revel as dog days approach.

Unitarian Convention.

The annual summer gathering of the Unitarians of New England will commence at the Weirs on the 1st of August, and continue four days. Among the speakers engaged are Ex-Vice President Hanibal Hamlin, Ex-Governor Connor and Judge William P. Whitehouse of Maine, Ex-Mayor Greenhalge of Lowell, Mass., Rev. Robert Collyer of New York, Rev. Dr. Putnam of Brooklyn, Rev. James K. Applebee, and others.

Dr. Gage and Associate Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor; A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

I have offended you, love, to-night,
Never before have you met me so,
Coldly withholding your glances bright.

Listen, and hear me, my soul's delight;
Ah! You still turn from me. Then I kno
I have offended you, love, to-night

Let me my story of love recite,
Then you could never increase my woe
Coldly withholding your glances bright.

Have I, my treasured one, read aright?
Something within me tells me so.
I have offended you, love, to-night.

Tell me wherein I have sinned in your sight,
Why do you chill me like winter's snow?
Coldly withholding your glances bright.

Surely my love is too deep for slight,
Take it and kiss me or bid me go,
Coldly withholding your glances bright,
I have offended you, love, to-night.

Ancient Peoples of North America.

The wealth and variety of the materials of American history are but little appreciated. The people who inhabited the American continent before its discovery were not all of one race, but of many. In North America alone there were more than seventy-five distinct stocks, having radically distinct languages and mythologies, having independent and diverse institutions, and having diverse and multifarious arts. At the north we have the igloo dwellers that live by the shores of the frozen seas; farther to the south we have races occupying dwellings made of forest timber; other races wove their habitations of reeds; others built their towns of the clay of mother earth; and others erected their buildings of stones quarried from the cliffs; while still others hewed themselves habitations in the solid rock. Some dwelt in towering and almost inaccessible cliffs, while other towns were erected among the crags and cinders of extinct volcanoes. Some races were hunters, other races were fishermen, still other races were agriculturists. Some races worshiped the sun and moon and stars, and the gods of the cardinal points; other races made the mountains and the rivers the object of their principal worship; and all worshiped strange mythologic beasts.

All of the tribes were organized into bodies politic as bodies of kindred, but the method of organization was multifarious. Many tongues were spoken: harsh consonantal and guttural languages were found in the cold climate of the extreme north and south, vocalic and musical languages were found in the sunny lands of the middle zones. Everywhere the tribes had learned to use picture writing, and to record events with pictures of men and beasts and many conventional signs. They made tools and implements of stone and bone and shell and horn and wood. They made canoes and boats of bark and logs, they made rafts and basket boats of weeds, and they made kayaks of skins; and in such crafts they navigated the rivers, the lakes and the seas. The relics of all these mythologies, religions, institutions, languages, and arts must be recovered, if we are to preserve the ancient history of America; and the work must be done soon, or they will be lost.—Maj. J. W. Powell.

THE MOST WONDERFUL FAMILY REMEDY EVER KNOWN.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Safe, pleasant, and certain in their action," is the concise testimony of Dr. George E. Walker, of Martinsville, Virginia.

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

For New England to-day:—

Warmer, southerly winds, local rains.

THE EIGHT HOUR LAW.

The national senate on the 17th inst. resumed consideration of the bill providing for the adjustment of the accounts of laborers, workmen and mechanics, who, employed by the government under the eight-hour law, have at different times, in open conflict with the express provision of that law, been compelled to work ten hours a day or submit to a reduction of wages. After some further debate the bill was passed by the following vote:

Nays—Bate, Beck, Berry, Blodgett, Brown, Butler, Call, Cockrell, Coke, George, Gibson, Gray, Hampton, Hearst, Jones of Arkansas, McPherson, Pascoe, Pugh, Reagan, Vance, Vest, Walthall—twenty-two democrats.

This bill has nothing whatever to do with the wisdom or otherwise of the eight-hour law; it simply makes it possible for workingmen who under that law—or rather through the plain violation of that law by government officials high in authority—have been defrauded of wages legally due them, shall be allowed a chance to prove their claims in the United States courts.

The first section provides that whoever as a laborer, workman or mechanic, has been employed by or on behalf of the government of the United States since June 25th, 1868, (the day of the constituting eight hours a day's work), whether engaged at a price per day or on piece work or task work, shall be paid for each eight hours he has been employed as for a full day's work, without any reduction of pay on account of the reduction of the hours of labor. The second section provides that all claims for labor so performed in excess of eight hours per day are hereby referred to the court of claims to be adjudicated upon the basis that eight hours constitute a day's work, and are to be paid for at the price per day as provided for in the first section of this act, and judgment given against the United States in favor of each claimant for the amount found due, to be paid as other judgments of the court of claims against the United States; and no statute of limitations on payment made or receipt given for a less sum per day than the full price of a day's work, as provided in the first section of this act, shall bar the right of recovery so provided; that all suits under this act shall be commenced within two years from and after its passage, and any number of said claimants may join in the same suit; and provided further, that any amount allowed under this act shall only be paid to such claimant in person or to his personal representatives.

Yet this plain, simple act of justice to the workingmen who would be benefitted by its provisions was opposed by twenty-two senatorial friends of the American workingman and foreign manufacturer—all democrats, and nearly all from the southern states. The solid republican vote, with the aid of four democratic senators, sufficed to carry the bill through the senate.

The bill to make eight hours a day's work in government employ, without any reduction of pay, was unquestionably introduced in Congress as a political dodge—a vote-catcher. Our impression is that it was introduced by the democrats, under the idea that the republicans would oppose it, and then the democrats could "point with pride" to themselves as the true friends of the workingmen, and to the republicans as bloated and heartless aristocrats. Yet it may have been introduced by the republicans, under the impression that Andrew Johnson, then president, would veto it, and thus give them a chance to howl. We have not at hand the Congressional Globe of 1868, and if we had would not bother to look over it, as it is not material which side of the house initiated the measure. It passed both branches of Congress by a practically unanimous vote, was signed by of the country, neither party being slow to make any political capital out of it. But no sooner was it passed than the high officials commenced to violate it, and make the men work ten hours a day or accept eight hours' pay. President Grant remedied this illegality, and a supplementary law was passed that the original one should not again be violated; but it was violated, for many years continuously, and the present bill aims to rectify the injustice.

If the eight hour law is wrong in principle, it should be repealed. But it is and for twenty years has been the law, and men who in the government service have worked ten hours for a day's pay since its passage, are just as much entitled to the pay wrongfully withheld from them as to the portion they have received.

BASE BALL.

The game at Dover on the 17th between the Portsmouths and the home club was easily won by Portsmouth; both sides batted well, but the Portsmouths bunched their hits, which the Dovers failed to do just when it was most needed. The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Portsmouth	6	3	0	1	0	4	1	0	*	—11
Dover	0	0	0	1	4	0	0	0	0	—5

Earned runs, Portsmouth 3, Dover 2. Base hits, Portsmouth 14, total 19; Dover 11, total 14.

The Interstate league now consists of the Dover club—the Rochesters, Haverhills and Nashuas having disbanded, and the Portsmouths having joined the New England league. As the Dovers are all that is left of the Interstate league, we cannot see why that club has not a good claim to the championship pennant. The score of the season's games is as follows:

	Played.	Won.	Lost.
Portsmouth,	35	27	8
Dover,	35	20	15
Nashua,	35	18	17
Haverhill,	22	7	15
Rochester,	23	5	18

The Lowell club, of the New England league, arrived in this city on the afternoon of the 18th inst., and about 2:30 o'clock were escorted to the ball field by the entire force of night police headed by Asst. Marshal Hurley, the Portsmouth brass band, and the Portsmouth club. The attendance at the grounds was between 1500 and 2000. Before the base ball game commenced there was a hundred-yards dash, which was won by Murray, first baseman of the Portsmouth club. There was then a trial at throwing the ball, at which Madigan of Portsmouth and Guinasso of Lowell tied at 125 yards, beating all others; in throwing off, Guinasso won by six inches. The base-running contest was won by Madigan in 15 1-4 seconds, Staltz of Lowell making the circuit in 15 1-2 seconds. The ball game resulted in an overwhelming victory for the home club, the score being as follows:

The Portsmouth club being now a member of the New England league, will play the first championship game in that league on Friday at 3:30 o'clock, with the Lynn club, the leader of the league record—a somewhat ambitious commencement, it would seem. Owing to the change of base, the game announced to take place on the home grounds Saturday, the 21st, between the Beacons of Boston and the Portsmouths, is given up.

Umpire Mahoney of the Interstate league has been signed by the New England league.

PERSONAL.

Miss Gertrude Priest leaves this morning to pass several weeks in Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Fred B. Haraden will pass the remainder of the summer in Rochester and at the mountains.

Officer Richard D. Smart goes on his annual vacation of ten days to-day.

Mr. John H. Lowd, the well known bank messenger, is hauled up by sickness, and his duties are being performed by Mr. William G. Billings.

Capt. J. Albert Sanborn left Portsmouth on the 18th for the scene of immediate operations in the development of the Manarrington gold mines, situated in Nash county, North Carolina. He was accompanied as far as Boston by Mr. Robert B. Palfrey of that city, who had been passing a number of days here.

Capt. Ephraim Anderson, before reported as being confined by sickness at the Cottage Hospital, has so far recovered as to be able to be about out of [illegible] agement of the [illegible]

Hon. A. W. Sulloway, president of the Northern railroad, and Col. J. H. Benton, Jr., of Boston, were passengers in the steamer Ems for Southhampton, England, which vessel sailed from Boston on the 18th.

Schooner Margie Smith went ashore on the ledge nothwest of the Appledore house at the Shoals on Tuesday, the 17th, and was hauled off by the steamer Pinafore without receiving much damage. The ledge is the same upon which the yacht Sylph went ashore about six years ago, and had her keel torn off.

A "democratic" caucus was held in ward four on Tuesday evening of this week, and a self constituted committee elected a list of officers, supposed to be according to federal dictation. It is best that parties should move slow, for they might reckon without their hosts.

Landlord Grant of the Sea Cottage, York beach, was in this city on Wednesday, the 18th, and reported the summer houses there as well patronized. The boarding houses and small hotels were nearly all full, and the big hotels were making a good showing.

The tug Cocheco came down the river from Dover with a party of about 125 ladies and gentlemen on the 18th. They landed at the navy yard, and after a voyage of exploration there re-embarked and kept on toward the sea, returning shortly after five o'clock and proceeding to Dover.

Rufus M. Adams, with the assistance of two men, is engaged in making the necessary repairs at Liberty bridge.

If Frank Jones' administration of the Kittery navy yard is any sign of the way he would run the national democratic canvass, his party had better beware of him. It is the general impression that his manner of distributing the navy yard patronage is fast making the democratic party in the vicinity altogether too small

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence repeased in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Neveral travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often disuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

SAFETY FOR DEPOSITORS.

Banks to Be Insured Against All Loss. Novel Financial Scheme.

Early last winter the Depositors' Guarantee company of America was organized under the laws of West Virginia and a charter was granted to the corporation. The capital stock of the company is $5,000,000, divided into shares of $100 each, and its object is to guarantee depositors in national and state banks against loss from any cause whatsoever. The incorporators and officers of the company are among the most prominent financiers of the country, who believe that the new financial institution, while it is an innovation in banking affairs, will ultimately become one of the most powerful and beneficent corporations for the protection of both banks and depositors in the world.

Mr. Scriba described in detail the objects of the new concern. "It was," he said, "intended to absolutely insure the solvency of state and national banks by forming a combination of banks for self protection through this corporation. As a measure of the guarantee principle, $1,000,000 of the capital of the company will be deposited with the treasurer of the United States at Washington, and such amounts in bonds with the proper officers of the various states as the laws of such states may require. Already 1,000 of the most prominent banks in the United States have signified their intention of becoming stockholders and having their deposits guaranteed by the company. These banks have agreed to pay the company one-fifth of 1 per cent. annually upon their gross deposits, which give a yearly income over estimated expenses of about $500,000.

In every banking center of the company there will be a competent bank examiner, who will make a thorough examination of a bank before a policy will be issued to it, and the bank examiners of the company will have the right to examine any bank included in the guarantee at any time during the year without any notification to its officers and directors. Upon the delivery of a guarantee the company will have an advertisement, to run for a period of six months, inserted in the leading newspapers in the locality of the bank bearing the notification that all depositors in that bank are guaranteed against loss, and that in the event of the bank's insolvency all deposits will be paid in full by the company, with interest. The company will start upon a sound financial basis and with abundant resources, for not a guarantee will be issued until the guarantee fund of $5,000,000 has been paid in in cash. No bank will be guaranteed unless holding stock in the combination. The charter calls for a lease of fifty years, with power to extend."

In discussing the merits of the scheme Mr. Scriba called attention to the fact that there could be no such thing as a run on a bank or a panic among a circle of banks which are in such a combination, for with the guarantee fund of $5,000,000 behind them all demands could be promptly met. There was no way in which the company could lose anything by guaranteeing a bank's deposit even if it paid its losses. In case a bank were in temporary difficulty, he said, and needed a large sum of money to tide it over a crisis, the Guarantee company would advance the needed money, taking as security sufficient of the collateral assets of the bank to cover the loan, which should be returned to the bank upon the loan's redemption. A million dollars in cash would be kept available to meet any such emergency that might arise. Mr. Scriba believed that the constant supervision over the banks exercised by the company's examiners would almost entirely do away with defalcations, and by raising the standard of bank employes save the thousands upon thousands of dollars now being annually lost by compromising with dishonest officials.—New York Times.

The Dog Show in Paris.

Paris dotes on dogs; consequently the dog show that is now held annually in the Tuileries gardens has become one of the most successful of all shows. The ladies have taken it up with their characteristic ardor. The dogs have become formidable rivals of artists, for their show has lately been a more fashionable meeting place than the salon. The exhibition has a perfume that does not suggest extract of roses, but any odor may become a la mode. The best animals shown this year are the yard dogs and sporting dogs, but these are not those upon which the ladies expend their admiration. It is only when they are in the presence of a very diminutive beast that could be carried in a muff that they break forth into rapture and use such expressions as "petite amour!" Many of these "little loves" are provided with soft cushions covered with satin, and their kennels are draped with Oriental stuff. The yard dog that watches them from his straw bed must have some queer thoughts on the theory of evolution, if he is a canine philosopher.—Cor. Boston Transcript.

Reading for Boys and Girls.

"Our Young Folks' Reading Circle" is the name of a new organization formed for the purpose of promoting good reading among boys and girls. Among its board of directors are William H. Rideing, Mrs. Livermore, Miss Frances E. Willard, Professor J. W. Stearns, Dr. Bascom and the Rev. Lyman Abbott. It has also a board of counselors, who, with the board of directors, must pass on all books before they are approved. This is a capital idea, and it is to be hoped that it will succeed. Now let an association be formed to tell grown up people what books to read and what books not to read. Many of them need directions on this point as badly as the boys and girls.—New York Tribune.

The World's Cotton Yield.

Though known from prehistoric times, the use of cotton for cloth did not become general until after the first successful American cultivation of the fiber in 1790. In 1791 the world's yield was 490,000,000 pounds, and that of the United States 2,000,000 pounds. Since then the American development of the industry has been stupendous, the present production of the United States being six times as great as that of the whole world a century ago, and its home consumption being equal to the world's product fifty years ago. It has been calculated that, with the appliances of 1790, the manufacture of the world's cotton in 1826 would have occupied about 50,000,000 people, while it would require 300,000,000 persons at the present time.—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Household Remedy.—No family should be without some remedy for the cure of affections so universally prevalent as coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough and croup—some remedy, too, which can be relied on as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the article required.

What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

FAILURE OF CROPS is an unknown experience in Central and Northern Dakota and Minnesota. Maps and full particulars regarding lands, prices, etc., sent free. Address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn-out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high-priced or heavily-mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start for yourself? Why not secure at once some of the low priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high-priced or worn-out land you now occupy? Why not go and look the situation over, and see for yourself, or at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn. ?

GO WEST 18,000,000 acres of the Montana Indian Reservation just opened for settlement near Great Falls, Ft. Benton, Assiniboine and Glasgow, consisting of rich mineral and coal districts, grazing and farm lands of the very highest quality. The opportunities for making money here are greater than anywhere else in the United States. This is the time to go. Address Paul Grinnell, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

DON'T SCOLD

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-phe-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use and am now well."

Male and Female Employes.

A dry goods man, who keeps careful record from year to year of the punctuality and grade of service rendered by his 1,600 employes, says that the best women are more faithful than the best men, but that the average record of the men is much above that of the women.—New York Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a bilious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

The village of Plant City, Fla., is to be burned in order to eradicate the fever germs.

Adamson's Botanic Balsam is regularly prescribed by many physicians of the best standing, and is recommended by professors of medical colleges to their students, as invaluable for all diseases of the throat and lungs.

Cheep Piah, a renegade chief of the Ouray agency, killed his son in a quarrel and then committed suicide, a few days ago.

It Is Not Best

To always believe everything that a person tells you, but when you hear that the best blood purifier is Sulphur Bitters, you can believe it, for they cured me of a severe case of blood poisoning.—Rev. A. Fairchild, New York City.

Mr. Blaine has, it is said, engaged passage on the steamer City of New York, from Liverpool Aug. 1st.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

Commander Folger of the U. S. S. Quinnebaug has been given a roving commision to visit European gun works.

The loss in transporting cattle across the ocean was in 1880, thirty-seven per cent. It has been reduced to eleven per cent.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

A Great Surprise

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Large bottles 50c and $1. a18

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. eeowtjans9

A VISIT TO POMPEII.

First Impressions of the Place—Unearthing a Corpse—Frescoes.

"It was a long drive through Portici, and not a pretty one—filth and beggars all the way. We stopped at an inn to order luncheon, and while it was preparing we drove to the Pompeian amphitheatre, which stands alone at present, on the outskirts of what was Pompeii—the greater part of which is still buried under volcanic ashes. And there stands the arena—not circular, as I had fancied, but elliptical—most of the stone seats still standing one above another in long tiers. The dens of the animals, the waiting room of the gladiators, might have been occupied yesterday! To a reader of Bulwer, how specially interesting!—the empty look of the place so often filled by eager thousands; the awful contrast between the stillness now and the mingled roars of beasts, and men worse than beasts, that rose into the great sky thousands of years ago! Then there are the very seats, in the best part larger and more commodious, in which the aristocracy sat. Separate boxes for the ladies at the top (the women never sat with the men) were broken and grass grown, but all so nearly complete that a very little would restore the amphitheatre to its original condition.

"As we drove to it we passed on the side of the road what appeared to be a cluster of mud hovels; very small, dirty and drabby, roofless and miserable, without a vestige of color, or column, or statue; and a modern shed with new red tiles here and there, put apparently to protect something. I looked. I heard the courier, whom everybody here treats with great respect and calls Signor Corriere, say: 'Dere you haf Pompeii, sir!' 'Well, of all the sells in the world!' we all exclaimed; and very foolish we were to be so rashly guided by first impressions, for the roofless, colorless place that Pompeii certainly seems at a distance resolves itself, on nearer approach, into the most wonderful little city in the world; but it seems built for pigmies. The streets are eleven feet wide at their widest; the houses were never more than one story high, and they were all built on the same plan; but the frescoes and other decorations are very varied and beautiful.

"Our guide through the ruins was a Neapolitan soldier; and what with his comical French, and his still more comical manners, he kept us highly amused. He seemed to think what he had to describe ought to interest as much as if he were showing the gates of heaven; and the way in which he said in English (the only words he could speak in that language) 'by and by, sare, by and by,' when we attempted to anticipate his narrative, was indescribable. He called me 'Misseu' at every word, and was altogether inimitable in look, manners and everything. I was surprised to find that not more than a third of the little city is uncovered; and the excavations are now going on with great vigor. Discoveries of deep interest are made every day, and as we wandered about we could see the workmen as busy as bees pickaxing away the lava and ashes, like a lot of English navvies. A friend of our conductor's said something to him that made him start; and he left us only to return running and gesticulating like a madman. 'Misseau, on a trouvay oone cadavre.' The deuce they have, thought I; that will be something to see.

"Fancy the thrilling interest with which I approached the excavations, and saw the men kneeling and carefully picking away the volcanic matter from the body of a woman so perfect that you could not only distinguish her sex, but you felt sure that she had been beautiful! Anything more pathetic could not be conceived—a young mother with little children huddled about her; one hand covered her face, and with the other she had tried to protect a child from the pitiless shower of sulphurous ashes and boiling water that overwhelmed them in that awful time. She conveyed to me, as she lay there, the struggle she had made to escape, through darkness so dense—according to Pliny, who was in it—that people could not see each other, though they might be touching; and at last in despair had thrown herself down to die, and be concealed under the fatal ashes for eighteen centuries; then to be uncovered before the eyes of the present writer. I only saw the upper part of the body down to a little below the waist brought to light, the excavators telling us they were obliged to be so tender with their work that it might be many hours before the whole figure was revealed.

"The wonderful freshness of the Pompeian houses, as they are laid open to the light of day, is astonishing; and the things they find! On a plate were some walnuts, some cracked and opened, some whole; a bunch of grapes; three or four olives in a dish, one cut in half, and the knife lying by. As to the frescoes and inscriptions, they looked as if they had just been executed."—Frith.

But She Saved Herself.

It was at Harvard class day, and as she had a ravishing gown, she was in a blissful frame of mind. Besides, she was almost as good as engaged to Tom Burns, to whose spread she merrily wended her way, properly attended by a chaperon who knew how to keep discreetly out of sight.

But fate was unkind to her. She had hardly set her foot inside of Tom's chambers than the host was introducing her to a man whose face gave her a dreadful shock.

"You ought to know my cousin, Jack Harmes," Tom said cordially.

And what punishment could be too severe for that wretch of a Jack Harmes, who had the cruelty to rejoin:

"Oh, we do know each other. We were engaged five years ago while we were in college; weren't we, Miss Plank?"

"Oh, no, Mr. Harmes, not engaged. You know mamma said that the idea of my being engaged before I was fifteen was absurd; and I said I didn't mind giving you up if I could have a new sunshade. It was really as funny as anything I ever knew."

And so she saved herself, and if she is not by this time betrothed to Tom she certainly deserves to be.—Boston Courier.

The London and Northwestern railway has decided, "in deference to the prejudices of its American customers," to institute the system of checking baggage.

The Steppes of the Irtish.

Between the villages of Krutaya and Kalmakova, on Friday, we rode across a steppe which was literally a great ocean of flowers. One could pick twenty different species and a hundred specimens within the area of a single square yard. Here and there we deserted the miry road and drove for miles across the smooth, grassy plain, crushing flowers by the score at every revolution of our carriage wheels. In the middle of the steppe I had our driver stop and wait for me while I alighted and walked away into the flowery solitude to enjoy the stillness, the perfumed air, and the sea of verdure through which ran the long, sinuous black line of the muddy highway. On my left, beyond the road, was a wide, shallow depression six or eight miles across, rising on the opposite side in a long, gradual sweep to a dark blue line of birch forest which formed the horizon. This depression was one smooth expanse of close green turf dotted with grazing cattle and sheep, and broken here and there by a silvery pool or lake.

Around me, upon the higher ground, the steppe was carpeted with flowers, among which I noticed splendid orange asters two inches in diameter, spotted tiger lilies with strongly reflexed petals, white clover, daisies, harebells, spiræa, astragalus, melliotus and a peculiar flower growing in long, slender, curved spikes which suggested flights of miniature carmine skyrockets sent up by the fairies of the steppe. The air was still and warm, and had a strange, sweet fragrance which I can liken only to the taste of wild honey. There were no sounds to break the stillness of the great plain except the drowsy hum of bees, the regular measured "Kate did, Kate did," of a few katydids in the grass near me, and the wailing cry of a steppe hawk hovering over the nest of some field mice. It was a delight simply to lie on the grass amidst the flowers and see, hear and breathe.—George Kennan in The Century.

How Chocolate Is Made.

Chocolate is prepared from the almond shaped beans of the Theobrama cacao, a tree so named by the great Linnæus because its product was fit to be the fruit of the gods. It is cultivated in Mexico, the northern states of South America and in the West Indies. The very best comes from Caracas, Venezuela. In that province the nuts are gathered in June and December, their curing for the market requiring the greatest skill and care.

The beans are first roasted in large revolving cylinders, after which they are reduced to "nibs" in the crushing machine and winnowed from the shells. The nibs are then ground with granite rollers sufficiently heated to liquefy the fat, which is present in the bean to the extent of 52 per cent., which forms with the powder a pasty, brownish mass. The mass is cooled and ground with granite rollers several times, the temperature of the machines and the cooling processes between commanding the greatest care. During the latter grinding process pure sugar is added until it reaches the condition in which it is used in the confections sold today. If a person ever complains of a disagreeable floury paste remaining on the tongue after slowly dissolving a piece of chocolate, they may know that the goods are not what is known as first class, as flour was used in the process of manufacture instead of sugar.—New York Mail and Express.

Restlessness of Russian Students.

A Moscow student wrote lately to The London Times to explain the riots which have broken out in several university towns between the students and the police authorities. He says that Russian students, since the accession of the present czar, have been watched and worried as if they were inmates of a reformatory prison. They do not enjoy the freedom of a peasant.

Rules of the most minute description are laid down for them, extending even to the cut of their hair, the style of their clothes, the choice of their companions and the nature of their amusements, to say nothing of the sleepless espionage of their reading, writing and conversation. Detectives are ever on the alert to catch delinquents, and the slightest infraction of the most trifling rule is followed by the penalty. The consequence of this policy is that every college is in a chronic state of suppressed rebellion, which a very small matter may kindle into activity.—Youth's Companion.

Go to Your Dentist.

When your teeth ache or trouble you in any way, don't consult a doctor. Go to your dentist and lay the case before him. Doctors will prescribe for an ulcerated tooth, for instance, a poultice on the outside of the face. This is really very dangerous. It is apt to draw the ulceration out to the surface of the skin, and very likely produce an abscess which will leave a disfiguring scar. The dentist has now small mustard plasters, which are to be applied directly to the troublesome tooth, and relieves it at once without any danger of disfigurement. Remember this, and you may save yourself no little uneasiness some time in the future, when you succumb to toothache, which is certainly one of the most distressing ills that flesh is heir to.—Boston Herald.

Utilizing the Empty Boxes.

An English magazine lately told the story of the keeper of a wine shop in Paris named Drog who, in 1871, at the close of the war with Germany, found himself utterly ruined, and, with his family, on the verge of starvation. In his cellar was a heap of empty sardine boxes. It occurred to him that the solder might be removed from them and sold and the tin boxes themselves converted into little metal toys for children. He set at work, succeeded, and in a year or two had established a factory in which thousands of waste sardine boxes were bought, melted and sent out again, glorious in paint, gilding and varnish, as toy soldiers, animals, chariots, Venetian lanterns and buttons.—Youth's Companion.

A Prolific Pen.

Mrs. Trollope did not commence her career as an author until she had "reached the sober season of married and middle life," yet she managed to produce no less than 115 volumes of fiction.—Home Journal.

A Summer Medicine

Summer's heat debilitates both nerves and body, and Headache, Sleeplessness, Nervous Prostration, and an "all-played-out" sensation prove that PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND should be used now. This medicine restores health to Nerves, Kidneys, Liver, and Bowels, and imparts life and energy to the heat prostrated system. Vacations or no vacations, PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is the medicine for this season. It is a scientific combination of the best tonics, and those who use it begin the hot summer days with clear heads, strong nerves, and general good health. PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND is sold by all druggists, $1 a bottle. Six for $5.

It is Nature's Remedy, made exclusively from Roots and Herbs.

It is perfectly Harmless.

It is the only remedy known to the world that has ever yet Cured contagious Blood Poison in all its stages.

It cures Mercurial Rheumatism, Cancer, Scrofula, and other blood diseases heretofore considered incurable. It cures any disease caused from impure blood. It is now prescribed by thousands of the best physicians in the United States, as a tonic. We append the statement of a few:

"I have used S. S. S. on patients convalescing from fever and from measles with the best results. J. N. CHERRY, M. D., Ellaville, Ga."

BREMEN, GA.—Willie White was afflicted with scrofula seven years. I prescribed S. S. S., and to-day he is a fat and robust boy. C. W. PARKER, M. D.

RICHMOND, VA., Dec. 15, 1885.—I have taken three bottles of Swift's Specific for secondary blood poison. It acts much better than potash or any other remedy I have ever used. R. F. WINFIELD, M. D., Formerly of Sussex Co., Va.

DR. E. J. HALE, the well-known druggist and physician, of Nashville, Howard County, Ark., writes: "Having some knowledge as to what S. S. S. is composed of, I can safely recommend it as the remedy for all skin diseases, it matters not what the name may be."

We have a book giving a history of this wonderful remedy, and its cures, from all over the world, which will convince you that all we say is true, and which we will mail free on application. No family should be without it. We have another on Contagious Blood Poison, sent on same terms.

Write us a history of your case, and our physician will advise with you by letter, in strictest confidence. We will not deceive you knowingly.

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, a the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Life at Saratoga.

Drinks and Drives—Piazza Talk—How to Economize.

One need neither live nor dress extravagantly to have a "good time" at Saratoga, since in no other place are there so many pleasures provided at very small cost. The town is made up of small hotels and large boarding houses, where one can be comfortable at moderate prices, particularly if remaining for September, which many think the best month of all. Cheap amusements are everywhere. One can see the crowds by walking in front of the great hotels; any one can go on their front piazzas or in their grandly upholstered parlors, while a small amount of influence will secure admission to the concerts given on the piazzas overlooking their court yards. Yet, why sue for admission there when better music is given at early morning, afternoon and evening in the beautiful Congress Park. Single tickets ten cents, but large commutation for season packages — drinks of water gratis, for two noted springs are within its limits.

GROWLS

Have been many, it is true, since the five-cent rule went into operation at all the near-at-hand springs, but this is made up by the five and ten cent drives to the distant ones. At every turn, one meets some stage with card of invitation for the small sums just named; a round trip to the lake costs but fifty cents, while everybody goes to Mt. McGregor, where the dismal and ill-located cottage appropriated to Gen. Grant reminds one of the Peri outside Paradise. It is just cut off from the superb view in front of the hotel, and people are asking why he was not taken where the sunlight glances on a view stretching ninety miles over to the White Mountains and the breezes blow fresh as on mid-ocean. True, the air everywhere on this magnificent location is good, but the summit of the mount the soul not moved by its grand scenery

DRESS.

To be happy, one need not bring 300 costumes, as it is said one lady has done. Good taste is often a substitute for money and home ingenuity can replace many dollars. Bonnets and gloves can be dispensed with, parasols (which people must have anyhow) doing duty, while in stages the travelling hat will answer. Then there are so many ways of twisting and turning costumes. So many unique and formerly unheard of combinations, that an ingenious girl can make three dresses look like six. Independent basques and waists can be worn now with this skirt, now with that, and provided with a pair of tan colored Newport ties and a well chosen parasol, she can look stylish on only a little money. Lace and drapery net costumes are particularly susceptible of transformations by changes of ribbons or underdresses, and with these hints of encouragement, let one re-consider about the expensiveness of Saratoga.

ELDERLY PEOPLE.

But gray heads predominate by a large majority, and children and nurses, the terror of summer hotels, are conspicuously absent. Grandmothers who do not talk baby talk, are however as impossible as grandfathers who neglect politics, and I find that not only in New York, but the country at large, mothers are realizing more and more the superiority of Carnrick's Food for infants. It's precedence is not surprising, since it approaches human milk in its composition more nearly than any other prepared food, and is almost identical with the formula recommended by the committee of the American Medical Association on infant feeding. It is also the only prepared food that will satisfactorily nourish a child without cow's milk; this great advantage being readily apparent. But returning to economical dress, let me add that a genteel outfit to the elderly, means three or four nice quality dark dresses, black being preferable, because one does not tire of it, while touches of color can be had in accessories. For them, hints as to the parasol doing duty for a bonnet, will apply with equal propriety.

LUCY CARTER

Getting Rid of Old Ships.

The following item of startling information we find going the rounds of the press:

The Norwegians are breaking up worn-out wooden ships in a singular way. They take the vessel to some dangerous point on the coast and anchor it there, leaving it to be broken into bits by the sea in the first heavy gale. The fragments are carried ashore, and are collected and sold at good rates for firewood.

This is absurd. The Norwegians do nothing of the kind. When a ship is worn out they carry it up on a mountain and throw it down a cliff two thousand feet high. This not only smashes the timbers into firewood and makes the spikes into ten-penny nails, but makes a big cavity in the ground which is cut up and sold for cellars and post holes.

Luck and Money.

It would, of course, be difficult to exactly estimate the amount by which Boston is made the richer each year because of the Louisana State Lottery, but it can safely be said that thousands upon thousands of dollars are annually distributed among its citizens by this great financial institution. At the last drawing held in New Orleans, June 12th, a large number of Boston and New England people received prizes ranging from $5 to amounts up in the thousands. Two separate portions of ticket numbered 49,566, which drew the third capital prize of $50,000 were drawn by Bostonians. One part was held by a resident on Batchelder street in the Highland district, whose name we are not at liberty to publish, but who was seen by a representative of the Courier and found to be a drummer for one of the largest drug firms in New York. "Yes, It is true; I received the $2,500," said the travelling man, "but the money was not for me. The ticket belonged to a relative and was given to me for collection. However, poor fellow, he needed the money much more than I did and I am glad he is going to have it. He is a clerk in a hardware store, and as he has only a salary of twelve dollars per week he has seen some pretty hard times. His faith in the

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

every month for five years he has purchassed a ticket, believing that sooner or later the lightning would strike him. Yes, he has certainly got his money back. Twelve dollars a year for five years would be sixty dollars. That deducted from $2,500 leaves just $2,440 as clear profit. I expect to draw $15,000 myself in a month or two and then I shall want you to come and interview me." The other portion was held by a well-known paint and oil merchant on India street, who when seen said the money had been received through the Maverick bank and placed where it was much needed.—Boston (Mass.) Courier, July 8th.

Meant Well, But Didn't Know.

Everybody knows that the genuine all-wool-and-yard-wide democracy of New Hampshire is that which is taught by the People and Patriot at Concord. Papers like our neighbor the Times and the esteemed Foster's Democrat at Dover are not regarded as the genuine article if they differ from the utterances of the Central Journal, which has for its fountains of inspiration the wisdom of Hon. Harry Bingham and the broad, catholic prescience of Col. John H. Pearson. Just before the St. Louis convention the Patriot remarked sagely:

"Of all the silly campaign yarns in circulation at present, that to the effect that a concerted movement is now under way for the nomination of Hon. Allen G. Thurman of Ohio for vice-president on the democratic ticket is certainly the most senseless. Mr. Thurman is about seven-biliated by rheumatism. His acceptance of such a nomination is utterly out of the question."

Circumstances alter cases, and Mr. Thurman takes the nomination, while the Patriot takes the crow. The editor of the People and Patriot of course was presumed to speak by the card before the convention. But politics are rather uncertain. Perhaps Mr. Metcalf was not posted by Messrs. Jones, Sulloway and Connor before they left for St. Louis. The result in November will show that the estimate of the P. & P. may not have been very far from correct.

British Mercy to Irishmen.

The evidence in the case of Mr. Mandeville, member of parliament, who died in jail in Ireland while confined on a charge of violating the Irish crimes act, fully bears out the charge made in parliament that he was murdered by official brutality. At the inquest in Mitchellstown, on the 18th, Visiting Justice Moorhead deposed that Mr. Mandeville, while suffering from sore throat and diarrhœa, was put on punishment-diet, although his health was gradually declining. Justice Moorhead found Mr. Mandeville naked in his cell, he having been deprived of his clothing for twenty-four hours.

The democrats have imported 70,000 campaign buttons from England. They are a present from a foreign manufacturer who favors free trade.

Over 400 people are reported to have been killed by a volcanic eruption in Japan.

LADY—How do you manage to keep everything so clean and sweet?
SISTER—After much experimenting, we have decided that PYLE'S PEARLINE has no equal for all cleansing purposes. It is effective, economical, and perfectly harmless; we use it for everything, from the finest linens to the bare floors.
LADY—I always use PEARLINE at home, but I am particular and want everything as clean as possible.
SISTER—We have to be doubly particular—you know "cleanliness is next akin to godliness"—and we find that PEARLINE is the best thing with which to maintain perfect cleanliness.
PEARLINE is sold everywhere. Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

The Boston Globe says "Portsmouth will give new life to the New England league."

The Portsmouths first game in the New England league will take place on the South street ball field this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, with the Lynn club, the leader of the league record; and there should be a full attendance of lovers of the game, to give the boys a cheering send-off. Admission at this game twenty-five cents, for ladies fifteen cents; seats in grand stand, ten cents.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Mr. Allen and wife, of Newburyport, are visiting Mrs. Allen's sister, Mrs. John Knowlton of Chapel street.

Mrs. E. F. Colby of San Francisco, Cal., is visiting Mrs. Louis Green of Union street this city.

Rev. Lucius M. Hardy, formerly of this city, has accepted the principalship of Bishop Hopkins' school for girls at Burlington, Vt., a new institution which starts out with most flattering prospects.

Rev. W. E. Copeland, pastor of the Unitarian church at Omaha, Nebraska, is visiting Mr. James R. Connell and wife, of this city. Mr. Copeland is a native of Roxbury, Mass., and a graduate of Exeter and Harvard.

Dr. Gage and Associate Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor: A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to Dr. Gage's office, though he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

Mrs. B. F. WILSON,
Derry Depot, N. H.

Mrs. Orrin Webber, Bedford, N. H., a cripple and on crutches 14 years with terrible ulcers on her limbs; soundly cured.—Geo. H. Stevens, North Lyndeboro, N. H., cured of terrible burning and itching humor which covered the entire body.—Mrs. Wm. K. Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.—Oliver Febren, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.—C. L. Buffum, North Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.—Isaac Buttrick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of disturbing ears and deafness.—Mrs. A. L. Colby, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.—Mrs. L. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs; cured.—Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.—Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st., Manchester, N. H., blindness cured.—Dr. Levi B. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the Doctor did not see him.—Thomas Tuke, Levi Burt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.—Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 9 years with others.—Son of W. B. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.—G. Ambrose, No. Londonderry, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

Exeter, Gorham hall, Monday, July 30th; Newmarket, Silver's hotel, Tuesday, July 31st; Farmington, Wilson house, Wednesday, Aug. 1st; Rochester, Dodge's hotel, Thursday, Aug. 2d, until noon; Great Falls hotel, Thursday, Aug. 2d, afternoon.

Three boys, of twelve who deserted from the United States training-ship Portsmouth, lying at this navy yard, were arrested in Everett, Mass., on the 17th inst. and taken to the Charlestown navy yard.

Ex-Alderman Cook of ward four expresses himself as a determined opponent to the re-election of President Cleveland.

The liberal democrats of Portsmouth do not intend to vote at all at the next municipal election, but they are intending to "hire a hall" to support the election of Harrison and Morton.

Hon. John J. Bell of Exeter has been invited to deliver the oration at the 250th anniversary of the settlement of Hampton, which will be celebrated on the 15th of August.

John C. Wilson of Boston has assigned to the Municipal Signal company of this city his patent for a signal apparatus.

The adjourned session of the law term of the Supreme court is to be held in Concord to-day.

The annual meeting of the Portsmouth Co. will be held at South Berwick on the 27th inst.

The war ships Richmond, Galena and Ossipee sailed from New London, Conn., July 18th, for Newport.

Miss M. F. Bickford will in a few weeks reopen her store, having taken rooms over Mrs. A. C. Fonda's store on Market street.

The annual meeting of the Lake Shore Railroad corporation was held at Laconia on the 18th, and directors chosen as follows: Charles A. Busiel, Charles E. Tilton, Hiram Hall, Frank W. Rollins, John Kimball, Amos L. Rollins and Samuel C. Clark. The directors organized with the choice of Charles A. Busiel of Laconia president, and Frank S. Streeter of Concord clerk. The subscription list was read, and shows $250,000 of stock subscribed for.

The southern democrats contest, inch by inch, the payment of the French spoliations claims, of course. They compelled Frank Pierce to veto a measure providing for their payment; and the south is still in the saddle.

It is rumored, and with a good deal of positiveness, that a large number of men will soon be called upon the navy yard to work—until election, after which they will have to go into winter quarters and live upon their meagre savings until the snow melts again. All that have been warned are New Hampshire men, as it is thought by the reform managers that there may be a possibility of administration gains enough to carry this state, or at least to keep prossession of the first congressional district, while the state of Maine and the first congressional district of that state are conceded to be hopeless save for Harrison and Reed. One democratic laboring man says, "If I have to be bought, I prefer to wait until election day, and get $40 in cash for my vote." It is understood that all candidates for employment on the yard have to make application to the clerk of a business man of this city. If the applicant is a "doubtful" man politically he is accepted, but if he is put down in the ward canvass as a sure democrat there is no place for him. WIREPULLER.

In York county, Me., it is reported that the democrats are somewhat indisposed to vote at all at the approaching state election, at least not against the local officers. But they are nearly unanimous in speaking against the so-called democratic nominees on the national ticket, however they may vote when November comes.

Mr. Nelson Main of Beech Ridge, York, was in this city on Thursday, and reported twenty-five cases of measles among the children of his neighborhood.

The Sunday school of the Pearl street church had a picnic at Kittery Point on the 18th inst.

The Broadway Sunday school of Dover had their annual picnic on Wednesday, July 18th, at Rosemary Cottage in Eliot, going and returning in barges.

A movement is on foot to have the annual celebration and illumination at Rockaway Beach, Long Island, on August 26th, 27th and 28th, under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias, Knights of Honor, Knights of Labor, Royal Arcanum, Odd Fellows, Mechanics, Foresters, Druids, Red Men, Pythian Sisters, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Knights of Malta, Knights of Pythias of Malta, Knights of Pythias of Temperance, Knights of Pythias of Industry, Knights of Pythias of Honor, Knights of Pythias of Charity, Knights of Pythias of Benevolence, Knights of Pythias of Peace, Knights of Pythias of Liberty, Knights of Pythias of Equity, Knights of Pythias of Truth, Knights of Pythias of Faith, Knights of Pythias of Hope, Knights of Pythias of Justice

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Try the Buttermilk Cure.

Through the simplest remedies relief comes, and the new methods of medicating a patient by food chiefly are carrying out this formula in Gen. Sheridan's case. Lactic acid, which is not far off from the beverage commonly termed buttermilk, has been doing peptic wonders, it is announced. A good many people who are "out of sorts" with liver troubles might try the buttermilk cure direct without waiting for an illness to have it prescribed for them. Especially old people and worn out people frequently find a fountain of youth in the churn's surplus.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a bilious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

It Is Not Best

To always believe everything that a person tells you, but when you hear that the best blood purifier is Sulphur Bitters, you can believe it, for they cured me of a severe case of blood poisoning.—Rev. A. Fairchild, New York City.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

Miss Gertrude Whitney, a young and highly respected lady of Stoneham, Mass., employed in the Boston post-office as type-writer, left the office on Saturday, the 14th inst., ostensibly to visit her home to pass Sunday, and up to the 19th no trace of her had been found after she left the building.

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. OPERATION FOR HARELIP.

Performed Upon a Child of Four Months. A Surgical Success.

There is at present under treatment at the Roosevelt hospital a child not quite 4 months of age, who has been the subject of a very difficult and delicate surgical operation, in spite of which he still lives and seems to enjoy life. The child's parents had been married ten years before his birth, and his mother had given birth to three other children who were in no way deformed. A strange circumstance to which the harelip may have been due is that three months before the child's birth its mother discovered for the first time that its father had been born with both harelip and cleft palate, and that he had been successfully operated on while an infant for the former, the scars of which operation were totally hid by his heavy mustache, while for the latter he wore a false palate with several teeth in his mouth. So perfect had been the work of the surgeon and dentist in his case, that it would never have been known by any one had he not, on the occasion of his wife's discovery, had a severe toothache, which had made the removal of the false teeth necessary. Very unwisely he then told her that he and two of his brothers had been born with harelip and cleft palate. Being a nervous woman and in a peculiar state of mind, she took a notion that her child would have the same deformity as its father. The idea haunted her, and in some way it seems to have affected the infant's development. When it was born she saw at the first glance that the baby had harelip. The child was unable to take food in the way it should have. It could not nurse. Food had to be given by the spoonful, and the result was that the infant suffered for proper and sufficient nourishment. At last it was evident that heroic measures must be resorted to or the child would die.

At first the mother would not consent to an operation, but she did at last, and on May 24 Dr. McBurney performed it in the operating room of the hospital. Ether was given the little patient in such quantities as was safe for one so young, and, that no evil consequences might result from its struggles if pain should be felt in spite of the anæsthetic, the patient was put into a tight fitting rubber bag, which was closed around its neck. The surgeon then, selecting a sharp curved bistoury, or knife with a pointed blade, commenced the operation. The malformation to be corrected as the first step was to close the broad fissure which, like the letter A, divided the upper lip. The next step was to dissect the flesh, muscle and all, from the bone beneath on both sides of the mouth for some little distance. A slight incision was then made from the left corner of the mouth in the direction of the ear, as the mouth was a little short on that side. An incision was now made from the left nostril directly into the flap on the right side, in the direction of the right corner of the mouth. This was planned so that it left a triangular vacancy, the apex of which triangle was midway between the center of the nose and mouth. The flap on the other side was now cut to fit this vacancy and drawn into it with silk sutures and carefully stitched. Stitches were then passed into the mucuous lining of the flaps in such a way as to evert it and bring sufficient to the outside along the lower border to form the vermilion border of the lip. The fissure in the cheek was then sutured together carefully and the external operation was finished.

It now remained for the surgeon to bring the bony roof of the mouth together in the middle, by which means it was hoped that the fissured palate could be closed and the patient saved the inconvenience of being obliged to use an artificial set of teeth and mouth roof like his father's. With a sharp knife the surgeon incised the soft mucuous membrane on both sides of the fissure, and, taking care not to wound the blood vessels, raised the periosteal membrane from the bony wall of the cavity beneath, and uniting this flap from each side in the middle of the fissure, thus formed a periosteal tent over the mouth, for the protection of which against the tongue's action he put a thin silver plate, made for the occasion, in the mouth under said tent. At the interior end of the fissure he united the two parts of the soft palate, thus forming a good palate and completely closing the cleft.

The periosteal membrane above referred to has the property of forming new bone, which is deposited on its inner side. It forms the outer or hard layer of all bones, and its finely ramifying blood vessels supply the outer layer of all bones with nourishment. It is expected that a bony roof will grow over the tent of periosteum that was made to close the fissure. When this bony roof is formed the silver guard will be taken from the child's mouth, where it must remain until then.

The little patient is rapidly recovering from the effects of the operation. The wounds are all healed with the exception of that in the hard palate, and a firm, bony arch is forming over the roof of the mouth. The child's own mother scarcely recognized it after the first bandages were removed. In a few days the little one will leave the hospital cured.—New York Cor. Globe-Democrat.

A Plant That Catches Flies.

One sees many curious things in nature, and nowhere is there anything stranger to be found than among certain species of the vegetable kingdom. There is to be seen in the yard of C. L. Stilson a flowering curiosity. It is what is known as a black lily. When it first blooms it is black, but gradually fades to a dark purple. It is bulbous, the same as other members of the genus lileicea. The flower is something of the shape of a calla, but much larger, being some sixteen inches across the top by ten inches in breadth. It is serrated around the edges. The pistil emanates from a pouch about ten inches in depth, and is itself some fifteen inches long by nearly an average width of an inch, and is perfectly black. But the most curious thing about the flower is its odor, and it has lots of that. It is extremely offensive, smelling like the decaying carcass of a horse or cow. Flies swarm about the flower. Attracted by the odor, they find their way into the pouch from which the pistil comes, and once down in there they never get out. It is really worth a visit to see it.—Chico (Cal.) Record.

CAUGHT BY SUN FLASHES.

Use of the Heliograph in Gen. Miles' Apache Campaign.

At this stage of the campaign Gen. Miles decided to make use of the signal service, and to this end requested the chief signal officer to provide him with a detail of men from the corps to report to the commanding general of the department of Arizona for military signal duty in the field. Signal stations were located on the highest peaks along the line of communication. Each station was equipped with from two to four operators, according to the amount of business which passed through it. In addition to these operators there were lookout men who swept the surrounding country and neighboring peaks with powerful field glasses. While on duty operators and lookout men were guarded by a detachment of infantry, the numerical strength of which depended upon the location of the station, having reference to its liability to attack by hostiles.

Messages were transmitted from peak to peak and down into the valleys by what is known as the heliographic system of signals. The heliograph, or sun writer, consists of an arrangement of mirrors mounted on a tripod, and so adjusted as to enable the operator to throw a flash of reflected sunlight on a distant point with mathematical exactness. In making signals long and short sun flashes take the place of the "dots" and "dashes" of the magnetic sounder, the same call being used for both instruments. In a clear atmosphere signals made by this instrument can be easily read by the naked eye at a distance of eighty miles, and by an expert operator at the rate of fifteen words per minute.

To and fro across the valleys and lower mountain ranges flitted the messages which told of the recent whereabouts of the hostiles, and close upon the heels of those messages came others ordering the troops in pursuit.

I presume it would be a difficult task to try to imagine the surprise that the Indians felt when they suddenly saw that they could not move without finding that almost immediately their trail would be cut by scouting cavalry. They saw the light of the heliograph flashing across the valleys, but they did not at first comprehend its true significance. At last they began to associate those flashes with the fact that they were constantly being pressed and harassed, and within two weeks from the date of the establishment of the heliograph they fled southward across the Sonora border, there to remain until chased back again by Capt. Lawton to the place of surrender.

For nearly two months following the flight of the hostiles into Mexico not a sound came back from the shadows of the Sierra Madres, into whose depths pursued and pursuers had disappeared. At last, on a scorching hot morning near the close of August, a Mexican courier galloped into Bisbee—a mining town near the border—with the intelligence that Geronimo and band were in the mountains about twelve miles from Fronteras, Mex., wishing to treat with the authorities of Sonora.

There was a heliograph station at Bisbee, and the information furnished by the "Greaser" was flashed promptly to Fort Bowie, seventy-five miles away. Within two hours from the time of the arrival of the Mexican courier at Bisbee five troops of cavalry were making forced marches on Fronteras. When Geronimo had escaped from the net that the United States troops sought to weave around him at Fronteras, and was flying eastward, pursued by all the cavalry in the field, a whisper passed along the line that negotiations had been opened looking to the surrender of the hostiles. Consequently all signal men were on the tiptoe of expectancy.

One evening, about the 1st of August, the operators at a station in the Swiss-helm mountains were nodding lazily under the shelter of their tent fly, when suddenly from the highest peak in the Chiricahua range came the flash of a heliograph, and the following message was received:

"Send a buckboard to meet me at Scott White's ranch. I shall be in Bowe to-night, and shall bring some Indians with me."

This is the modest manner in which Gen. Miles announced the surrender of Geronimo. That the employment of the heliograph was a most important factor in bringing the campaign to a speedy and successful issue is generally conceded.—Sergt. Whitney in Louisville Courier-Journal.

The King and the Peasant.

A King who Prided Himself on his Wisdom, Honesty and Kindly Rule, got Separated from his Suite one day while Hunting, and after Wandering about for a long time, came upon a Peasant working in the Field. Passing himself off as a Hunter, the King observed:

"You have planted but a small Crop this season. What is the Cause?"

"Because Taxes are so Onerous that I cannot Afford to rent more Land."

"I see that your Cabin is out of Repair?"

"Yes, the King, in his Wisdom, has Decreed that I shall put in all my Spare Hours on the Public Highway."

"Your Cattle look thin."

"Yes; in his kindly Rule the King Permits his Soldiers to Impress them."

"You appear to have been ill?"

"So I have. Our Honest King's Tax Collector threw me into a Dungeon because I could not Pay more Promptly."

"And suppose I should tell you that I am the King himself!" queried the Monarch.

"Alas! sir, that would complete my Misfortunes! You could have come only to Rob me of what Little I have left!"

Moral: The King handed the Peasant his Purse, of course, and rode away with some new Ideas in his head—only he didn't! He sent a Guard out to Arrest and Imprison him, Confiscated his Land, and Issued an Edict that all Kickers were to be treated as Foreign Invaders.—Detroit Free Press.

After His Pocketbook.

Wife—I mended the hole in your trousers pocket last night after you had gone to bed, John, dear. Now, am I not a thoughtful little wife?

Husband (dubiously)—Well-ye-es, you are thoughtful enough, my dear, but how the mischief did you discover that there was a hole in my trousers pocket? —New York Sun.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The President as a Composer.

When it comes to copying out suggestions from the pension office, concerning rejected claims that have sought congressional aid, and putting the stamp of a veto upon the manuscript, Mr. Cleveland can distance all his predecessors; but when he attempts to write a letter of acceptance which will in some degree undo the unmistakable effects upon his political fortunes caused by the tariff manifesto, the president is decidedly clumsy. The truth is, as a prominent democrat remarked recently, "the old man insists upon writing his own letters. We could fix something that would do the business, but he will not submit to it."

The president is noted for a characteristic which some of his friends, when speaking for effect denominate "Jacksonian firmness," but which, privately mentioned and whispered in the ear, is designated as blamed obstinacy. In the meantime the letters which the Second Jackson has composed have not been acceptable to the men who have headed the subscription list of the campaign fund. At a meeting of the committee in New York on Tuesday night. Arthur Sewall and A. W. Sulloway convincingly demonstrated to Col. Lamont that this thing had gone far enough, and the president must permit a proper letter to be written for him or the consequences might be disastrous.

A Shot That Told.

The affair in the United States Senate between the senator from New Hampshire, Mr. Blair, and the senator from South Carolina, Mr. Butler, does not seem to have impressed the country as it would have done in other days. Undoubtedly in all parts of our country the practice of duelling is not only contrary to law but against the tastes and habits of our people. There are, however, men of sincere convictions who do not propose to be bulled or browbeaten or have their section reviled or their principles assailed without putting a stop to the to have done most effectually in the encounter in the senate chamber with the member from South Carolina. Butler had in a heated, overbearing and "plantation" manner charged that in attacking Mr. Cleveland when absent, he, Blair, was guilty of "cowardice." This was too much for an old soldier who had been riddled with rebel bullets, and in a calm, slow way that hushed every voice in the chamber, Senator Blair took occasion to say, "that he had never been a traitor, and did not owe his life to the mercy of his country, and that so far as personal courage was concerned, if it was questioned he was ready to prove it anywhere outside the senate chamber." That the reply was effective is quite evident, and it is time that any attempt at revival of the insulting style of debate so familiar in the old doughface days should be stamped out at the first appearance. This Senator Blair appears to have done.—Traveller.

At the caucus of republican legislators in Albany, N. Y., Wednesday, the 18th inst., Mr. Savery, a member from Auburn, produced a box of American flags three by five inches in size, with "Harrison and Morton" printed upon them. He said: "I present these badges to the members of this caucus. They were woven out of American silk on American looms by American workmen. I will match them against the free-trade Cleveland badges, woven in Coventry, England, and sent over by the Cobden club for the democratic clubs of this country to sell." The caucus gave three rousing cheers for the republican candidates and American institutions and interests.

Daniel Laird, recently dismissed from his position as receiver of provisions at the Brooklyn navy yard, has been arrested, charged with defrauding the government by furnishing wrong samples to certain bidders for supplies, thereby causing them to name higher prices than the favored persons to whom the bids were awarded, and who thus were able to furnish inferior goods at an exorbitant price by reason of lack of competition. Laird says that he acted under authority, and threatens to implicate his superior officers. This is a reform administration, and the Brooklyn yard has received special attention from Secretary Whitney and the other New York democratic politicians in order that the reform may be most effective in aid of Cleveland's re-election and the advancement of British free trade schemes. Hence it is not proper for any republican paper to make any such howl about "corruption" as the democratic papers would have made were the administration of the yard in other hands than those of their own party.

Wm. Cleveland Cox, a New York lawyer, and said to be a relative of the president, was in court recently on a charge of threatening to kill C. E. Anderson, a jewelry drummer. The trouble grew out of Anderson's attentions to the divorced wife of Cox. The lady was formerly Anderson's wife, and sang in McCaull's opera troupe under the name of Alice Gleason. After getting a divorce from Anderson, she married Cox; and since her divorce from Cox she has again smiled on Anderson, much to the chagrin of Cox, who is trying to regain her affections.

Fanny Davenport, the actress, has been granted an absolute divorce from her husband, Edwin H. Price, and it is rumored will soon marry W. M. McDowell, who played in her theatrical company last season. Mr. Price seems to get unmarried reasonably often, his last previous wife having procured a divorce on account of his attentions to Miss Davenport.

The Troy (N. Y.) Times prints interviews with seven leading manufacturers of Cohoes, all of whom have hitherto been democrats, but are now Harrison and Morton men on the protection issue.

The democratic candidate for governor of Illinois, John M. Palmer, announces his purpose to make his campaign solely on state issues. The republicans will probably convince him that national affairs need a little attention as well.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D.

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. The Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. H. A. MOTT, PH. D.

"The Royal Baking Powder is purest in quality and highest in strength of any baking powder of which I have knowledge. WM. MCMURTRIE, Ph.D.

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE.—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, besides affording the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a comparatively high degree of strength, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous

Took His Own Medicine.

About six months ago Wash Middleton, the most noted outlaw of southern Missouri and northern Arkansas, escaped from jail at Neosho, Ohio, after being sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary for murder. He was pursued by two officers, both of whom he killed. A reward was offered for him, dead or alive. Henry Small of Springfield, Ark., met Middleton at a picnic at New Jersey, Ark., July 16th, and ordered him to throw up his hands. Middleton tried to draw his revolver, but Small was too quick, and the outlaw fell dead with a bullet through his brain.

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Slightly cooler, fair weather, northwesterly winds.

BASE BALL.

A despatch of the 19th from Lowell, Mass., to the Boston Globe, says: "Manager Shaw of the Lowells, who returned from Dover, N. H., to-night, reports that town the hottest spot for baseball he has struck in this New England travels. The directors of the present Dover team dislike the position they are placed in by the disbandment of the Inter-state league, and their inability to secure a team to defeat Portsmouth. They made an offer to Manager Shaw of nearly $1500 for the Lowell team to play all their schedule games in that town, and would not ask for the franchise. He is willing to allow the Lowell team to go there for the remainder of the season for $2000. He denied the rumor in Lowell that other players would be released to reduce expenses. A stockholder of the Lowell club said tonight that if the Dover offer was presented at a meeting he would vote to accept $1500, which he understood was the highest offer of the Dover directors, and prepare for next season, when business will be better and patronage in Lowell larger."

The Dover base ball association on Thursday evening voted to disband the club, which was about all that could be done, no other club being left in the Interstate league. The players were paid off on Friday, and all bills against the association are called for. It is said the association has lost $1500 this season; the club put in the field has played good ball, but has not received the public encouragement merited.

The first game of the Portsmouth club in the New England League series was placed on the South street grounds Friday afternoon, with the Lynns. The game was interesting and exciting throughout, and the audience testified appreciation of every good play by generous applause. The home team played a brilliant game, the features of which were the base running of Leighton, the batting and fielding of Canavan, and the battery work of Willis and Kittredge. The grounds, owing to the morning's rain, were in bad condition, and the threatening look of the weather in the afternoon no doubt kept many persons away from the field. The attendance was 700. SUPREME COURT—LAW TERM.

The session of the law term of in Supreme court, at Concord on Friday, was attended by about fifty members of the bar from various counties.

On the Rockingham docket the case of deRochemont vs. Boston & Maine railroad, concerning plaintiff's right to a landing on the river, the court held that after deRochemont's conveyance he could have no right of action against the railroad. Judgment was rendered for the defendant.

Cases State vs. Pennoyer and State vs. Hinman were continued.

FRIDAY, July 20th.

John Collins, Albert Moore and John Gilligan, for drunkenness, were each assessed $9.90, fine and costs.

John Condon, for drunkenness, was given sixty days at Brentwood, costs being taxed at $6.90, fine and costs.

Walter Proctor, also charged with drunkenness, was allowed to go on probation

Dr. Gage and Associate Physicians, and Their Great Work.

Probably no physician in New England is better and more favorably known, says a New Hampshire exchange, than is Dr. Gage, the gifted specialist, who has treated more than fifteen thousand patients in this state, the announcement of his visits each month being the signal for a grand rally of a multitude of invalids. His success is indeed phenomenal and the reports of marvellous cures would fill this entire paper, the like of which was never known in the history of medical practice. The following is a fair sample:

Mr. Editor: A few months ago my daughter was laying at the point of death. She had a complication of troubles, a terrible cough, raising an immense quantity, a discharging sore upon her hip which rendered her perfectly helpless. Our family physician gave us no hope, but with a mother's will and determination to save her perishing child if possible, I hastened to consult Dr. Gage. Although he did not see her he nevertheless understood the case and his remedies have wrought a miracle—almost—by restoring my child to perfect health. I thank God that I consulted Dr. Gage.

Mrs. B. F. WILSON,
Derry Depot, N. H.

Mrs. Orrin Webber, Bedford, N. H., a cripple and on crutches 14 years with terrible ulcers on her limbs; soundly cured.—Geo. H. Stevens, North Lyndeboro, N. H., cured of terrible burning and itching humor which covered the entire body.—Mrs. Wm. E. Russ, North Hartland, Vt., given up by counsel, with a large ovarian tumor, heart disease and dropsy; perfectly cured and tumor disappeared. Doctor did not see her.—Oliver Peirce, Concord, N. H., wife cured of ovarian and female difficulties after she had been made worse by the usual treatment.—C. L. Buffum, North Monroe, helpless with spinal disease, involving liver, kidneys and bladder; perfectly cured and the Doctor did not see him.—Isaac Buttrick, Londonderry, N. H., son cured of discharging ears and deafness.—Mrs. A. L. Colby, West Andover, N. H., given up in the last stage of consumption; is now well.—Mrs. L. A. Sawyer, Keene, N. H., terrible bleeding from lungs; cured.—Amos Young, Derry Depot, N. H., catarrh had eaten a hole through roof of mouth; cured.—Miss Lizzie Williams, 76 Blodgett st., Manchester, N. H., blindness cured.—Dr. Levi B. Dodge, Waterford, Vt., kidney disease with frightful hemorrhages; given up by counsel; cured, and the Doctor did not see him.—Thomas Tuke, Levi Burt, Littleton, N. H., and hundreds of other cases, cured of nervous debility in its various stages.—Mrs. J. E. Fields, Milford, N. H., cured of a complication of female difficulties after she had doctored 9 years with others.—Son of W. H. Hill, Pittsfield, N. H., was a most terrible case of heart disease, dropsy and epileptic fits; got well, went to work and has not had a fit for two years.—G. Ambrose, No. Londonderry, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. C. Hall, Boscawen, N. H., cured of cancer.—C. B. Marshall, Nashua, N. H., son cured of epileptic fits.

ADAM FOREPAUGH, JR.

The Famous Animal Trainer, 30-Horse Rider, and Equestrian Director.

No one has ever attained such amazing results in the training of wild animals as Adam Forepaugh, Jr., the only son of the proprietor of the show bearing his name. Adam fils was not obliged to adopt the profession of animal training from necessity, for his father is a more than millionaire, and always strenuously objected to his son following the calling in which he has acquired world-wide fame.

Young Forepaugh has just turned his twenty-seventh year, and in the comparatively few years he has devoted to the education of animals, he has never failed in teaching any of his brute pupils, no matter how large or how small, how savage or how stupid, to perform the acts he desired to have them do.

His first success, when a mere boy, was to train that wicked old elephant, "Romeo," (now dead,) to execute a variety of tricks. His next achievement consisted in the training of a dozen elephants to form a lofty pyramid; then he selected eight of the intelligent creatures and taught them to dance a quadrille; one was instructed in the science of pugilism and another taught a pantomimic act, and a sextette of these large brutes were formed into an elephant band and educated to play with amazing skill upon a variety of musical instruments.

Young Forepaugh has trained dogs to perform nearly all the acts done by human acrobats, and in educating equines, subduing and training lions, tigers and other animals he has had no rival.

His success in teaching the horse "Blondin," not long since, to traverse a tight rope, was considered the acme of animal training; but his latest and greatest triumph is the teaching of the horse "Eclipse" to perform upon the flying trapeze in the same manner as the trained gymnast in the circus leaps from swing to swing, high in mid-air.

All of Adam, Jr.'s, sensational specialties, including his remarkable thirty-horse act, will be presented in Portsmouth on the occasion of the exhibition of the combined Forepaugh and "Wild West" shows, on Friday, July 27th.

ACCIDENTAL.

The body of a man supposed to be Peter Morris, a watchman in Forepaugh's circus, was found near Staples' overhead bridge at Eliot on Thursday morning about eight o'clock by Mr. Staples, with the legs cut off, the skull cracked and shoulders and body badly bruised. It is supposed the man was standing on the top of the cars on the first section and was struck in the back of the head by the bridge, knocked down between the cars, and passed over by the different sections, as hair was found on the bridge, and the body was terribly mutilated. The Coroner took the remains to the city for Biddeford about six o'clock Thursday morning, and the accident must have happened about 6:30.

On Wednesday evening, the 18th inst., Charles W. Eastman, a young farmer of Exeter, was passing over a farm crossing from a field where he had been raking hay to his house, when a "wild" engine struck him, instantly killing him and the horse. He leaves a wife and five children.

A Frenchman employed at Phelix's brickyard in Dover was fatally injured, July 18th, by the falling upon him of part of a kiln as he was passing it.

PERSONAL.

A. A. Knowlton, Esq., wife and child, left Portsmouth on Friday afternoon, to go on board the steamship Pavonia, which sails for England from Boston this morning. Their present designation is Heidelberg, Germany, where they will pass a few months, intending ultimately to go to Berlin, where Mr. Knowlton intends entering upon an advanced course of study at the university for two years. Capt. John G. Moses accompanies them as far as England. Mrs. Moses starts on the Raymond & Whitcomb excursion from Boston for Minnesota, Monday, to be absent a few weeks.

Mrs. Joseph D. Ackerman of Everett, Mass., is visiting Mrs. Valentine Hett of this city.

Mr. Joseph H. Emery, who has resided at the far south most of the time for several years, is visiting his relatives and friends in Portsmouth.

Mrs. John S. Tarr and Mrs. Fannie B. Bradley, of Lynn, Mass., are guests of Mrs. John H. Wells, of Islington street.

Another disastrous result of the continued cold weather; the price of coal has advanced fifty cents per ton.

Livery men and owners of private stables will do well to ask the price of lubricating Castor Oil at Preston's.

Mr. George W. Peirce, a former proprietor of the Rockingham house, Portsmouth, and of the old Sagamore house at Frost's point, Rye, a lifelong democrat, now residing in retirement on his farm on the seacoast of Rye, announces his intention of not voting at all at the coming presidential election.

We are always pleased to see our brethren of the press make use of items or editorials from our columns, and are wholly indifferent as to whether they mention us in connection with them, or not; hence Bro. Foster, of the Dover Democrat, will see that we are not eager to be credited with the authorship of other papers' productions. In the base-ball notes of the Democrat of July 19th we notice that the Chronicle is credited with several items which, if they ever appeared in our columns, got there without our knowledge, and got out again in the same surreptitious manner.

On our 2d page to-day will be found a striking and instructive illustration of the comparative worth of the various kinds of baking powders now in the market.

Mayor Hodgdon has not yet announced his intentions in regard to the presidential campaign, but the liberal democrats hope to have his company and sage counsel, as he has generally acted with them. He is one of the most popular chief magistrates the city has ever had, and his legal lore is such that he is able to act independently in this or any other city.

A horse mackerel six feet long and weighing about seven hundred pounds was caught in a net off Whale's-back on Friday morning by W. B. Chisolm of Cleveland, Ohio, a guest at the Hotel Wentworth, Newcastle. It took the combined efforts of seven men to kill him, and after they finally succeeded in conquering him they took him to the Wentworth house landing, where he afforded a curiosity to all guests, many of whom had never seen one before.

Mr. F. R. Thomas of Boston, a guest at Appledore, landed a sixty-pound cod on the 16th inst.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Safe, pleasant, and certain in their action," is the concise testimony of Dr. George E. Walker, of Martinsville, Virginia.

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or care that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

HOW BOTTLES ARE WASHED.

The Old Fashioned Methods No Longer Employed—New Processes.

It is said that physicians of Elizabeth, N. J., have attributed the death of a prominent Son of Temperance of that city to lead poisoning, caused by drinking temperance beverages out of bottles which have been cleansed by the use of shot. The theory is that the rattling of shot in the bottles has caused the lead from which the shot is made to adhere to the glass and subsequently to be taken up by the liquid when the bottles are refilled. There are probably a few old fashioned bottlers who clean not only temperance drink bottles, but also wine bottles, with shot; but that it not the practice in the latest approved bottling establishments. There is one in South Fifth avenue where 5,000 bottles are cleaned every day, and thoroughly cleaned without the use of shot.

Ordinary root beer and sarsaparilla bottles are easily cleaned, because the material used in them is readily and quickly soluble in cold water. The bottles are dumped, throat up, into a big tub of clean cold water, which is kept clean by constant replenishment. Each bottle is quickly filled and allowed to soak a short time. Then the cleaner grasps three or four bottles in his two hands, holding them throat up, and shakes them vigorously. That is sufficient to dislodge the sugary coating, and then the bottles are inverted and allowed to drain off. As they are made of transparent green glass, it is easy to see when they are clean. Care is taken to wash out any flies that have been sepulchered in the bottles in their search for sweet things. The old fashioned stone bottles that were formerly used for root beer have long been discarded, as too heavy and costly.

The cleaning of soda water bottles is more carefully done. Here warm water is used, and the workman manipulates a four pronged tool that looks like a fork. Each prong is mounted with a stiff blade of India rubber, of such shape that when the prong is thrust into the bottle the rubber blade reaches the inner side of the bottle. In front of the workman is a cocoa mat. The bottles are filled, the prongs thrust in, and then the four bottles at once are rolled across the mat. This serves a double purpose. The mat cleans the outside of the bottle, and the rolling brings the whole inside of the bottle in contact with the rubber blade. A few vigorous rolls cleans the bottle thoroughly, and then it is rinsed and ready for use.

Still another process is used for lager beer bottles, which require even more vigorous washing. This is done by a machine with revolving spindles, on which are placed rubber brushes. The bottle is thrust over the spindle, which is run by steam, and running water carries off the scum. Each bottle then gets a thorough internal scouring.

It is, in fact, an essential element of success in the bottling business to keep the bottles clean, and no manufacturer who expects to keep his custom would dare neglect the essential element of cleanliness. The element of cost prevents, if no other considerations could do so, the slow and tedious method of cleaning bottles with shot. There was a bottle washing machine in use here not long ago which cleansed bottles with revolving bristle brushes, but the wear and tear of bristles was found to be too expensive, although the work done was very effective. The substitution of rubber blades for the bristles proves to be cheaper and quite as thorough.

A much better way than the use of shot for cleaning bottles is to put a small piece of iron chain with small links into the bottles with some water. This, when rattled about, will clean a bottle well. Of course, if a bottle has been filled with any greasy substance, the only way to clean it thoroughly is with strong alkali, and this is done by all careful bottlers.—New York Sun.

The Heights of Clouds.

The cloud illumination caused by the electric lights of Detroit and Ypsilanti is occasionally so well defined in outline, as seen from the Ann Arbor observatory, that it occurred to the director to inaugurate a series of altitude measurements for the purpose of determining the heights of all forms of clouds visible at Ann Arbor after twilight.

The central portion of Detroit is about thirty-five miles from the observatory, while Ypsilanti is only fifty-eight miles distant. The azimuths of the two cities differ about 30 degs., so that the conditions for determining the heights of the upper and lower clouds can always be made favorable when the atmosphere is sufficiently transparent. When the clouds are very high, the Detroit illumination is so well defined that the probable error of a single measurement of an altitude is only a few minutes of arc. When the clouds are low, the nearer illumination is well defined and the farther one either invisible or coincident with the apparent horizon. The greatest and least heights recorded up to the present time are respectively 17,580 and 770 feet.—American Meteorological Journal.

Respirations and Pulse Beats.

The duty of a medical examination for a secret society is, indeed, a responsible one. It is observed that some examiners have favorite numbers, which they almost uniformly use in making known the number of respirations and the number of pulse beats. One examiner almost always represents the number of respirations to be nineteen, while another generally makes twenty as the number; another still clings with persistent tenacity to sixteen. Similar statements might truthfully be made concerning the number of pulse beats per minute. Some examiners seem fond of high and others of low figures. Some delight in making the standing pulse beat the same as the sitting pulse beat, while others make a wide difference in the pulse beats of these two attitudes. There seems to be no way of accounting for these uniformly favorite inclinations except that examiners do not in all cases, as they should, carefully and accurately count the respiratory movements and the pulse.—Physician in Globe-Democrat.

Russian Female Apothecaries.

The Russian government will permit women to become pharmaceutists if they pass the same examination to which men are subjected. Apothecaries receiving female pupils will not be allowed to receive males.—Frank Leslie's.

Ten Carloads of Potatoes.

The funniest thing in town is the mishap of a gentleman whose wife runs the store bill. He has been in the habit of having his cigar bill charged up as potatoes, and the other day his wife took her pencil and began to reckon. She finally found out that they had been whooping it up at a regular starch factory rate in potatoes. Why! they had eaten over ten carloads of potatoes this winter and the past year, and she just didn't believe that the account was right. The grocer and the smoker are just now between the upper and nether millstones, and it is hard to tell who will be pulverized the finest at the close.—Lewiston Journal.

"There's some sort of a telegraphic communication between a horse's mouth and his driver's hands," said an old [illegible] "I'll bet the best place to prove it is in front of a pulling locomotive. I've seen a horse that would prance and rear a little when the engine approached, but quiet down in a very few moments. I've seen that same horse with another driver get perfectly frantic—scared to death, you might say—and kick everything into kindling wood under exactly similar circumstances. The same thing has happened too often to be a mere coincidence. Why is it that two men of equal, or nearly equal, strength have an entirely different effect on a horse when holding the lines? There is certainly something in the touch of one man that isn't in the touch of the other. Confidence is inspired in one case, fear in the other. How is that feeling put in the horse's head unless it is telegraphed from the driver's hands?"—New York World.

A Household Remedy.—No family should be without some remedy for the cure of affections so universally prevalent as coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough and croup—some remedy, too, which can be relied on as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the article required.

The great iron lockout at Pittsburg, Pa., is practically ended, and a general resumption of business is quickly looked for.

I was troubled with catarrh for thirty years. Have suffered a great deal. My eyes, ears and throat were greatly affected. Mr. Kinney, the druggist, induced me to try Ely's Cream Balm and for the past two years have had very little trouble. I have lived in Webster, Mass., and Rockville, Conn. Very respectfully, J. W. Pratt, Monson, Mass.

I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity.—John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

Ladies Who Bloat.

What a great number there are; how uncomfortable it makes them; it is almost impossible for those afflicted to enjoy life. In my private practice I have always found Sulphur Bitters to be the best remedy. All who are thus troubled should use it.—Mrs. Dr. Childs, Boston.

John Zachar, the Racine, Wis., man who fasted fifty-three days to spite his father, will probably die. His stomach will retain no food.

Whether from swampy land or stagnant pool, or from the deadly gases of city sewers, malarial poisons are the same. Ayer's Ague Cure, taken according to directions, is a warranted specific for malarial disorders.

The senate has passed a bill to put Gen. John C. Fremont on the retired list of the army.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

Three boys were drowned while attending a church picnic at St. John, N. B., on the 18th.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Gen. Boulanger, the French statesmen, was on the 18th reported to be growing worse.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he won't use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. Of All Things in the World

A tonic is what nervous people require. To impart strength into the nervous organism is to insure its tranquility, provided causes of unhealthful excitement are avoided. A medicinal tonic that—like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—commands the unqualified sanction of the healing profession, and which institutes a general reform in a billious, dyspeptic and debilitated condition of the system, is surely entitled to a careful trial by intelligent people, capable of forming a due estimate of medicine, from emphatic and often recorded professional evidence in its behalf. Not only are the nerves and stomach invigorated by the Bitters, but the system is also endowed with unwonted power of resistance to influences in air, water or daily avocation subversive of health. Prominently dangerous among the first named of these is malaria, against which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords a competent safeguard. Rheumatism and kidney troubles are also prevented and overcome by it.

Bodily health and vigor may be maintained as easily in the heat of summer, as in winter months, if the blood is purified and vitalized with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has used this remedy has been greatly benefitted. Take it this month.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. WAITING ON A BIRD.

An Incident in the Life of Inventor Corliss—A Touch of Humanity.

The late Edward Corliss, of Providence, the inventor and manufacturer of the great Corliss engine, was a man who valued his business largely for the opportunities which it brought him of doing thoroughly and unpretentiously humane acts. Very many stories are told at Providence of his generosity to people in his employ, and especially of a way he had of coming to some employe or workman who looked ill or overworked, or who had complained of having a hard time, and saying to him, "Now, look here; you are not looking well. You had better go off somewhere for a rest of a few weeks, and I will take care of your family while you are gone." And the man was started off on a vacation of months, if months were needed, without any apprehension on his mind as to the needs of his family.

But other employers have done the same thing, no doubt, and the Listener would not have had occasion to note the matter if it had not been for the true story of another generous deed of Mr. Corliss', lately told him from a most authentic source, which is so exceptional, and so quite idyllic, that it merits special relation. More than that—it merits such a setting of incident as the story telling genius of a Hawthorne or a Hale would give it; but as the Listener can give it no such setting, and as, moreover, he has no right to do more than tell the tale just as it was told to him, he will narrate it in its simplest form:

Mr. Corliss, not very long before his death, had occasion to build an addition to his manufactory—a big "L," for additional machinery. To prepare the foundation for this L it was necessary to remove a ledge of rock by blasting. The men to do the work on the addition had been employed and put on the pay roll; the materials had been purchased and brought to the building, and the work of blasting had begun. The next morning Mr. Corliss passed by the place where work was proceeding, when the foreman in charge, knowing his interest in pretty things, called him.

"See here, Mr. Corliss," said he; "here is a bird's nest that we've found, and that's got to go."

He showed the manufacturer a robin sitting upon a nest that had been built, fast and snug, in a crevice of the rock, among some bushes that grew there. The bird flew off her nest as the men came near, and showed five blue eggs, that looked as if they had just been laid.

"Can we move that nest somewhere else?" asked Corliss.

"I'm afraid not, sir. We'd tear it to pieces getting it out, and it isn't at all likely that you could get the bird to go to sitting again anywhere else. We've got to go on, so we may as well rip it out and throw the eggs away."

"No," said Corliss. "We won't disturb her. Let her bring out her brood right there."

"But we'll have to stop the work on the building!"

"Let us stop it then."

And so orders were given that operations on the addition should be suspended. They were suspended; and the hands stood still, drawing their pay for doing nothing, or next to nothing, while the robin sat on her nest with her air of great consequence and zealous attention to business, and had her food brought her by her mate, and at last hatched her brood. And then there were three weeks more to go by, at the least, before the young ones could fly. Corliss visited the nest frequently, not with any uneasiness or impatience to have the robin and the young ones out of the way, but with a genuine interest in their growth. The old birds had all the time they wanted, and when at last they had sternly helped the clumsy, reluctant youngsters over the edge of the nest, and they showed themselves to be able to get about on their own hook, orders were given to resume the building operations; and the dull boom of the gunpowder, tearing the rocks apart, was heard where the birds had peeped.

It was an idle freak, a practical man would say, of a man who may have had more money than he knew what to do with. Perhaps it was a freak, but it was one of the sort of freaks that make the world better.—Boston Transcript "Listener."

The Potency of Facts.

A fact is always a fact, whatever may be the consequences. The question is, whether it is true; the student should recognize no other. Many of the facts encountered in our studies are obscure and hard to explain, but that does not prevent their being facts; or, at least, the chief question should be to learn whether they are facts. Besides, contradictory facts are the ferment of science. I once asked a distinguished man of science how a certain discovery he had made was getting on. "It is not getting on," he replied. "What is the matter with it?" I anxiously asked. "Why," he said, "I find no facts except those which are favorable to it; and," he added, "it takes contradictory facts to teach us," This is true. The theory will either explain the contradictory facts and be fortified by them, as the Newtonian theory has been by all the exceptions that have been opposed to it and which have entered into it; or it will be replaced by a vaster and more comprehensive theory. In both cases there is a gain for science, which would not have been obtained if we had hesitated, on account of vain scruples, to seek out and verify the facts in question.—Paul Janet in Popular Science Monthly.

Descendants of the Bounty Mutineers.

The queen has had yet another jubilee present sent to her. It appears that the inhabitants of Pitcairn island, having seen a notice of the numerous marks of loyalty and respect presented in 1887 to her majesty, were fired with an ambition to go and do likewise, and have sent her some straw hats of their own manufacture! They have also included some other straw work, manipulated with considerable skill. The islanders—it will be remembered that they are the descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty—now muster 112 persons, two-thirds being women. They use neither strong drink nor tobacco, money also being a thing they dispense with. The possession of which they are most proud is a

Jerusalem Built Over Ruins.

As the traveler walks on he perceives that his footsteps are not on the original ground of Jerusalem, but upon a mass of superimposed matter which has been strewn over the whole site. History enumerates seventeen captures of the holy city, eleven of which were attended by sieges more or less destructive. After many of these events the houses then standing were razed to the earth. These were in time succeeded by new houses, which in their turn were overthrown at the next siege, and so on, each capture adding to the accumulation of rubbish. Thus the traveler learns that a compact layer of solid coating, from thirty to fifty feet in thickness, has been by degrees spread over the entire space.

Even the valleys and ravines between the several hills on which the city was built have been so far filled up as to have partly lost their special character, as already mentioned. The Tyropheon brook is, perhaps, the most particular instance. The traveler will have heard of this brook, or read of it in Josephus, as a landmark in the interior of this city, but he will not find it. Nevertheless it was so deep that at its exit from the city at Moriah the bridge span was more than 100 feet above its bed. Its course has been traced by the discovery of the arch and by deep excavations here and there which have exposed the bed now overlaid with ruins.—"Palestine Illustrated."

Bismarck as a Swordsman.

The chancellor, while a student at Goettingin, by his skill and strength gained the reputation of being a crack swordsman. It is said that he challenged two students the very first day he came to Goettingen, and afterward defeated both, although they had had much experience. A very cunning trick, in escaping an attempt made by a "pedell," a university officer, to break up a fight, is credited to Bismarck. When he was at Jena on a visit, arrangements were made for him to fight a duel at Woellnitz, a small village. The "pedell"—Kahle by name—was very much disliked by the students, as he had often interrupted their fights. He had gotten knowledge thereof, and on the morning fixed for the fight had gone to Woellnitz and hid himself under a large barrel used in a brewery. He had placed the barrel in such a position that he could overlook the dueling place through the bunghole, intending to see all the fight and get the names of all principals.

Kahle's presence was noticed, however, by some peasants, and by Bismarck's suggestion the barrel was suddenly turned around so that the hole stood against the wall. Several students then seated themselves upon the barrel and remained there until all the fights had been finished, when the unlucky "pedell" was released from his prison and was heartily laughed at. It is a fact that Bismarck shortly afterward was ordered to leave the city by the university authorities.—Baltimore Sun.

More Text and Fewer Pictures.

The illustrations of a magazine form one of the largest items of the expense of its production; the elimination of this expense would enable the proprietors either to diminish the price of subscriptions, or to augment the payments to authors, or both; and either would be a benefit to literature. Again, under the present system, a large portion of the articles are written mainly to serve as a vehicle for the illustrations; without the illustrations, they would not be worth printing; consequently, if there were no illustrations, the articles would not be written, and their place would be supplied by articles that were worth printing—another gain to literature, and a gain both in quality and space. Indeed, a well illustrated article is very seldom read at all. The purchaser of the magazine looks at the pictures, and perhaps examines so much of the text as may enable him to form some idea of what the picture represents; he says to himself that he will read the article some other day, and before that day comes the next issue of the magazine has appeared, and the same thing is repeated. Were there no pictures, there would be an end of this.—Julian Hawthorne in Belford's Magazine.

Plague of Rats in China.

A plague of rats is reported in a recent number of The Pekin Gazette, which recalls the German legend of the rats of Hamelin. Certain postal routes have had to be changed in Outer Mongolia on account of the honeycombing of the whole country by myriads of rats, who have burrowed and eaten up the pasturage so extensively that the supply of food for camels and horses is greatly diminished, and the burrows are dangerous to all mounted travelers and couriers. The prize offered by the Australian government for a riddance of the rabbits which infest that country may afford a suggestion to the authorities in China to offer inducements which M. Pasteur or some unknown Whittington may find advantageous enough to undertake the task of ridding the country of these vermin. China and the Chinese have been afflicted enough of late, what with earthquakes, floods, restricted immigration, etc.—Demorest's Monthly.

A Marvel in Steel.

There are 150,000 miles of railway in the United States; 300,000 miles of rails—in length enough to make twelve steel girdles for the earth's circumference. This enormous length of rail is wonderful—we do not really grasp its significance. But the rail itself, the little section of steel, is an engineering feat. The change of its form from the curious and clumsy iron pear head of thirty years ago to the present refined section of steel is a scientific development. It has now a beam whose every dimension and curve and angle are exactly suited to the tremendous work it has to do. The loads it carries are enormous, the blows it receives are heavy and constant, but it carries the loads and bears the blows and does its duty. The locomotive and the modern passenger and freight cars are great achievements, and so is the little rail which carries them all.—John Bogart in Scribner's Magazine.

Mrs. Dart's Triplets.

President Cleveland's Prize for the three best babies at the Aurora County Fair, in 1887, was given to these triplets, Mollie, Ida, and Ray, children of Mrs. A. K. Dart, Hamburgh, N. Y. She writes: "Last August the little ones became very sick, and as I could get no other food that would agree with them, I commenced the use of Lactated Food. It helped them immediately, and they were soon as well as ever, and I consider it very largely due to the Food that they are now so well." Lactated Food is the best Food for bottle-fed babies. It keeps them well, and is better than medicine when they are sick. Three sizes: 25c., 50c., $1.00. At druggists. Cabinet photo. of these triplets sent free to the mother of any baby born this year.

It is Nature's Remedy, made exclusively from Roots and Herbs.

It is perfectly Harmless.

It is the only remedy known to the world that has ever yet Cured contagious Blood Poison in all its stages.

It cures Mercurial Rheumatism, Cancer, Scrofula, and other blood diseases heretofore considered incurable. It cures any disease caused from impure blood. It is now prescribed by thousands of the best physicians in the United States, as a tonic. We append the statement of a few:

"I have used S. S. S. on patients convalescing from fever and from measles with the best results. J. N. CHENEY, M. D., Ellaville, Ga."

BREMEN, GA.—Willie White was afflicted with scrofula seven years. I prescribed S. S. S., and to-day he is a fat and robust boy. O. W. PARKER, M. D.

RICHMOND, VA., Dec. 15, 1885.—I have taken three bottles of Swift's Specific for secondary blood poison. It acts much better than potash or any other remedy I have ever used. B. F. WINFIELD, M. D., Formerly of Sussex Co., Va.

DR. E. J. HALE, the well-known druggist and physician, of Nashville, Howard County, Ark., writes: "Having some knowledge as to what S. S. S. is composed of, I can safely recommend it as the remedy for all skin diseases, it matters not what the name may be."

We have a book giving a history of this wonderful remedy, and its cures, from all over the world, which will convince you that all we say is true, and which we will mail free on application. No family should be without it. We have another on Contagious Blood Poison, sent on same terms.

Write us a history of your case, and our physician will advise with you by letter, in strictest confidence. We will not deceive you knowingly.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Let's See It Pass the Republican Senate.

The Mills bill, providing protection for southern rice and sugar and free trade for northern wool, passed the house on Saturday by a vote of 162 to 149.

To Whom do the Public Schools Belong?

The Boston Pilot, the recognised Roman Catholic organ of New England, in its issue of last week publishes an article under the heading "Whose are they, anyway?" in which it says:

"Catholics must not interfere with our schools," says an esteemed Boston contemporary. Whose schools is he talking about? The population of Boston is half Catholic, and the children in the public schools of the city are nearly two-thirds Catholics. Their parents pay for the schools like other citizens. What schools are those that the Transcript refers to when it says that Catholics must have no interference with "our" schools?

The Pilot evidently thinks, with the Boston school board, that the public schools belong to the Catholic church, and are to be directed by the priesthood of that church, in its interest.

Yellow Fever in Florida.

The governor of Florida has asked for government assistance in suppressing the yellow fever which, he says, threatens to become epidemic at Tampa and Manatee. Secretary Fairchild has instructed Surgeon General Hamilton of the marine hospital bureau to render all possible aid.

Charles S. Higgins of Brooklyn, a prominent citizen and leading democrat, head of one of the largest soap manufacturing firms in the world, and a heavy contributor to the democratic campaign fund in years past, has come out squarely for Harrison and protection to American industries.

Southern rice is protected 100 per cent by the Mills bill. Northern wool is not protected at all. The democratic party opposes sectionalism.

NEWS AND NOTES.

W. E. Ellsworth of Springfield, Mass., one of the oldest and most highly esteemed conductors on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, has been caught in systematic stealing from the company, and confesses his guilt.

Trinity church, New York, has been fined $1000 under the contract labor law for importing Rev. E. Warren Walpole of England as its pastor. An appeal will be taken to the United States supreme court.

Dr. Ridley, medical officer at the jail of Tullamore, Ireland, where John Mandeville, the fellow prisoner of William O'Brien, died from starvation and inhuman treatment, killed himself on the 20th inst., rather than testify at the inquest.

Mrs. P. J. Tully of Macon, Georgia, twenty-two years old, went afiling on the Niagara river on the 19th inst., with W. H. Barber. The boat capsized, and Mrs. Tully was carried over the falls, the man being rescued by another boat. Mrs. Tully was called the handsomest brunette at Niagara.

The vicinity of St. Clairsville, Ohio, had a rain and wind storm on the 19th inst., which did damage to the amount of $100,000.

The supreme court of Massachusetts will decide as to the validity of the South Boston railway stock fraudently issued by Treasurer Reed, two judges having ruled differently on the question.

Fourteen lumbermen attempted while drunk to run the rapids of the Matawan river, Ontario, and were all drowned.

By the wreck of a construction train on the Mexican National railroad at Front, last week, fifteen men were killed.

Rev. E. P. Roe, the well known writer, died in Newburgh, N. Y., July 20th. He served all through the war for the Union on the right side.

Richard T. Sullivan of Boston has resigned as a member of the democratic state committee of Massacusetts, and will support Harrison and Morton.

The towboat Canary blew up at Westport, Ky., July 19th, killing nine men and wounding others.

New Hampshire Items.

The pension of A. W. Dame of Farmington has been increased from $32 to $96 per year. Mr. Dame enlisted at Dover in the 11th New Hampshire, and was wounded in the right arm in the battle at Poplar Spring church, Va., in September, 1864.

The selectmen of Newmarket have arranged to issue four per cent bonds to the amount of $14,000, as authorized by vote of the town March 20th. The entire loan has already been subscribed for by residents. The bonds are in the denominations of $500, $200 and $100.

Walter A. Shackley and Fred Terralt, Dover boys about fifteen years old, are held for the supreme court for breaking into a bakery on the night of July 19th.

The railroad commissioners have adjusted all land damages on the line of the Lake Shore railroad, and the work of constructing the line will be commenced about Aug. 1st.

In Chester, July 20th, the 15-months old child of George D. Rand was drowned by falling into a tub of water.

Daniel S. Harriman, a special policeman who has been very active in the liquor prosecutions in Manchester, was assaulted in the street last Friday by two young men, who got the best of him on the start, owing to their attack being unexpected, but took to their heels as soon as he got out his billy.

A girl sixteen years old, while at work in the bagging mill at Manchester on Wednesday of last week, suddenly fainted, and in a few minutes gave birth to a child. None of her associates in the mill had suspected her condition.

About two hundred citizens of York county have petitioned the governor and council of Maine for a pardon for Chas. E. Prescott, of Buxton, now in the state prison under a life sentence for the murder of one Williams in Portland. Prescott is said to be an inoffensive, and rather thick-witted fellow, while Williams was noted for a quarrelsome disposition; and many persons believed that Williams was killed in a fight in a Portland brothel, and that Prescott's only connection with the affair was the burying of the body.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

When They Leave Us,

The exodus of our bodily troubles is doubly welcome if their departure is unaccompanied by pain. It is the fault of the best of commendable cathartics, which act solely upon the bowels, that in operation they gripe and weaken these organs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters produce a laxative effect, but neither causes pain nor weaken the abdominal region or the stomach. This is pre-eminently the alterative which a constipated, billious or dyspeptic person should use, since a resort to it involves no bodily discomfort nor a violent reaction. The liver is aroused, the stomach benefitted, and the habit of body speedily and permanently improved by it. Fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney troubles are among the maladies for which recorded experience has proved it to be efficacious. It is a wholesome appetizer, and a far more reliable tranquillizer of the nerves than stomach-disturbing narcotices and sedatives.

Mrs. James T. Fields has a noble story in the August Wide Awake, entitled, "A Helping Hand."

If you wish to restore the bloom to your wasted cheek, and so improve your health that plumpness and strength will succed emaciation and debility, purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy will benefit you more surely and speedily than any other.

Henry Bacon has reproduced in black-and-white his famous painting, "The Boston Schoolboys and General Gage," now owned by Columbia college; the drawing accompanies Edward Everett Hale's serial, "The Story of Boston Common," and appears in the August Wide Awake.

The new cruiser Charleston, the first man-of-war ever built on the Pacific coast, was launched at San Francisco on the 19th inst.

The French fishing schooner Jeune Edouard was sunk on the banks by the German steamer Fulda, but all hands were saved by another vessel.

Revolution IN THE WASH TUB.

In the homes where PYLE'S PEARLINE is used the wash tub is no longer the fountain of drudgery, backaches, pains, sickness, bad temper and upset households. The rubbing and straining process of freeing the dirt wrecks the woman and the clothes, and, at the end of the wash day, life seems hardly worth living. Not so where PEARLINE does the work—that's just it, PEARLINE does the work for you—does it better and quicker, and without rubbing; hence, without the wear and tear to yourself or your clothes.

Warranted harmless. Millions use it. Sold everywhere. Beware of imitations. JAMES PYLE, New York.

BASE BALL.

League base ball in Dover is over for this season, it having been decided that the Lynn club will not go to Dover. The late Dover club played a benefit game with the Seavey's, an amateur club, on Saturday, and won it, sixteen to eight. The patronage was good enough to enable the disbanded players to pay their expenses home, and have something to spare.

The Portsmouth club, by winning the first game played in the New England league, in this city on Friday, took the head of the list, and remained there till Saturday, when the Worcester club beat them on the Worcesters' grounds, eighteen to five, the score by innings being as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Worcester	1	0	0	0	5	5	0	1	6	—18
Portsmouth	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	3	—5

Earned runs, Worcester 7, Portsmouth 1. Two base hits, Clare, Murray. Three base hits, Leighton, Meister. Stolen bases, Wheelock, Hamilton (2), Briggs, Canavan, Rudderham (3), Willis, Murray. First base on balls, by O'Connor, 3. First base on errors, Worcester 5, Portsmouth 3. Struck out, Clare, Daley, Leighton (2), McCaffery (2), Madigan (2). Passed balls, Briggs 1, Canavan 5. Wild pitch, O'Connor. Time, 2 hours 45 minutes. Umpires, William Downey and J. Coughlin.

This defeat dropped the Portsmouth club to a level with the Salems, making those clubs a tie for fourth place.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. John G. Tompson, Miss Grace Tompson and Miss Lizzie G. Tompson, of Newtonville, Mass., arrived in this city Saturday on a visit to Mrs. Tompson's sisters at Lincoln Hill cottage.

Mr. R. I. Walden was absent all last week on a trip along the coast in the mackerel seining schooner Agnes E. Downs, Levi Downs master, and had not returned up to Sunday night.

Mr. Charles Burroughs Wendell, formerly of this city, is passing a few days on a visit to Miss Susan Wendell of Pleasant street, his first visit to Portsmouth for twenty-four ysars. His present residence is New York.

Mr. Charles Ayers of Lyndonville, Vt., arrived in this city last week to pass a few days on a visit to his brother, Alderman Daniel J. Ayers.

Messrs. Howard D. Lowd and Percy I. Lowd, of New York, who have been visiting their relatives in this city for some weeks, started for home on Saturday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, going by way of Portland.

Mr. R. Hamilton Perkins, wife and daughter, of Chicopee, Mass., arrived in this city Saturday on a visit of several weeks.

Miss Bentley of Honesdale, Pa., is passing the summer with her cousin, Miss Anna Tracy of Miller avenue.

Mr. John Albee of Newcastle is passing a few days in visiting Rev. James DeNormandie and family at Roxbury, Mass. Mr. DeNormandie and family will go to Biddeford Pool on the 1st of August for a stay of six weeks.

Miss Rose Lamb, Miss Ellen Robbins, Ross Turner, and J. Appleton Brown and wife, of Boston, are among the artists now at Appledore. Mr. Ellerton L. Dorr and wife, Miss Dorr and Miss Elsie Dorr, of Beacon street, are also at Appledore.

Rev. A. P. Peabody, D. D., and daughters, of Cambridge, Mass., are at Campobello, where they arrived last week.

Mr. Jeff. C. Lewis of Kittery was in this city Saturday. Mr. Lewis is an old-fashioned democrat of the Jackson school. He said: "I guess Cleveland cannot be elected this time."

F. P. Kimball, a well known clothing dealer of Manchester, was in this city on Saturday on his way home to look after his business interests there. Mr. Kimball's family are located temporarily in a private cottage on the coast of York, where they have been very much invigorated in health. He was much pleased with the appearance of this city.

Judge Daniel Clark and wife, of Manchester, arrived at the Shoals last week on their annual visit there.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner J. R. Bodwell, Metcalf master, from Rondout arrived at this port on the 21st with coal to O. F. Philbrick & Co.

The schooner C. Mathews, Hardy master, from Port Johnson with coal to E. F. Sise & Co., arrived at this port on the 21st.

The fog on the river Sunday was thick enough to be sliced up into fencing material, and the Whale's-back horn was kept steadily going all through the day.

A little steam launch, the Dione, came down from Dover on Sunday with an intending fishing party of six or seven persons, but went back again without going outside the harbor, on account of the fog.

The schooner J. R. Bodwell, which arrived in the lower harbor on Friday afternoon from Rondout, N. Y., with coal, when off Cape Cod the previous night picked up the sloop boat Triton; her mast and sail were gone, bowsprit carried away at the stem, cabin doors stove in, and she was full of water. She was made fast astern with a long scope of towline. With the schooner going about eight knots the sloop would take an occasional dive, and be under water for many minutes at a time, but she was got into the lower harbor all right, and then hauled alongside and bailed out. She is an old sloop and has been retimbered.

McPhail of Boston is drafting a steam yacht for Laighton Brothers, of Appledore. She will be forty-six feet on the water line, fifty-five feet over all, eleven feet six inches beam, five feet six inches deep, and draw four feet six inches of water.

The fleet of the Eastern yacht club, which left Marblehead, Mass., July 14th for Bar Harbor, arrived at the Isles of Shoals on the 14th, and sailed from there on the 15th, did not arrive at Bar Harbor until the 21st, having put in at Portland, Boothbay, Seal Harbor, Rockland, North Haven and Green's Landing on the way, on account of fog; the entire course was only 190 miles.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The board of survey on the training ship Portsmouth, Comdr. Edwin White commanding, now lying at this navy yard, have reported that it will take a large amount of money to put her in good condition, and they therefore recommend that she be condemned.

In the naval appropriation bill, as reported to the senate by the committee on appropriations last week, was an amendment providing for $1100 salary for an assistant daughtsman at the Portsmouth navy yard.

Mr. Henry R. Billings of Kittery Point, for some time past captain of the watch, department of yards and docks, at this navy yard, has been removed by Secretary Whitney, and Mr. John C. Stevens of this city, baker, appointed in his place. Mr. Stevens went on duty Saturday. This secures two votes to the reform democracy, which otherwise they might and probably would have lost. If there is any one thing more distasteful than another to the democracy of Portsmouth, it is to have the navy yard run as a "vote factory." We speak by the record, for we heard their talk and read their newspaper articles against such an outrageous and corrupt practice, for twenty years.

Livery men and owners of private stables will do well to ask the price of lubricating Castor Oil at Preston's.

St. John's and Christ church Sunday schools are to have a lawn party on the grounds at Christ church on Wednesday afternoon from four o'clock to seven; if stormy then, the party will be held the next fair day.

The total eclipse of the moon on Sunday night was partly eclipsed in this city by the rainstorm and fog. But it was carried out according to programme, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather.

Street Commissioner Marshall last week commenced the work of repairing Water street, and is doing an excellent job, as far as he has got, grading up with crushed stone on top of the old cobblestone pavement.

The father of Peter Morris, the young man attached to Forepaugh's circus who was killed on the railroad in Eliot on Thursday morning of last week by striking an overhead bridge and being thrown under the train, arrived in this city from Providence, R. I., on Saturday, to see what disposition had been made of his son's remains, and had the body removed from the south cemetery and reinterred in the Catholic cemetery at the Plains, where the burial rites of that church were performed. The deceased had only recently joined the circus as a farrier, being led to that step by a spirit of adventure, and the father, who is a quite prominent business man of Providence, is deeply grieved by the loss of his son.

The Rye beach mineral spring will be opened to the public on Tuesday afternoon, July 24th, by the proprietor, Mr. G. Harrison Jenness. A new roadway connecting with the South road near the Rye Beach post-office has been built to the spring, and a pavilion and bottling room erected. The water somewhat resembles that of the High Rock spring at Saratoga, and is pronounced by the chemists who have analyzed it to be one of the finest medicinal waters in the country. Large numbers of the summer visitors at Rye beach drink daily of this cool and refreshing beverage. The proprietor of the spring will soon be ready to fill all orders, and ship the water to any part of the country.

The light of a big fire in the direction of York was seen in this city on Saturday evening about eleven o'clock, but disappeared before midnight. It was probably caused by the burning of a barn.

Mr. Frank Emerson of Manchester has bought two acres of land on Badger's island, and will build a two-story cottage thereon, with a piazza 100 feet long extending around three sides.

E. E. Marden of Dover, a clerk in the Globe Grocery Co.'s branch store at York beach, had one of his legs broken by a fall on the 20th inst.

Rev. Lee H. Fisher of the Universalist church, and Rev. John A. Hainer of the Court street Christian church, exchanged pulpits on Sunday morning.

Alderman Ayers was quite seriously hurt on Saturday by being thrown from his carriage while riding in Newcastle. Since then he has been confined to his bed, and has experienced much suffering.

Mr. Joseph H. Jameson was on the 16th inst. presented by the boat fishermen of whom he buys, with a handsome gold-headed cane, Capt. Daniel Haley making the presentation speech. Mr. Jameson invited all hands to O'Donnell's Sporting house, where a collation was served.

The Portsmouth cricket club went to Lowell, Mass., Saturday, and played the club there, the Lowells winning by a score of eighty-three to forty-one, in one inning. Of the Portsmouths' forty-one, T. Cogan scored twenty-two.

Mr. William E. Noyes is meeting with excellent success as agent for the "Lives of Harrison and Morton," by Gen. Lew Wallace, author of "Ben Hur." This biography of the republican national candidates is the one authorized and approved by them, and undoubtedly the most interesting campaign biography ever issued. Mr. Noyes has also taken the sole agency for this city and vicinity, and York county, Me., of "The Republican Party: its history, pinciples, and policies," edited by Hon. John D. Long, of Massachusetts, now member of Congress from that state, and having among its contributors Senator Frye of Maine, on "Our fisheries;" Senator Chandler of New Hampshire, on "the American navy;" Hon. Nelson Dingley, Jr., of Maine, on "the American merchant marine;" Hon. John S. Wise, on "the New South;" and many other noted and able statesmen of the republican party. Our readers can rely upon any statements made by Mr. Noyes, who has for years been one of our most valued contributors.

Fred W. Perkins of Saco, a painter by trade and aged about thirty years, in attempting to leave a train at Old Orchard camp-ground station on Thursday night last, while it was in motion, fell beneath the wheels, and was so badly injured that he died in a few hours. He was known as a man of good abilities and very pleasant disposition.

Forepaugh's circus had its usual experience in Biddeford, when it exhibited there last week. Two attachments, one for beach of contract in regard to advertising on the big blankets worn by the elephants in the procession, damages being placed at $300, and one for alleged wrong change-making, the aggrieved person asserting that for a ten dollar bill he received only a ticket and fifty cents change, damages being laid at $450, were placed on property of the circus; the managers deposited $750 in the hands of the sheriff, and the big show went on its way with all its gear.

Not a particle of calomel, nor any other deleterious substance, enters into the composition of Ayer's Pills. On the contrary, this medicine is carefully compounded from the curative properties of purely vegetable substances. Try it.

Marshall E. Curtis, proprietor of the Curtis house, at Fortune's Rocks, Biddeford, went out in a dory on the morning of the 20th inst., to attend to his lobster traps. It was very foggy, and as he did not return at noon the family became alarmed. Late in the afternoon two young men discovered his body floating near the shore, his head being badly bruised by coming in contact with the rocks. He was fifty years old, and leaves a wife.

The Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York paid, during the week ending July 12th, death claims amounting to $80,646.71, (on which the net premiums paid amounted to $39,649.21,) and endowments amounting to $63,122.56.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH.

CITY MARSHAL'S OFFICE, July 14, 1888.

FREQUENT complaints having been brought to my notice that men and boys are in the habit of bathing in the waters exposed to the streets, highways and other public places, especially in Sagamore Creek near Lafayette road and Sagamore road, in violation of the city ordinances; notice is hereby given that all persons found offending in this particular will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes. "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not profess that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

O. F. PHILBRICK & CO.,

COAL AND WOOD DEALERS,

No Children Need Apply.

A well known newspaper man, who had been temporarily residing in Philadelphia, changed his base of action to this city. His family consisted of his wife and five children, all of the latter having passed the mewling age. Finding himself well settled in New York he looked about him for a nest for his mate and young. He was told of a handsome, well appointed flat in a location conveniently near to the prominent hotels and which a bachelor friend of his had just vacated. He inspected it and was delighted. The janitor was all smiles and smirks. The price was reasonable. The delighted journalist brought forth his pocket book and, while mentioning some well known persons as sponsors for his good name, proffered a month's rent in advance. The still beaming janitor, without extending a hand, inquired: "Pardon me, sir, but are you married?"

"Why, certainly," was the somewhat indignant response, for our friend saw in the question nothing more than the evidence of a suspicion as to the legality of his conjugal relations.

Still beaming, the janitor said: "Any children, sir?"

Proudly uttered was the response: "Four boys and a girl."

No longer beaming the household agent said, coldly: "I am very sorry, sir, but I cannot let you the apartments."

"Why not?"—this in indignant astonishment.

"Because, sir, the other tenants would leave in a body if we admitted children to this house. Their destructiveness we might put up with, but their noise is what is most objected to. In New York people get all the noise they want in the streets, so they want quiet in the house."

It was in vain that protestations were made as to the angelic character of the youthful quintette in question, and useless was the emphasis laid on the fact that all the youngsters had passed the boisterous age.

The flat was inexorable. No children need apply.

An exceptional case, you say. That's what our friend said. He went from house to house inspecting flat after flat, but everywhere the insurmountable "Have you any children, sir?" put a stop to further negotiations.—New York Cor. Philadelphia Times.

"No, I do not think that amateur photography is supplanting out door sketching," said a well known Fulton street dealer in artists' materials a few days since, in response to a question of a reporter.

"While I do not say that the converse of that proposition is true, I do know for a fact that a larger number of sketching classes have gone into the country this summer than ever before, and, as a rule, these classes have had a very large membership. It is a theory of mine, which, I think, can be really demonstrated, that there is readily no reason why the sketch artist and the amateur photographer should not work in perfect harmony, and that the union will be greatly to the benefit of both.

"I can give you an instance," he went on, "where the camera has been of untold service to one of the artists on a well known magazine. Formerly this artist, of more than local renown, used to sketch wholly from nature, but now, when making a tour through England, Scotland, or where he may chance to be, he always carries his camera along, and when he comes across a pretty bit of landscape, a ruined castle or anything else he wishes to preserve, he at once takes a negative. Thus you see that in a few weeks' time he can take hundreds of negatives, while months would be consumed on his tour if he were compelled to sketch each view himself. When he reaches home he throws the negatives onto a piece of cardboard, touches them up with India ink, then in some way decomposes the silver on the plate, leaving the India ink drawing in its place. The drawing is then photo-engraved and is published in the magazine as a bona fide sketch, while, in fact, it is purely a piece of mechanical work."—New York Mail and Express.

How to Test a Mushroom.

The mycophagist selects from wood or field a specimen of toadstool which by its external appearance extends an invitation to try it. Hard, dry, leathery, fetid, slimy, or decomposing ones are left rigidly alone—as they should be. Carefully removing the fungus from its habitation, and after noting its botanical characteristics, a small piece is tasted raw; if it is nauseous, it is thrown away and branded as non-edible; if it is hot, acrid, or bitter, a small piece is cooked without seasoning; if it retains any disagreeable qualities over the cooks, it is branded in like manner; if it loses them all, larger pieces are cooked and eaten until the kind either gives signs of noxious qualities or proves to be harmless. If the specimen is mild and pleasant to the taste (a small piece) both raw and cooked, the same care is observed until a full meal is eaten; and it is very necessary that it should be; for in one family of gill bearing toadstools—the Amanitæ—no sign either cooked or raw is given of its deadly properties. This is the only family to which deaths have been traced; and the botanical characteristics of its members must be thoroughly mastered. There is no other method of testing that is safe. Charms of salt and silver are as useless as the romances of the fortune teller, and even worse; for, if believed in, they inspire a confidence that leads directly to serious results.—Charles McIlvaine in Lippincott's Magazine.

Destruction Wrought by Insects in America

The annual loss to productive industries in the United States caused by insects is estimated at $150,000,000. Here is a fair battle between man and another sort of earth occupiers. They are smaller, but if they can whip us, have undoubted as good a right to the world as we have. As civilization advances new insects make their appearance, marching sometimes eastward, but generally westward. There are few, if any, forms of vegetation that have no parasites that devour either foliage or fruit. The loss to the cotton crop is estimated at $15,000,000 a year, while that to the apple crop is not much less, and that to the potato crop at least one-half as much. But the estimate is not a fair one until into the loss is counted the time spent in fighting to secure the proportion that is saved.—Scientific American.

European Railway Mileage.

Germany has the largest railway mileage in Europe, Great Britain and Ireland taking second place and France coming third. All these together, however, have but little more than half the railroad mileage existing in America. Relative to the area of the country, however, England has nearly half again as many miles of railway as Germany. In the United States there were at the end of 1880 about twenty-five miles of railway to every 10,000 inhabitants; in England about five; in Germany a fraction less;

A Household Remedy.—No family should be without some remedy for the cure of affections so universally prevalent as coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough and croup—some remedy, too, which can be relied on as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the article required.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous bo your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Athlophoros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 3, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. Marriages Among Deaf Mutes.

The education of deaf mutes, and the teaching them trades, so that they become intelligent and productive members of society, of course induce marriages among them. Is not this calculated to increase the number of deaf mutes? Dr. Gillette thinks not. The vital statistics show that consanguineous marriages are a large factor in deaf muteism; about 10 per cent., it is estimated, of the deaf mutes are the offspring of parents related by blood. Ancestral defects are not always perpetuated in kind; they may descend in physical deformity, in deafness, in imbecility. Deafness is more apt to descend in collateral branches than in a straight line. It is a striking fact in a table of relationships prepared by Dr. Gillette, that while the 450 deaf mutes enumerated had 770 relationships to other deaf mutes, making a total of of 1,220, only twelve of them had deaf mute parents, and only two of them one deaf mute parent, the mother of these having been able to hear, and that in no case was the mother alone a deaf mute. —Charles Dudley Warner in Harper's Magazine.

When They Leave Us,

The exodus of our bodily troubles is doubly welcome if their departure is unaccompanied by pain. It is the fault of the best of commendable cathartics, which act solely upon the bowels, that in operation they gripe and weaken these organs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters produce a laxative effect, but neither causes pain nor weaken the abdominal region or the stomach. This is pre-eminently the alterative which a constipated, bilious or dyspeptic person should use, since a resort to it involves no bodily discomfort nor a violent reaction. The liver is aroused, the stomach benefitted, and the habit of body speedily and permanently improved by it. Fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney troubles are among the maladies for which recorded experience has proved it to be efficacious. It is a wholesome appetizer, and a far more reliable tranquillizer of the nerves than stomach-disturbing narcotics and sedatives.

It Is Not Best

If you wish to restore the bloom to your wasted cheek, and so improve your health that plumpness and strength will succed emaciation and debility, purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy will benefit you more surely and speedily than any other.

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Mud Baths of Las Vegas.

The greatest place in this country for the display of vanity is at the mud baths at Las Vegas. I went there one season, my physician advising the baths as a cure for muscular rheumatism. You buy a tub of mud, and personally see the tub scalded and the mud mixed to about the consistency of mush. This tub, which costs you $5, is yours as long as you remain, though you are charged so much for each bath, and there are numerous other items of expense beside the $5. The thing looked very repulsive to me, and in my first experiments I couldn't do anything but stand in the tub. This seemed to benefit my limbs so far as they were touched, and the third time I forced myself to put on the rubber cap, covering the hair, and the ear plugs, and then got down into the mud. The effect was wonderful. The next day I was terribly broken out, and in considerable alarm sent for my physician. He laughed when I told him what was the matter, and, before I knew what he was about, swept his fingers down over the pimples, bursting them and leaving a clean furrow where his fingers had passed. I could smell nothing but tobacco, and in the baths succeeding this could smell the tobacco in the mud. I was a terrible smoker, and was as thoroughly soaked with tobacco as an old meerschaum pipe.

But I forgot the vanity part, about which I started to speak. After I had taken my baths I made a great deal of inquiry of the attendants, female as well as male, and from the former found that the lady bathers were largely women of fashion, who took the baths for no other reason than to get a clear, white complexion. They would remain in the baths for hours, with the mud plastered over their hands and faces, horrid objects to look upon, and evidently enduring considerable suffering. All for a white skin! If this isn't the vanity of vanities I don't know what is.—Globe-Democrat.

The Surface of the Sun.

In Secchi's view the sun spot is formed of a central region—apparently a dark mass—called the nucleus or umbra, or both, surrounded by a part less dark, the penumbra, which is a thin veiling of filaments or currents precipitating themselves toward the center and sometimes crossing it like a bridge. The existence of the spot has three periods, its formation, its rest and its extinction. In the first, the visible solar surface, or photosphere, is distorted by great agitation. Its irregular movements defy description, and their velocities are enormous. They have no parallel at all in terrestrial phenomena. This solar activity is produced by tremendous forces at work beneath the photosphere, and the spots, and eruption of great whirling masses of incandescent metallic vapors, are the effects.

In the period of rest these eruptive masses fall back again into the surface of the photosphere, and form a more or less circular umbra or spot, and the central up-rush loses in volume and velocity. Finally the eruptive action is exhausted and the absorbing powers of the vapors seem to be dissipated, the photosphere closes over the umbra and the spot is extinguished. At first the spot was a rent in the photosphere, then later it assumed the funnel shape in more definite outline, and was crowned with beautiful faculæ and jets of hydrogen and metallic vapors, the former being often abundant, high and bright, while the latter are low and brilliant. This briefly is Secchi's explanation.—Sidereal Messenger.

Some Interesting Discoveries.

Recent explorations in Spain by two Belgian scientists have resulted in some very interesting discoveries. Relics of a prehistoric race have been found in great abundance, ranging from the stone age to that of bronze and metals. These people buried their dead not only in stone graves, or cells, but also in great jars of burnt clay, accompanied by pieces of pottery and other articles of use and value. This form of jar burials is very widespread, and examples have been found from Japan to Peru. These relics are supposed to belong to that ancient race which lived in Europe previous to the Aryan immigration, the various branches of which are known as Iberians, Pelasgians, Ligurians, etc., according to the country in which they lived. Several skeletons were found adorned with silver and gold ornaments. One of the most remarkable relics is a female skull encircled by a band of silver, to which is attached a thin plate of the same metal.—Frank Leslie's.

A Transisthmian Railway.

A recent report from the United States consul at San Salvador recommends the construction of a railway connecting the capitals of Mexico and Gautemala, and connecting with the existing narrow gauge of the Gautemala Central railway, seventy-five miles in length, and terminating on the Pacific at the open roadstead of San Jose. Referring to the climate of Central America at the sea level, the consul says: "The Nicaragua canal, the ship railway and the De Lesseps canal, each and all are at the sea level, and the acclimated alone may cross the continent in safety at the sea level; but there is perfect immunity from climatic disease the instant the traveler reaches an elevation of 1,000 feet above the sea. Commerce, therefore, will traverse this transisthmian railway with a land locked harbor at each terminus, and an elevation at no point, after leaving the coast, of less than 2,000 feet between the two oceans.—Demorest's Monthly.

A Protection Against Flies.

"Talk about your flytraps and mosquito nettings," said a well known florist to me last week. "Did you know that the much despised castor oil plant is the best protector in the world against flies, musquitoes and other insects? It's a fact, though. The discovery was made by a French scientist named Rafford, who noticed that the rooms in his house where the plants were growing were entirely free from these disagreeable insects. He discovered that the plants gave out an essential oil or some toxic principle which possessed powerful insecticide qualities. Experiments have been made in this country and the same results obtained. I don't keep the plants, so you can see I am not looking for any 'ad,' but I give it to you for your own benefit."—

USE OF ELECTRICITY

In the Execution of Criminals—Edison's Opinion—Experiment.

When Mr. Thomas A. Edison was asked how criminals could best be executed under the new law compelling the use of electricity as the agent of death, he said: There is no reason why there should be any failure in an execution by means of electricity. Its use for that purpose will not require the invention of any new machine or the application of any principle not well understood. Electricity of a high tension must be used, and an alternating current rather than a straight one.

A straight current flows constantly in one direction; an alternating current is reversed. It is as if the generator first exerted a great push upon the conductor, and then suddenly a great pull. If the human body is the subject of such a varying strain the result is much intensified. Mr. Batchelor, one of Mr. Edison's right hand men in the laboratory at Llewellyn park, appreciates this difference. Some time ago he accidentally intercepted a current from one of the dynamos with his body. It was a straight current and he survived. If it had been an alternating flow of the same intensity Mr. Edison would have lost a valuable assistant very suddenly.

Speaking of the method of applying the current in executing criminals, Mr. Edison said: "I should think it better to apply it through the arms or legs. It might be sent through the head by making connections at the back of the head and on the forehead, but I should think it could be more conveniently done through the arms, and the result would be equally fatal. Suppose the prisoner wore a pair of handcuffs. The chain connecting one with the other would be separated in the middle by means of an insulating bar. This would take the place of a link. In this bar the two wires would be fitted, one joining with the left handcuff, the other with the right. They would be separated from each other. The metal handcuffs would give connections with the prisoner's wrists, and then at the pressing of a button the current would pass, and the man would instantly die. It would not require an expert electrician as an executioner. The alternating electrical machines carry an indicator, and when it registered 1,200 volts, or thereabouts, the current could be applied with perfect certainty as to its results."

"What would be the operation of the current upon the man?"

"That is somewhat difficult to say," replied Mr. Edison. "I do not think that the electricity kills the man direct. It acts upon his nerves and muscles in such a way that they themselves destroy him. You know how a little shock contracts the muscles. Imagine how a violent one causes every fiber of the body to rend itself to pieces. It is not that the current directly strikes any vital organ and destroys it, but rather that it excites the physical forces of nerve and muscle to a tremendous and perhaps fatal pitch. This is my view of it. There is no doubt about the death of the subject."

"Then you approve of execution by electricity?"

"I do not approve of any execution," said Mr. Edison, gravely. "I think that the killing of a human being is an act of foolish barbarity. It is childish—unworthy of a developed intelligence. Society must protect itself but it is not driven to any such means except by its own refusal to be wise. I believe in the confinement of criminals. There are some that should be restrained all their lives, but killing them destroys the last hope of making them useful. I would have them work, but not in such a way as to conflict with the laborers in factories. No, I am not in favor of executions, but if they are to take place electricity will do the work, and it is more certain and perhaps a little more civilized than the rope.

"We killed a dog here yesterday," continued Mr. Edison. "Some people who were investigating this subject brought him here, and we consented to do it. So far as the unfortunate animal's death was concerned, the experiment was a success."

Mr. Batchelor, already alluded to, had charge of this "execution," and he described it. The large dynamos used in the laboratory develop a straight current, and, as an alternating one was wanted, some little work was needed to prepare for the experiment. To a dynamo which sends out a current for some street lights in the vicinity of the laboratory, and which develops a current of 1,200 volts, Mr. Batchelor added an alternating contrivance. One wire was then led out through a window and connected with a sheet of tin upon the ground. The other wire entered a basin of water close by the tin. The dog—a poor little mongrel—was expected to stand upon the sheet of tin and attempt to drink the water. In that case the current would have had a circuit from his lips and tongue through his head and body to his legs. Either from an instinct informing him of his peril or because he wasn't thirsty, poor doggy declined to be his own executioner. He hung back and regarded the tin suspiciously. There was a rope attached to his collar, and after it became apparent that he would not invite the stroke of fate, the experimenters pulled upon this rope in such a way that the dog's forepaws were forced into the basin. He fell instantly without uttering a yelp or whine. There was a slight convulsive twitching of the limbs, but, so far as human eye could see, no life was in him for a single instant after the passage of the current. Death was so sudden that it seemed impossible that he could have suffered a single pang. He was buried near the place of his taking off, as the experimenters did not desire an autopsy. The current used would undoubtedly kill a man, but it is probable that a stronger one would be used in such a case."—New York Sun.

The Mexicans Not Lazy.

The Mexican people seem to be an industrious race, whether of the Spanish or Aztec branches. Old people and young children work. Some one has said, "they have to or starve." This is as true of them as it is of us. I am inclined to believe they work more willingly and cheerfully for a pittance than would our own people, or than do the colored population of the south, which, in some respects, greatly resembles the peonage of Mexico.

FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Defenders of American Industry.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It will be worthy the just and provident care of Congress to make such further alterations in the tariff as will more especially protect and foster the several branches of manufacture which have been recently instituted and extended by the laudable exertions of our citizens.—James Madison.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

Upon the success of our manufactures, the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Cash vs. Reputation.

A despatch of the 22d inst., from Toronto, Ont., says: "Jake Gaudaur has refused to row William O'Connor of Toronto on the ground that O'Connor has not sufficient reputation. O'Connor replies by issuing a challenge to John Teemer to row for the championship of America for $1000 a side, and as a guarantee of good faith has put up $100, the race to be three miles with turn on any fair course, the challenge to be open for two weeks and the race to be rowed four weeks from the expiration of that time."

New Road Agent.

The stage coach running between San Luis Obispo, Cal., and Templeton, was robbed by a masked man on the night of July 21st. He compelled the driver and five passengers to alight, robbed them of about $300, burst open Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express box and stole about $1,000, took what money was in the mail, and departed. A sheriff and posse went in pursuit of the highwayman.

Naval Intelligence.

Passed Asst. Engr. Henry T. Clever is ordered to the Saratoga.

Pay Inspector Charles F. Guild is ordered to appear before the retiring board.

Paymaster Charles W. Slamm is ordered to the Norfolk navy yard.

Paymaster Frank H. Hinman is detacked from the New York navy yard, and granted four months sick leave.

MATTERS IN YORK.

YORK VILLAGE, ME., July 20th.

Rev. Mr. Sewall expects to leave York in September, to reside in South Berwick.

Blueberries are not plenty in York this season, probably owing to the generally dry weather which we have had. One terrific thunder shower, however, passed over on the night of July 11th, the lightning striking in several places, although no great damage was done.

The wall enclosing the old burying ground at York Village, which for years has been sadly neglected, is now being rebuilt under the direction of the Village Improvement society.

The dwelling house of Mr. Edward Todd, near Cape Neddick, was burned to the ground one day last week; nearly all of the furniture was saved.

Mr. John Todd, at York Village, who lost a valuable horse some time ago, has recently purchased a fine colt. J. E.

DOG CORNER, YORK, July 23d.

Theodore Beal and David M. Webber generously devoted a half a day to a good cause one day last week. They voluntarily started from Mr. Beal's house and removed every loose rock, (and many fast ones that had been in the road for years,) for a mile and a half to the guide board on the Cape Neddick road. Much credit is due them for their kind act, and it is not only worthy, but needy of being followed on other of the most travelled roads in town.

Saturday night at about eleven o'clock the people of Beech Ridge were aroused by a cry of fire, the barn of Mr. G. L. Moulton being then in a blaze through the roof. The whole building was totally destroyed, together with all its contents, consisting of twenty tons of last year's hay, about all of this year's crop of hay, two cows, one valuable horse, two swine, hens, a new wagon and other carriages, all his farming utensils, etc. Nothing was saved. We learn there was some insurance on the barn, but none on the contents. The loss falls heavily on Mr. Moulton, as he is now past his three score and ten, and has always been a hard working and industrious man. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it was presumably caused by fire from a pipe accidentally. Mr. Moulton has no enemies who would purposely fire his buildings, or do him any injury. P.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., July 23d.

The weather for haying has been excellent for several weeks past, and has been thoroughly taken advantage of by the farmers; the hay crop is not so large as was at one time promised, but it has been housed in excellent condition. The gentle showers of the latter part of last week, and yesterday, have proved a great help to vegetation, which was in much need of rain, and it now looks as though crops in general would be abundant.

The lovely banks of the magnificent Piscataqua at Eliot Neck are extensively colonized by people from the cities. Mr. J. E. Staples and Dr. Earl S. Sloan have rented half of the house of Mr. Staples' brother, W. H. Staples, for the season, and with their families will pass a couple of months there.

Mrs. J. E. Rogers and family, of East Somerville, Mass., are visiting Mrs. Rogers' parents, Mr. Fabius Spinney and wife.

Mrs. French and family are at her aunt's, Mrs. Wm. A. Lydston's, for a few weeks of recreation in the bracing breezes of the country.

John Shapleigh recently lost a very promising young colt. It was out to pasture with some others, and the fence was broken down by some horse in a neighboring pasture. The colts all got out, of course, but on search being made all were found except this one. On Friday, the 20th, the missing colt was discovered in a quagmire, dead, and swallowed up all but the head. It was as smart and promising a colt as there was about here, and its death is quite a loss to Mr. Shapleigh.

Rev. James Lade and wife are on a vacation trip to England, to be absent about two months; they have not been to their former home for seven years.

Rev. W. T. Marshall and family are at Old Orchard, at campmeeting. Mr. Marshall exchanged pulpits on Sunday with Rev. Mr. Grovener of Kennebunk, who preached a very excellent sermon from Romans, 8th chapter, 14th verse, although the attendance was small in consequence of the stormy weather.

Albert Hanscome and family started on their return to New York on Saturday, the 21st.

Frederick A. Staples is having a flagpole finished, and and will raise it as soon as as it is ready. We hope soon to see a flag waving in the breeze from it.

A. W. Wingate arrived home last week from his first canvassing trip in Norfolk county, Mass. He met with excellent success, having in about four weeks secured over one hundred subscriptions for the New England Farmer. He is a first class canvasser.

A party of young ladies from this town are camping out at York beach for a week or so—by the names of Spinney, Dixon, Dame and Mathes—and several from Portsmouth are in their company.

Samuel Dixon started for the west on Thursday, July 19th, to visit his children in that section. He has a daughter living in Nebraska, and a son in Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Dixon will pass a couple of months in that region.

Alexander Dixon, from Newburyport, Mass., is visiting old acquaintances here for a few days.

Dr. E. H. Dixon returned home on the 21st inst., from Portland, where he has been engaged in the practice of dentistry for Dr. Bonney, late of Portsmouth but now of the Maine city. He will remain at home until the 1st of October, and is ready to attend to any who may desire his professional services. Dr. Dixon is a skillful practitioner, gives full satisfaction to his patrons, makes reasonable charges, and warrants all work done by him.

There is a spot of land within half a mile of the Parade, now planted with a fine crop of potatoes, where not a single potato-bug has put in an appearance this season. The place has been scratched over by hens before being planted. These fowls will not touch a bug of this sort after it has commenced its operations on the vines, but while the larvae are in the ground they either devour or destroy them, as well as all other insects which their claws excavate or their sharp eyes disclose. Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. ACCIDENTAL.

Alderman Ayers, who was thrown from a carriage on South street, near Newcastle avenue, Saturday afternoon, with four other gentlemen, by the sudden starting of the horse while turning out to pass another team, had one ribe broken and was badly bruised, his companions also sustaining some severe bruises. The carriage was consideraly damaged.

Mr. George W. Southworth of Lynn, Mass., was driving down Islington street between four and five o'clock on Monday afternoon, accompanied by Mr. Charles H. Rowe, when the horse commenced to run. When near Mr. George W. Haven's residence Mr. Southworth was either thrown from the wagon or jumped from it, and striking against a tree was knocked insensible. The reins being beyond Mr. Rowe's reach, having been carried out by Mr. Southworth, Mr. Rowe climbed over the seat and got out of the back of the wagon, slighting without harm. The injured man was taken to the Cottage Hospital, suffering from a bad fracture of the skull, and though all that medical skill could do for him was done, he died at about 8:30 o'clock without having recovered consciousness after the accident.

While an express wagon driven by Mr. James R. Morrison, and containing Mr. Morrison's wife, Mrs. Charles H. Joy and four children, who had been on a huckleberrying excursion, was coming up Sagamore road between five and six o'clock Monday afternoon, by some means we did not learn all were thrown out, and all were more or less injured. Mr. Morrison had one foot hurt, but was able to soon catch the team. Mrs. Joy was the most severely hurt of the party, receiving an ugly cut on the head and being rendered insensible; she was taken home in a hack, and at half past seven o'clock in the evening it was reported that she was still unconscious, having sustained concussion of the brain.

A boat containing four women and one man was capsized at the first Newcastle bridge Monday evening, but all were rescued by the prompt aid of Major Uurch. The major is not one of those who ever waits for somebody else to do something; he goes ahead and does something himself.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club sustained their second defeat at Worcester, Mass., on Monday, the score being nine to five in favor of the home club.

John E. Roach, one of the players of the late Dover base ball club, has signed with the Portsmouth club.

On the South street grounds, this afternoon, Worcester and Portsmouth. Game commences at 3:30 o'clock.

THE FOREPAUGH SHOW.

It Fulfils its Promises—So Our Neighbors Say.

It has been so common an occurrence in the past for the bill boards and advertisements to promise more in the circus line than is carried out under the canvas, that the following, though taken from the Biddeford Journal, a paper that never praises a poor show because its advertising bills have been paid, might possibly be suspected by some were it not that the Standard and Times of that city speak in the same commendatory strain:

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, the Forepaugh and Wild West show drew big crowds to the tent at both afternoon and evening performances. The portrayal of the scenes and incidents of life in the Wild West were strikingly realistic, and in an entirely new line from anything ever seen in these cities.

One of the best things ever given under canvas was the horse-back dance of the Virginia reel. Dr. Carver gave a wonderful exhibition of rifle practice, and the cowboys rode bucking horses at the imminent risk of breaking their necks.

In the stage-coach scene there was rather too much shooting to please the majority of the spectators, but the reproduction of the Custer massacre was vivid and thrilling.

The ring, stage and trapeze performances, while in the usual line, were of unusual excellence, the mid-air balance act and the brother act being by long odds the best ever seen here. Another grotesque and original feature was the Chinese laundry act. The trained horses, dogs, goats and elephants showed almost human sagacity, and the performances of Blondin and Eclipse were all that was claimed for them.

The programme closed with the usual hippodrome races, and the driving of thirty horses by one man, Adam Forepaugh, Jr. It is the testimony of all who attended that the show was one of the very best ever given here, and deserving of the big patronage it received.

This vast combination will exhibit in this city on Friday next, the 27th inst., afternoon and evening. The street parade, which will take place in the forenoon, is said by the Biddeford papers to eclipse anything of the kind previously seen there,—and every big circus that ever made the eastern circuit has performed in the sister cities on the Saco.

PERSONAL.

Mr. George D. Marcy, who has been passing some weeks on a visit to his early home in this city, started on his return to Kansas City, Mo., on Monday, the 23d.

Col. Charles A. Sinclair arrived home on Sunday morning last, after an absence of three weeks on a trip to Florida.

Hon. Martin Parry Kennard sailed on Saturday from Boston for Europe, to be absent several months.

Mrs. Harry G. Tanton and her nephew, William Tanton, of Deer street, are passing a few weeks at Prince Edward Island. On their return Master Tanton will go to Holderness to finish his studies.

Mr. George Emery and son and Mr. Herbert Emery, of Gloucester, N. J., are guests of their relative, Frank E. Worster of Eliot.

Mr. John H. Folsom of Salem, Mass., formerly a well known mechanic of Portsmouth and of an old family of this, is visiting his friends here. He came from a trip to Wolfeborough, and is stopping at present with his relative Mr. Daniel S. Philbrook, of the Boston & Maine railroad force.

Mrs John S. Bennett and two daughters, and Miss Ellen Freeman, of State street, are passing the summer at Tamworth.

Mr. Daniel H. Trefethen of this city, who a few weeks since had one foot amputated in consequence of injuries received several months before in the planing mill at the navy yard, resumed his duties there on Monday.

Professor J. B. Ames, of Cambridge, Mass., is passing the summer at Newington.

Judge Allen of the supreme court began an adjourned session of the April term at Exeter on Monday, for the trial of cases against certain insurance companies which had risks upon the iron works of Mr. Lafayette Hall at Newmarket, burned some time ago.

Supt. Palmer, of the Electric Light Co., returned last week from a visit to Bar Harbor. He reports the cottages all occupied, but the hotels as very poorly patronized, the huge Rodick house having only about a hundred guests.

A despatch received in Rye on the 18th inst. annouced the death in Little Rock, Ark., of Mr. Charles Edward Foss, formerly of Rye, who went from that town to Little Rock several years ago to take a position in a railroad office there.

A famfly quarrel in the tenement over the Globe Grocery store, Monday evening about eleven o'clock, caused quite a crowd to assemble in front of the building in about two minutes; where they all came from so quick is hard to say. The head of the house was taken to the police station, and quiet soon reigned.

The haying season is nearly over in this vicinity, and the crop has been generally secured in excellent condition, but it is hardly up to the average in yield.

The estate of the late William H. Hill of Bookline, Mass., has been appraised at $2,916,029.18.

Rev. C. H. Pope's installation as pastor of the 1st and South Congregational churches of Kennebunkport takes place on Wednesday afternoon and evening, the 25th inst. Sermon by Rev. H. L. Hallock of Portland.

In South Berwick, on Sunday, the 15th inst., Rev. Isaac Luce of the Methodist church immersed twelve converts at the riverside, and received five others who preferred to be sprinkled.

At the law term of the supreme court in Concord last week, in case State vs. Wiggin, the defendant's demurrer was sustained. The respondent, George A. Wiggin of Berwick, Me., was indicted for selling lightning rods in Dover without a license. Under the laws of New Hampshire a citizen of another state must pay $500 for a license to sell lightning rods in this state, while a resident of this state who has been a citizen five years can get a license for $100. Respondent demurred, on the ground that the law is in violation of the constitution of the United States, as citizens of other states are not given equal rights with citizens of New Hampshire; and the law court coincides.

The bright light in the direction of York, seen in this city about eleven o'clock Saturday night, was caused by the burning of Mr. Lyman Moulton's barn at Beech Ridge, which with its entire contents, including a large quantity of hay, cows, a horse and other live stock, carriages and farming tools, was totally destroyed, with but little insurance. Cause of fire unknown, but supposed to be due to a spark from a pipe.

The following are among the recent transfers of real estate in York county, as left for record in the office of the register of deeds: Kittery — Abba B. Bonin of Kittery to Frank A. Emerson of Manchester, N. H., real estate in Kittery for $250; George E. Carter of Kittery to Robert M. Brown of Gloucester, Mass., real estate in Kittery for $500. York—Hazen Z. Ellis of York to Arthur H. Noyes of Haverhill, Mass., real estate in York for $800. South Berwick — Wm. G. Cheney to Abner Oakes, land and buildings for $508. Wells—Andrew J. Sargent of North Berwick to James Cheney of Wells, land and buildings in Wells for $360.

Charles Berry, gate keeper at a Boston & Maine crossing in Lawrence, Mass., and Stephen Whittier, employed in the railroad's repair shop there, were drowned while canoeing on the river Saturday night, July 21st.

The corner stone of a new Catholic school was laid at Jamaica Plain, Mass., July 22d.

CHAMPERNOWNE,

OF CHAMPERNOWNE ISLAND.

Ancient the ancestral Hall.
From its lofty walls look down
Norman knights, and ladies fair
On their last, their youngest son.
Many memories are left
In that gray old pile of stone.
From the Holy wars, one knight
Built the northern tower, long gone.
He, by Moslem sabre scarred,
Oft at many a festal board,
Tells of Islam's fallen host,
Tho' in streams of Christian blood.
Let the dead past buried be;
Let the New World's forests take
Valiant sons from ancient soil
Her inheritors to make.
Champernowne, of honored line
Hastens, eager in the quest
Of possessions new and fair
Lying in the distant west.
From the turret window high,
Fair hands wave a long farewell;
When shall noble kindred see
Home ward set, the whit'ning sail?
His, the fair, the hill crowned isle,
Where the great oak's arms o'erspread
Forest streams, adown whose course
None but savage bark had sped.
All October's gorgeous hues
Decked the forest, lone and wild,
Where, like the enchanted lands,
'Neath the sun his kingdom smiled.
Merry as in English halls
Is the cheer,—the festal board
Decked with all the bounteous spoil
That the New World's wealth affords.
Soon from cornfield, far and near,
Rises clear the voice of song,
Where the dusky sons of toil
Cheerfully endure their wrong.
Still the yellow sunlight falls
On his fair possessions here,
Still the increase of his lands
Shall make glad the bounteous year.
And it falls upon his grave
'Neath the simple cairn of stone,
By the mosses and decay
Many, many years o'ergrown.

PEPPERRELL HOUSE, July 14th. —A. P. C.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes. "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

Assessors' Notice.

THE Assessors of the City of Portsmouth will meet at the Aldermen's Room, Wednesday, July 30th, at 7 30 o'clock P. M., to consider applications for abatement of the tax of 1888.

BY ORDER OF THE CHAIRMAN.

Check-List Notice.

THE Board of Inspectors of Check-Lists of the City of Portsmouth give notice that they have posted lists of the voters in the several wards of the city, in the corridor of the City Building: also of Ward One in the Railroad Station, of Ward Three in the store of John Mitchell on Islington Street, of Ward Four at the store of John J. Lasky on Pleasant Street, for the inspection of the voters of the city.

They also give notice that they will be in session at the City Building on Friday, July 27th; on Wednesday, August 1st; and on Friday, August 3d, 1888, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 12 M., and from 2 to 5 o'clock P. M., on each of said days, for the purpose of correcting and revising the lists of voters.

They will also be in session at the same place from 7 to 10 A. M., and from 1 to 2 o'clock P. M., on the day of election, for the purpose of furnishing certificates to any persons whose names may have been omitted and who the board are satisfied have resided in the ward one year next preceding said election.

PORTSMOUTH, July 23d, 1888.

BENJ. M. PARKER, Clerk.

The Castaways; or, On the Florida Reefs; by James Otis. No. 9, of the "Boys Home Library;" paper, 12 mo., price, 25 cents. Published by A. L. Burt, No. 56 Beekman street, New York.

Of all the authors who are now furnishing literature for young people, none has a greater popularity and none deserves it more than James Otis, the author of "Toby Tyler" and other fascinating stories. There is something in his books that boys are wholly captivated by; it is the manly vigor and healthy out-door tone, full of the breeze of the ocean and the surf of the beach. The latest addition to the "Boys' Home Library" is No. 9, "The Castaways," and admirers of Mr. Otis will be glad that such good literature is available for their boys' reading. It is for sale at Goodrich's.

May Kendall, the author of the charming novel, "That Very Mab," contributes a parable to the August Wide Awake, "The Temple of Music;" Katharine Macquoid and Dr. Garnett of the British museum have stories in the same number. Miss Kendall is said to be a literary protegee of Andrew Lang.

Miss Risley Seward, in her journey around the world with Governor Seward, made acquaintance of some of the most splendid elephants of Asia, and she tells some good stories of them in the August Wide Awake, under the title, "The Elephants of an Indian Prince."

The first Art Club in Texas has been established at San Antonio. It is officered entirely by ladies.

Secure from Harm

There is something at once touching and beautiful in the contemplation of the universal confidence reposed in SANFORD'S GINGER. And justly so.

With what alacrity it responds to the cry of distress. No cramp or pain or cold or chill has ever made a demand upon it for relief or cure that has not met with instant and grateful response.

It is sure to check any disturbance of the bowels, instantly relieve cramps and pains, prevent indigestion, destroy disease germs in water drunk, restore the circulation when suspended by a chill, a frequent cause of cholera morbus, break up colds and fevers, and ward off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

EDWARD T. MORRISON.

PORTSMOUTH, May 1st, 1888.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH.

CITY MARSHAL'S OFFICE, July 14, 1888.

FREQUENT complaints having been brought to my notice that men and boys are in the habit of bathing in the waters exposed to the streets, highways and other public places, especially in Sagamore Creek near Lafayette road and Sagamore road, in violation of the city ordinance; notice is hereby given that all persons found offending in this particular will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

GLYCEROLE!

A PRESERVATIVE OF LEATHER.

For Oiling and Dressing Boots, Shoes, Etc.

Ever since the now dispensable article of Shoe Dressing came into existence, it has been the source of constant trouble to parties using it, because it hardened and cracked the leather; to the dealer, because of the complaints of his customers. Conscientious Shoe Dealers have often dissuaded their patrons from using any Shoe Dressing whatever and advised the application of oil, as it is universally known that oil is the only preservative of leather, while all other substances harden, crack and destroy it.

It was claimed for most Dressings heretofore in use that they do not crack leather, but it has never before been claimed that an Oil Dressing could be produced, the composition of which was considered to be an impossibility. After years of patient work, however, we have succeeded in solving the problem of producing an oil, which in addition to its softening and preserving qualities gives also an elegant lustre to leather goods.

Glycerole is a veritable oil and the only one in existence which answers the purpose of oiling, and at the same time, dressing leather. It is perfect in its composition, does not rub off or soil dresses or skirts, and imparts to worn goods a soft, oily lustre which positively preserves the leather and protects it from water.

We do not pretend that a single application of Glycerole will improve a shoe already dried and hardened by a numerous coats of common shoe dressing, but we do warrant that all shoes oiled and dressed only with Glycerole will be positively improved in wearing quality, as this oil by penetrating into the pores of the leather will make it more supple and add to its durability.

Price 25 cents per bottle.

DISHES OF ALL NATIONS.

Cosmopolitan Dinners Served Up in Various New York Restaurants.

"No matter," said one of the leading "Bohemians" of New York the other day. "No matter what a man's tastes may be, in the matter of eating, or what his lack of taste may be, if he stop short of cannibalism in his desires, he can have them gratified to the top of his bent in some of the restaurants of New York.

"Shall I begin at the top or the bottom?" he asked, rolling a cigarette, and settling himself for an interview. "I think," he continued, without waiting for an answer, "that the top would be the best, for probably even I do not know the bottom. I shall probably stop before I reach the end, for it is hard to say who does not know the worst restaurants in town. I have experimented as far as I dare in that direction, but I presume I haven't gone far enough.

"The best dinners in the world I believe can be had in New York. If you want to dine a la Russe, and take all night to it, with a surprise for every course, you can do it at any one of several expensive maisons near Madison square. This is not dining, though; that is a debauch. The chief of the king of Greece not long ago described an ideal dinner, and such a one you may get if you can afford the price, in any one of twenty restaurants. I am not advertising any of them. He suggested the soups, one thin, the other thick. Then two releves, one of fish, the other meat and vegetables. Next, entrees. He wisely recommended moderation here. I prefer only one, and like a bit of poultry. This brings you to the meridian of the meal, and is not a bad place for a pause, or even for a full stop if you are abstemious. If not, take a sorbet. My own notion is a drop of brandy with a cigarette, but most gourmets prefer to make a sweetened dainty of the alcohol.

"Next, if you continue, and you probably will, take some game in a roast, and don't forget a solid with it. A dinner without a salad is like an egg without salt. After this you are ready for trifling. Dainty vegetables if you want them, sweets or pastry if your tastes are effeminate, fruit if you like, coffee and a cigar necessarily.

"This is a model dinner, and will go best if prepared by an educated French cook. Cooks are educated in other countries, but they seem to be indigenous to the French soil. Turkish cookery is not unlike it, and embraces a very similar variety. There is no distinctively Turkish restaurant that I know here, but you may get a pilaff to order in any good French place.

"The pilaff is made by first boiling in the same water, then frying in small pieces, a chicken and portion of a shoulder of mutton. A handful of rice is next boiled in the same broth, drained and browned in butter. An onion is sliced and fried brown in butter, a tablespoonful of curry or saffron and a handful of raisins are thrown into the rice, which must simmer until soft. The whole is served with hard boiled eggs cut up for a garnish.

"It would take all day to describe national dishes, and a whole year for you to try them all, but you may do it in New York if you like. For Spanish food, go to the neighborhood of Maiden lane and Pearl street. German restaurants are numerous on the east side. There is a capital one on Grand street, near the Bowery. Of French places of the medium class there are three or four excellent ones on Bleecker street, near South Fifth avenue. Some first class Chinese restaurants are located on Mott street. Two good Jewish eating houses are near corner of Bayard street and the Bowery. There are five distinctively national Italian places in the bend in Mulberry street, and one Russian in Hester street, near East Broadway. There are several good English chop houses, two of the best, to my mind, being on Sixth avenue, near Twentieth street, and on Fourth avenue, also near Twentieth street.

"Of American restaurants there is no end. The very best, to my notion, is close to Washington market. The worst—well, there are so many worst ones. They are all over town. You can eat a meal for five cents in one of the St. Andrews' stands. You can go to a beanery if you want to spend ten or twenty cents, or if you have only two cents to spend you can go down on Pearl street to one of the two cent houses there.

"New York is probably the most cosmopolitan place in the world, and shows its cosmopolitanism most of all in its eating houses."—New York Mail and Express.

The Monks of Chartreuse.

A correspondent gives a doleful account of a visit which he had just paid to the monastery of the Grand Chartreuse. He and two companions were greeted with damp beds, followed—so he writes—by maigre soup, tinned fish, bread and eggs and sour wine. After their tiring journey they not unnaturally retired somewhat early to bed, where it is to be presumed they enjoyed a first sleep; but if their expectations were that this sleep was to be of long duration they were disappointed. Just at midnight the unfortunate travelers were compelled, nolente volentes, to get out of their damp sheets in order to attend the midnight mass, at which the solitary illumination was the tiny lamp carried by each monk. The most trying part of the whole experience seems to have been the dreary three hours' performance which followed and which may be realized by the fact that every visitor was compelled to listen from midnight until 3 next morning to a litany and songs. As if to crown the misery of the visit, the next day proved to be a fast day, when even coffee was denied to the visitors, who had for repast dry bread and a tiny glass of chartreuse.—Vanity Fair.

An Interesting Manuscript.

The explorer of the Fayum, Mr. Petrie, has discovered "a splendid fragment of the Second Book of the Iliad, written on papyrus in the finest Greek hand, before the rounded uncial or cursive scripts came into use. This precious document was found rolled up under the head of a mummy which was buried simply in the sand, without the protection of a tomb. It measures apparently from 3 1-2 to 4 feet in length. The date of the manuscript is about the Second or Third century. It will be edited by Professor Sayce."—New York Sun.

Cowards and Faint Hearted.

Only cowards and faint hearted call the world a vale of tears. Because there is night shade in the garden shall we forego its roses? Because bats live need we cage them and hang them in our bedrooms? Because it sometimes rains shall we hoist umbrellas in sunny weather? Because sin and sorrow, tears and death are abroad in the world shall we stand constantly at the gate in expectancy of their coming, like children watching for the band to go by, or weep at the windows in neglect of our duties, like old women lingering to see a funeral procession start off?—"Amber" in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Attention to Sanitation.

Within late years we have learned that contagious diseases are vastly more curable and less liable to spread, when treated in shelter tents than in our homes or hospitals; and we are more and more caring for the ventilation of our dwellings and school houses and churches, preferring the sunny side of our houses for sleeping rooms.

We are building our cities with wider streets, and providing access to clear sunshine and pure air in extensive parks. We are, moreover, demanding more scientific and faithful plumbing, and looking out better for the condition of our cellars. But we have not reached the limit of what is possible or desirable in this matter.—Youth's Companion.

I suffered for a long time from a severe, hacking cough, which was pronounced by a skillful physician to be dangerous and liable to terminate in consumption. I was completely cured by using Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.—Henry A. Bean, Lawrence, Mass.

It is expected that Edward McPherson will take charge of the literary bureau of the republican national committee.

For the relief and cure of the inflammation and congestion called a "cold in the head" there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other modes of treatment have proved of no avail.

Mr. Crawford, the British commissioner in Konkan, has been arrested on charges of bribery and corruption made by a Brahmin.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous be your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are now needlessly suffering. Athlophoros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 8, 1887.
Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.
CHAUNCEY B. REDDICK.

Figures Concerning Vaccination.

We are at last getting some very accurate comparative statistics concerning vaccination. In Canton Zurich, Switzerland, there was compulsory vaccination up to 1883. In that year not one death occurred from smallpox. The anti-vaccinationists then secured a repeal of the requirement. The next year, 1883, there were two deaths per thousand from smallpox; in 1884 three deaths out of every thousand; in 1885 seventeen, and in 1886 eighty-five. This is a warning that should be studied, especially by our Canadian neighbors. But when prejudice has to be overcome, even statistics are valueless. Law must be applied to save many people from their own self will. They might be left to consequences, only for the spread of contagion to others. —Globe-Democrat.

When They Leave Us.

The exodus of our bodily troubles is doubly welcome if their departure is unaccompanied by pain. It is the fault of the best of commendable cathartics, which act solely upon the bowels, that in operation they gripe and weaken these organs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters produce a laxative effect, but neither causes pain nor weaken the abdominal region or the stomach. This is pre-eminently the alterative which a constipated, bilious or dyspeptic person should use, since a resort to it involves no bodily discomfort nor a violent reaction. The liver is aroused, the stomach benefited, and the habit of body speedily and permanently improved by it. Fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney troubles are among the maladies for which recorded experience has proved it to be efficacious. It is a wholesome appetizer, and a far more reliable tranquillizer of the nerves than stomach-disturbing narcotics and sedatives.

An effort is to be made by the women of Portland, Oregon, to secure the appointment of a police-matron.

Adamson's Botanic Balsam is regularly prescribed by many physicians of the best standing, and is recommended by professors of medical colleges to their students, as invaluable for all diseases of the throat and lungs.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps' first literary venture was a story written when she was thirteen years old, and published in the Youth's Companion.

It Is Not Best

To always believe everything that a person tells you, but when you hear that the best blood purifier is Sulphur Bitters, you can believe it, for they cured me of a severe case of blood poisoning.—Rev. A. Fairchild, New York City.

Several charitable ladies have organized an "ice mission" in Nashville, Tenn. They hunt up poor people who are sick, and give them ice and lemons.

If you wish to restore the bloom to your wasted cheek, and so improve your health that plumpness and strength will succed emaciation and debility, purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy will benefit you more surely and speedily than any other.

The announcement that Louisa M. Alcotts's home at Concord, Mass., is to be sold, leads to the suggestion that it be bought by subscription and converted into a home for children, as a memorial to the author so well beloved by young readers.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is unequalled for restoring gray hair to its natural color, promoting growth, and producing new hair on bald heads.

Miss Mary A. Rice, a graduate of the Kansas State university, is said to be the first women in that state to receive a license as a pharmacist.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

A Great Surprise

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Large bottles 50c and $1. a15

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases the tumors. All druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. O(eo)9

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. Ocow(jan)9

Statistics Concerning Public Libraries.

Some library statistics show that the European country which possesses the largest number of public libraries is Austria. In Austria there are no fewer than 577 public libraries, containing 5,475,000 —without reckoning maps and manuscripts—a total which comes out at 26 volumes per 100 of the population. France possesses 500 public libraries, containing 4,598,000 volumes and 135,000 manuscripts, or 12 volumes per 100 of the inhabitants, Italy ranking next with 493 libraries, 4,349,000 volumes and 330,000 manuscripts, or 16 volumes per 100. In Germany the public libraries number 398, containing 2,640,000 volumes and 58,000 manuscripts, or 11 volumes per 100 of the population. Great Britain possesses only 200 public libraries, according to these statistics, the volumes numbering 2,871,000 and the manuscripts 26,000. There are 145 libraries in Russia, with 952,000 volumes and 24,000 manuscripts, or a fraction over 1 volume to 100 persons.

It is noteworthy that in Bavaria alone the public libraries number 169, with 1,368,000 volumes and 24,000 manuscripts. Reviewing the principal libraries separately, it appears that the most considerable in Europe is the Bibliotheque Nationale, in Paris, with 2,078,000 volumes, while the British museum, with its millions of books, assumes the next place. Then comes the Munich Royal library, containing 800,000 volumes; the Berlin, Dresden and Vienna libraries taking rank as follows in the same order; 700,000, 500,000, and 420,000 volumes. The Oxford and Heidelberg universities each possess about 300,000 books. At the Vatican the manuscripts attain almost as large a total as the printed works. The latter number 30,000, while the manuscripts are returned at 25,000.—Home Journal.

English and American Kitchens.

A Philadelphia lady who has just returned from a long visit in London was recently discussing certain domestic points peculiar to England and comparing them with relative matters here. "We all know," she said, "as housekeepers, the worry we have if our kitchens are in the basement, though they have elevators and dumb waiters, stationary washtubs, hot and cold water, are carpeted and fitted with every conceivable convenience. In a London house the kitchens are always in the basement—no elevators, no washtubs, and by no means any 'frivolities' in the way of conveniences. But an English kitchen is a picture, nevertheless. The bright tins and coppers, the burnished dish covers ranged in sizes, the well stored cupboards, the many tables for every conceivable purpose, the range of the most perfect make and large size and the entire absence of the dirty part of the kitchen work, which is confined to the adjoining scullery, make a contrasting picture of aggravation to us, who, while we adore all these kitchen virtues, seldom arrive at them. Though our kitchens in Philadelphia be large and airy, our help, as a rule, are incapable of sustaining the dignity of an English cook, who is a person of dignity and respectability. We pay high wages, give great privileges and are not allowed to order our own dinners and, at any rate, are not expected to reorder the remains." —Philadelphia Press.

A Trick of Napoleon's Partisans.

Archbishop Whately, commenting upon the effects produced by rumors, mentions the great influence of one report which preceded Bonaparte's return from Elba.

When the return had been plotted, and just before it was executed, Napoleon's partisans went through France seeking land to purchase. When about to close the bargain for a field, they would ask to be shown the title.

If they found, as they generally did, that the field was land which had been confiscated at the Revolution, they broke off the negotiation at once. The title, they declared, was insecure; for the Bourbon government of Louis XVIII did not recognize the legality of the act of confiscation.

Their acts and words spread throughout France the rumor that the Bourbons meditated the resumption of all these lands—the chief part of France—to restore them to the former owners. The rumor, thus artfully started and spread abroad, caused thousands of peasant proprietors to welcome Napoleon's return, because thereby the downfall of the Bourbons would occur.—Youth's Companion.

Pity the Poor Woman,

A State street physician gives it as his opinion that four-fifths of the earnings of his profession are derived from women, though in this estimate he does not include the very large and prosperous class of specialists whose services are required by men only. It is a sad commentary upon the morals of the community the existence and prosperity of hundreds of such specialists for men, and the picture is less encouraging on the other side, where so many women with health impaired by foolish dressing, improper diet and violations of the laws of nature, maintain an army of medical practitioners. It is only among civilized peoples that women are less healthful than men. Let doctors and the common surmise tell why this is so. The fact remains that there may be seen on the streets of Chicago twenty strong, handsome men above the age of 30 to one woman. The woman who is able to retain her youthful comeliness beyond 30 is the exception. Good looking men of middle or even advanced age are as common as flagstones, while a handsome matron is almost a curiosity.—Chicago Herald.

Pastel Painting in England.

Pastel painting is once more finding patrons in England. The splendid portraits which Alfred Stevens lately exhibited in Brussels were enough to make fashionable people eager to revive the art. In Paris there is a society of pastel painters. One of the members, M. Lacaze, has discovered a process by which permanency is insured to the colors, and it has received the official approval of the society. Hitherto a fixing process has always diminished the beauty of the colors, and hence pastel painting, having to depend on the crayons alone, was restricted to countries where there are fewer atmospheric changes than in England.—Home Journal.

THE VIRGIN HEART OF BEROE.

The wind blown dewy morn was fair
Upon a far Arcadian height;
The freshness of the fragrant air
Brought old visions, golden bright,
Of song filled eve and tranced night,
Of rhythmic dance on lawn, on lea,
And brimmed with floods of fond delight
The virgin heart of Beroe.

She quite forgot her daily care,
The flock with fleeces snowy white
That strayed along the hillside where
Sweet singing birds took spiral flight;
Below, her keenly, eager sight
Descried, with footsteps fleet and free,
One came who held his dearest right
The virgin heart of Beroe.

They met with smiles of rapture rare
An kisses such as lovers plight;
The hidden fauns who saw them there
Laughed softly at the comely wight,
Watching red lip with lip unite
In love's untiring ecstasy,
But stirred not, lest the sound affright
The virgin heart of Beroe.

ENVOY.

Oh, love, in pity hear my prayer
As his of old in Arcady,
Be mine that prize beyond compare,
The virgin heart of Beroe.

—Clinton Scollard in Pittsburg Bulletin.

Marvelous Instance of Make Up.

One of the most marvelous instances of artistic make up ever seen upon the stage was that of the late Charlotte Cushman in "Meg Merrilies." To those in the audience she looked like an ordinary wrinkled old woman, but see her close to upon the stage and one could not but be surprised at the amount of labor and fine artistic powers displayed in bringing out the desired effect. In the work of making up her face, Miss Cushman would spend at least an hour. Close to, the touches of varying, and various coloring here and there would look broad and uneffective, while the remarkable lines running all about the face and neck were coarse and unmeaning. At the distance of a few feet, however, they all blended into one harmonious whole, and formed such a network of delicate wrinkles, out of which the deeply sunken eyes shown forth with a species of dying brilliancy, as to be a perfect picture of old age, and as startling to the beholder as it was highly effective in a dramatic point of view.—Boston Herald.

Live Diamonds of Manila.

Mr. Alexander R. Webb, United States consul at Manila, Philippine Islands, thinks the Manila fire fly far ahead of any lightning bug he ever saw in St. Louis. "The Manila lightning bug," he says, "is really a gem in his way. He gives a continuous, twinkling light that looks almost as large as a hazelnut and resembles an electric spark. There is a peculiar kind of tree here that grows in wet places, for which these bugs have a preference, and sometimes they almost cover them, so that the tree resembles a cone, dotted thickly with large electric sparks. The sight is a very beautiful one. I am told that sometimes ladies attend balls and receptions with numbers of these bugs on their heads, covered with a thin veil, and that they shine like diamonds in the dark corners of the room."—St. Louis Republican.

The Odd Little Leaf Ant.

One of the oddest little creatures in nature is the leaf ant of Nicaragua. It is from three-fourths of an inch to an inch in length, and shaped like a common ant. These little creatures, when at work, always carry a leaf, so that a squad of them looks like a little army with banners, and they fite up one side of a path about a foot wide, and may be scores of feet long, while the ants that have thrown their load at the store house take the other side and have no banners at all. Everything moves along like clockwork. There are the commanding officers, the lieutenants and everything just like skilled soldiery. They are said to be remarkably skillful engineers.—Chicago Herald.

We Are Too Busy.

Amid the hurly-burly, I make bold to declare that the surest, quickest and most sensible way to cure a cold is to go to bed and stay there. All other methods are dubious, slow, and often even dangerous. But not one American in fifty will apply that best of remedies. We are too busy. We would rather risk losing our whole life than lose a single day. Therein we are fools.—Commercial Advertiser.

Eating Elephant's Flesh.

The lower class of the Burmese people are very fond of elephant's flesh, cutting it up in long strips and drying these in the sun in a somewhat similar fashion as the buccaneers of old preserved pieces of beef and fish. This dried meat is eaten without being cooked, and is much relished. It is sometimes pounded in a wooden mortar to be more easy of mastication for the aged.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

A French Flower Farm.

A French flower farm of about seventeen acres was planted with 45,000 tufts of violets and 140,000 roots of the white jasmine, with roses, pelargoniums, tuberoses and jonquils. A laboratory was erected for the manufacture of perfumes, and in the fourth year after planting lucrative results were obtained.—Boston Budget.

Lightning's Zigzag Course.

Professor W. Mattieu Williams offers as a better explanation than the old one of zigzag course of lightning, that, owing to variations of moisture, the conducting power of different portions of air is variable, and the electric discharge follows the course of least resistance.—Public Opinion.

The Ocean's Story.

The story of the deep sea is an expensive one. The cost of compiling and publishing the reports of the Challenger expedition is said to have already exceeded £200,000, the work being still unfinished. —Arkansaw Traveler.

A solution of common salt or sulphate of soda in water, making a strong brine, forms a good homemade fire extinguisher, and such solutions do not freeze easily.

The desire of more and more rises by a natural gradation to most, and after that to all.—L'Estrange.

Mrs. Dart's Triplets.

President Cleveland's Prize for the three best babies at the Aurora County Fair, in 1887, was given to these triplets, Mollie, Ida, and Ray, children of Mrs. A. K. Dart, Hamburgh, N. Y. She writes: "Last August the little ones became very sick, and as I could get no other food that would agree with them, I commenced the use of Lactated Food. It helped them immediately, and they were soon as well as ever, and I consider it very largely due to the Food that they are now so well." Lactated Food is the best Food for bottle-fed babies. It keeps them well, and is better than medicine when they are sick. Three sizes: 25c., 50c., $1.00. At druggists. Cabinet photo. of these triplets sent free to the mother of any baby born this year. FOR PRESIDENT,

BENJAMIN HARRISON

OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

LEVI P. MORTON

OF NEW YORK.

Gubernatorial.

The democrats view with alarm the uncertainty as to the nomination of a candidate for governor by the republicans. The republican convention will solve this problem. Let the democrats abide in peace. It they will put in an appearance at Concord next June, they will find the nominee in the governor's chair. It is just as well not to become excited during the warm term, upon probabilities as to the coming man.

Of course much of their apparent solicitude is derived from their interest in the kind of a man the republicans will select, and the effect of this designation upon the plans and projects of the contending clans in the democracy on the railroad issue.

In the meantime, the republicans are not at all solicitous as to the democratic nominee. The honor of course belongs to Col. Thomas Coggswell. It is understood that he is not likely to voluntarily waive his rights in this respect. He is not just the man whom some of his party wish to see nominated, not to suggest elected, but any move to dethrone Thomas from his high pedestal of nomination will be followed by a revolt which would prove disastrous to the fortunes of the party. The general belief is that the powers which control have reluctantly concluded to go for Coggswell and harmony. Upon this question more anxious cares have clouded the democratic mind than solicitude as to the republican nominee. They concede the importance, however, of pretending to G. C. that it is essential to the party's success that the democracy should nominate the right man for governor.

Cleveland and "Reform."

The New York Tribune of July 23d devoted four pages to setting forth the record of the present administration on civil service reform. After showing up Mr. Cleveland as a civil service reformer, it says that the evidence quoted, showing how he has disregarded his pledges, is mainly from democratic sources. Official statements more than a year ago showed that above four-fifths of the officials under President Cleveland had been changed during his administration. The changes during the past year have substantially finished this "complete partisan reconstruction."

Undoubtedly much more than nine-tenths of the officials are men selected by Mr. Cleveland, and selected because they are democrats. This savory list includes two murderers and the tools of two others, five notorious duellists and three rioters. It includes five persons who had been indicted or convicted for frauds against the revenue, appointed revenue officers. It includes a jury fixer, a dead beat, a lawyer guilty of defrauding clients, and an attorney who had cleared notorious bandits by contriving a defeat of justice, all appointed to be judges.

Persons have been apointed pension agents who had been indicted for violating pension laws. Persons proved guilty of robbing the mails have been appointed postmasters or mail agents. Liquor sellers, their sons or attorneys have been appointed internal revenue officials. An impeached state treasurer, defrauding county and town treasurers, seven forgers, and men guilty of robbery, embezzlement, theft, malfeasance, tapping a church till, grand larceny, bribery, obtaining money under false pretences, of a printing steal, a mileage steal, and a patient fraud, of keeping gambling houses and houses of resort for the vile of both sexes, of assault and battery, fist fighting and insulting women, of assaulting a lady temperance lecturer with a club, of wife-beating, blackmailing and selling offices and selling official information, with an editor of a rogue's paper and a Brooklyn police officer who was dismissed for arresting in her bed at two A. M. a sick woman against whom there was no charge, and compelling her to walk a mile to a station — all are chosen instruments of "reform."

The war-cry of the democrats in the last presidential campaign was "turn the rascals out." They utterly failed to find the rascals in office to turn out, when they got control of the governmental machinery; but the republicans well know just where to look for them when the party resumes power on the 4th of March next.

But this showing up of the reform administration will not suffice to alienate the mugwumps of the George Wm. Curtis stripe from its support. Although it has so far failed as a reform administration as to turn the rascals in, it has been a good British administration from the start, and its proclaimed determination to give up our markets to the British manufacturers is enough to condone all other possible sins.

Gen. Sheridan's physicians report him as being steadily on the gain.

An associated press despatch of July 23d says; Great Falls is excited at the present time over the supposed elopement of Emery J. Randall, paymaster and treasurer of the Great Falls Manufacturing company, a prominent citizen, and Mrs. Juliet Worcester, wife of William A. Worcester. The parties left Great Falls week before last, Mrs. Worcester saying she was going to Europe and Mr. Randall on a short fishing vacation. Mrs. Worcester is worth $75,000 to $100,000. Randall leaves a wife and two daughters. It is supposed the couple have gone to Europe. An auditor is examining Randall's accounts, but it is not thought he is short."

Two burglars giving the names of Charles Moore of Gorham and Jacob Freedman of Detroit, were arrested in Portland July 23d, and a fine kit of burglars' tools captured. Moore shot at four or five persons while being pursued.

A man seventy-two years old, who was run over in Boston on the 5th inst., by a carriage driven by Miss Sarah Harvey, has died of his injuries, and the woman is held in $10,000 on a charge of manslaughter.

Gen. Thos. M. Young of Cincinnati, who served during the late war, was lieutenant governor on the ticket with Governor Hayes, and afterward a member of congress, is dead.

Mother (who with her little boy is dining at a friend's) —"Johnnie, I'm really ashamed of you. You never behave so badly at home." Johnnie—"I know it, ma; but when I have a chance at a good dinner like this I'm apt to get excited."

"Now, Tommy," said the teacher, sternly, "if you are not a better boy I shall certainly have to punish you. See how quiet Willie Waffles is." "Yes'm," replied Tommy; "he expects to get a lickin' when he goes home for striking his little sister."
